PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

IN the first edition of this dictionary, published in 1916, there were 17,000 similes, 1865 names in the index of authors, and 3465 subject headings. In this edition there have been added 2300 similes; 540 new authors have been added to the index, and there are 1200 new subject headings. The new matter will be found at the end of the volume.

The new index takes in all the old as well as the new matter, and the dates of birth and death of each author are given, together with dates of issue of anonymous poems, plays, and books. It will be noted that many of the ladies have stars after their names, indicating that no biographical data were available. It is necessary, it would appear, to catch an authoress young, else she refuses to divulge her age. One to whom I lately wrote for the date of her birth, replied: "Just write me down as 'twenty-nine-by-candle-light.'" A distinguished librarian of my acquaintance has suggested, when asking a lady author for her natal year, to threaten, if she refuses, to place after her name: "Ante-Civil War." Such means might fetch them; but such unkindness could not well be thought of outside of a Public Library.

It was pointed out in the preface to the first edition, that each event of world-wide interest, whether it be some invention, the introduction of some new style, a trend of thought or of manners, has usually led to the making of novel similes. The reader, so inclined, will discover in the added matter that there has been no change in this tendency. And it may be observed, furthermore, that much of the best wit and humor of the time finds its way into simile form.

Those who have had experience with type are aware of its satanic persistence towards error, and so the effort to provide approximate correctness in the text of this dictionary has been an arduous one. When it is said, ordinarily, that a line has been misquoted, it all depends upon which text has been accepted as final. One would imagine that the question of accuracy might be determined by consulting the first edition of an author's work. Considering that the first printing of any book is almost certain to be well sprinkled with mistakes, the frailty of this bland reliance will be apparent. And when it is taken into account that new errors are often made in correcting old ones and that authors have a habit of making changes from edition to edition, it will be seen that the maker of a Dictionary of Similes often has reason to be sorely perplexed.

But there are other curious and astonishing ways and means of providing annoyances. Take David Mallet's lovely couplet as an example:

"Her face was like the April morn Clad in a wintry cloud."

These verses are to be found credited both to David Mallet and Vincent Bourne. The occasion for attributing them to Vincent Bourne is a curious one. The lines are to be found on page 212, in the 1743 edition of David Mallet's works. Along came Vincent Bourne, who translated the poem in which they appear into Latin, with the title "Thyrsis et Chloe." This Latin text is to be found on page 44 in the 1838 edition of Vincent Bourne's works. Some one then translated the Latin back into English, evidently overlooking the original authorship, and the deed was done.

There are, too, a number of similes to be met with, here and there, attributed to Shakespeare which are not to be found in his plays or his poems. The reason for this is not far to seek. Cibber, Tate, Garrick, and others, not entirely satisfied with the Bard as a dramatist, brought out revisions of the text and introduced new matter; and out of this came the spurious similes.

The correct spelling of names is still another occasion for lamentations. While the Elizabethans spelled their names with surprising variety — Shakespeare having spelled his name in a dozen or more different ways; Raleigh and others with equal diversity — these have finally been stabilized. Among modern writers, Gilbert Abbott À Beckett, the author of "The Comic History of England", for one, outdoes any of the Elizabethans. I have found his name in various books of reference, including the author's own published works, spelled in fourteen different ways. Moreover, writers other than the ladies have a way of changing their names that is often disconcerting, vide: Theodore Watts, who late in life affixed Dutton; and Ernest Seton Thompson, who turned his surname around and made it Ernest Thompson Seton.

Authors, too, whose names are identical are likely to get one into various temperatures of hot water. John Smith affixed to a quotation can mean little to a student without the date of birth and death, and for the reason that there has been a regiment of this name who have made their way into print. Then there have been three important Samuel Butlers; and as for John Browns, they are legion. Even Samuel Johnson without dates, after a name, may lead one far afield, for there were three in the eighteenth century: Doctor Samuel, the lexicographer; Samuel, commonly known as Maggoty or Fiddler, and quite a personage in his way; and that other Samuel, known as the doughty Whig. As in the first edition, where there could be any confusion on account of duplication, the date of birth and death has been given. It must be taken into account, also, that the ancients in this particular present some knotty problems. There were, for example, two Platos, one the philosopher, and the other a comic poet, both born the same year, 427 B.C. We are likewise confronted with two Senecas, one the orator and the other the philosopher, both living at Rome at the same time, and both with the same forename. One finds Bion affixed to quotations when, in point of fact there were Bion of Smyrna, Greek bucolic poet, fl. B.C. 280; Bion, Scythian philosopher, fl. B.C. 250; and Bion, Greek philosopher, fl. B.C. 241. It is pretty much a matter, as the saying goes, of paying your money and taking your choice.

I was greatly surprised on the publication of this dictionary to discover that so little was known of those renowned and prolific authors Anon and Ibid. Indeed, I had many letters saying that they could not be identified even after deep and plodding research. That such voluminous writers as Messrs. Anonymous and Ibidem should have so limited an acquaintanceship, despite their generally recognized talent, was indeed a matter for wonderment.

At the same time several reviewers expressed the fear that general use of this dictionary might incite the intellectual lacunæ to a slavish reliance. Such a contingency need not have been feared, nor has it been justified, except, possibly, in the case of musical comedy librettists. Certainly it was not my purpose to provide a grabbag out of which stencilled intellects might snatch tinselled phrases, scented sentiments, and jewelled periods.

Artists visit galleries, not for the purpose of making slavish copies of the masters, but rather to study technique. Collections of phrases, whether they be dictionaries of poetic or prose quotations, of proverbs, or of similes, may reasonably be regarded by literary artists as galleries where they may ramble, and possibly be tempted to originality. This dictionary, however, was not designed as a crutch for the dullard, but rather as a yeast for the platitudinarian.

It was noted in the first preface that I had not been able to discover, among other similes, the author of, "Noisy as a living skeleton having a fit on a hardwood floor." I have lately found that this simile appeared in an account of a baseball game, written by Leonard Washburn, in the eighties, for the since defunct Chicago Inter-Ocean. Washburn, who died in 1891, was one of the first of the baseball writers who injected humor into their reports. Another simile from his pen was of the sun-kissed Captain Anson: "His eyes were like twin daisies in a bucket of blood." It should not be overlooked, however, that Mark Twain had already pointed the way to sport writers. In describing a ball game, he wrote that one of the players "Threw himself on his stomach to slide to his base; it was like an iron-clad coming into port." One of the most picturesque baseball similes of late times was that by Heywood Broun — who, describing a heavy-footed base runner, in a so-called "World Series", wrote, "He ran the bases as if he was hauling William H. Taft in a rickshaw." Then a Philadelphia team was described by another sport writer as "Having about as much chance as a woodpecker making a nest in a concrete telephone pole." And a local hero of the diamond was said to have "a face like a jar of warts."

Not to be outdone, the scriveners of fisticuffs have not lagged far behind. Some unknown genius is quoted by Henry Seidel Canby, in his "English Composition in Theory and Practice", "As the exhausted prizefighter sat on his second's knee, his head dangled about like a poppy in a shower." Another pugilist was said, after a battle, to have "looked as though he had stuck his head into a bag full of cats, to see who was there." In Cincinnati a fighter was said to "have gone down like a letter in a mail chute." A champion was defeated, and his punishment was as "cruel as the pinch of a painless dentist."

It is very likely that never before in the history of sport has there been anything comparable to the rhetorical cataclysm that followed the historic meeting of Messrs. Willard and Dempsey at Toledo, Ohio, on July 4th, 1919. Mr. Frank Moran, the distinguished literary luminary of the "squared circle", also lent the charm of the simile to his compositions, for on the day before the famous Dempsey-Willard event he clicked off on his typewriter that "Willard showed a tenseness and a timorousness as well as a qui vive that was noticeable for its absence." Nor could any possible fault have been found with Mr. Tom O'Rourke's style, he having also remarked the day before the 1919 event that "Dempsey fighting Willard is like a bull trying to butt a locomotive off the track." This was a bad guess by Mr. O'Rourke, but a happy figure of speech. Mr. "Bugs" Bear said after the event, "Willard had about as much chance as a dishfaced chimpanzee in a beauty contest." Harry C. Witwer said that Dempsey "hits like an epileptic pile driver." According to Percy Hammond, when Dempsey started in on Willard's stomach and jaw, the sound thereof was "like rain dropping on a tin roof"; also, in a minute that "Willard looked like something the cat had brought in." Finally, Kerr N. Petrie reported that around the ringside there were many interesting personalities who "had ears like mangled doughnuts"; and the distinguished "Tad" discovered that Dempsey's brother at the ringside wore "a shirt that looked like a sea lion." The report that the contest between the gentlemen was a "frame-up" caused Mr. Witwer to remark, "If it was, so was the battle of the Marne."

One does not have to wander far afield, however, to find diverting and trenchant similes on almost any subject one might select, such, for example, as war and politics. Homer and Shakespeare have provided many memorable specimens, as one may easily discover. A famous simile has come down to us attributed to Frederick the Great: "An army, like a snake, goes upon its belly." And so also Marshal Saxe: "Soldiers are like cloaks,—one thinks of us only when it rains." Tom Brown had a like thought, stated in a different way: "Though a soldier in peace is like a chimney in summer, yet what wise man would pluck down his chimney because his almanac told him it was the middle of June." The late World War brought forth many picturesque similes. Coningsby Dawson said, "The guns begin to stamp like stallions." R. Hugh Knyvett, speaking of the gibbering of the various nationalities, said it was "like a gramophone-shop gone crazy." Describing a machine gun in action, Ian Hay Beath wrote that it made a noise "like a giant tearing calico." And Charles W. Baker said that "The German shells were coming down like rice at a wedding." Turning to politics, it will be found that the Democrats have been rather severely dealt with. "Brick" Pomeroy remarked that "It didn't last him as long as a ten dollar bill would a Democrat the night before election." And George W. Peck said that something came "down on him like a newly elected Republican President on a Democratic postmaster." "Bitter," writes Abe Martin, "as a disappointed Democrat." General Benjamin F. Butler declared that "The Democratic party is like a man riding backward in a carriage. It never sees a thing until it is gone by." Finally, Thomas Riley Marshall, while Vice-President of the United States, said his office was "like a man in a cataleptic state: he cannot speak; he cannot move; he suffers no pain, and yet he is perfectly conscious of everything that is going on about him."

It is matter of regret by the compiler, that since the first edition of this dictionary was published, he has not been able to enjoy a larger leisure for research, not only among the classics, but in modern literature. There has been no society of simile hunters to supplement his labors, so he has plodded on alone and, it is hoped, to some little purpose. It may here be said, also, that there has been as cordial a welcome for the colloquial simile as for those which were discovered in old and forgotten tomes. There is a disposition, however, among the long-haired contingent, who "hold high the banner of the ideal", to lament any contact with the present, — an attitude that looks upon whatever is old as golden and whatever is new as gilt. Such a state of mind is certain to lead to literary dry-rot. Because a simile has been discovered in an ephemeral contribution to the press, makes it none the less interesting. Witness a few that have lately come to hand:

Grave but satisfied, like a widower.

Flabbergasting as the amorous glances of a lady embalmer.

Surprised as a sardine that went to sleep in the ocean and woke up in a delicatessen store.

With nearly six hundred pages to select from, it is not necessary to multiply examples. Meanwhile, the making of similes goes on endlessly from day to day, — new ideas inviting novel and stimulating turns of thought.

PREFACE

THE simile is one of the most ancient forms of speech. It is the handmaid of all early word records. It has proved itself essential to every form of human utterance.

If our first parents had had a Boswell, many similes which are now in general use would be known as having been current in the Garden of Eden. Undoubtedly, on many occasions, Father Adam, when addressing Mother Eve, made use of "Cold as ice", "Busy as a bee", "Proud as a peacock", "Weak as water", "Angry as a wasp", and "Bitter as gall." With reliable data, many a simile which is now marked Anon. would be credited to Adam.

In the absence of a Boswell, however, we have other authorities who testify that Father Adam and Mother Eve made frequent use of similes in their Garden conversation. As Moses, in his brief account of creation, failed to report the talks of our first parents, we are deprived of his testimony; but what Moses overlooked, John Milton and Elizabeth Barrett Browning have supplied.

Some of the most familiar similes in general use are to be found in the Old Testament. Among them are: "Multiply as the stars of heaven", "Unstable as water", "Still as a stone", "White as snow", "Swifter than a weaver's shuttle", "Boil like a pot", "Firm as a stone", "Melted like wax", "Sharp as a two-edged sword", and "Bitter as wormwood." The Songs of Solomon are a rich mine of similes; including, "Thy lips are like a thread of scarlet", "Thy neck is like the tower of David builded for an armoury", "Thy teeth are like a flock of sheep that are even shorn, which came up from the washing", and "Cruel as the grave."

From many other sources the antiquity of the simile is proved. In the time of Rameses II of Egypt, 1292-1225 B.C., according to Breasted's "History of Egypt", the Poem of Pentaur was written. The Heroic Theban poet's work was so highly prized that it was carved on the temple walls in hard stone. Pentaur was not ignorant of the simile. Thus he speaks of Pharaoh:

"His heart is firm, his courage is like that of the god of war."

"His courage is firm, like that of a bull."

"The King is dreadful as the grim lion in the valley."

"He appeared like the sun-god at his rising in the early morn."

Of Seti, the father of Rameses II, an unlocked inscription says: "He is as a jackal which rushed prowling through the land, as a grim lion that frequents hidden paths, as a powerful bull with sharpened horns." Now this Rameses, Ramses, or Ramessu, was that Pharaoh who oppressed the Israelites, the father of the princess who found the child Moses hid among the bulrushes.

Homer, Virgil, Horace, and all the ancient writers, abound in similes; but the first to confine his literary expression to the making of similes alone was a Pythagorean philosopher, Demophilus, whose history is little known. His work, "Life's Culture and Conduct", is extant only in portions which are in the form of selections called "Dialectic Similitudes." The first known edition of the work was printed in 1638. There were five editions in the seventeenth century, three in the eighteenth, and one in the nineteenth century. There is an interesting reference to Demophilus in "The Phoenix", described as "a collection of old and rare fragments", published by William Gowans, New York, 1835:

"Demophilus appears to have enjoyed the dignity of archon at Athens, where it was no unusual thing for the character of magistrate and philosopher to be united in the same person. Respecting the time when he lived, it is impossible to arrive at an absolute certainty. The most probable conjecture is that he flourished about the beginning of the Christian era, and prior to the reign of the Emperor Marcus Antoninus. Such of his writings as are extant have come down to us in company with the philosophical works of Maximus Tyrius. Whether they owe their preservation to the latter philosopher having, from his conviction of their excellence, appended them to his own writings, is, though not unlikely, impossible to determine."

Thus the making of similes has gone on from age to age. The New Testament is not so prolific in the use of this figure of speech as the Old; but the writers of the New had a way, not unknown to the Old, of repeating the same similes many times. Not only that, but many that are found in the Old reappear in the New Testament.

Since the very beginning of English literature, the simile has been a favorite figure of speech. This is particularly true of the English writings which obtained before the time of Elizabeth, and all of the great Elizabethans made happy use of it.

This volume, so far as I have been able to ascertain, is the first attempt to collect the best similes from English, as well as from all other literatures. It was not until the present collection was finished that I found Demophilus had several rivals. There was one collection of similes made in the sixteenth century, and three during the seventeenth. These books are:

(1) Certaines very proper and most profitable similes, also manie very notable virtues. Anthonie Fletcher, London, 1595.

(2) A treasure or store-house of similies: both pleasant, delightful, and profitable, for all estates of men in generall. Newly collected into heades and common-places: by Robert Cawdray, London, 1600.

(3) A century of Similes, Thomas Shelton, London, 1640.

(4) Things new and old; or a store-house of Similes, John Spencer, 1658.

Of these four books, three, namely, Anthonie Fletcher's, Robert Cawdray's, and John Spencer's, are in the Library of Congress. Only one, John Spencer's, which is a reprint, is in the New York Public Library. All four are to be found in the British Museum. I have been able to examine three of the four books, missing that compiled by Thomas Shelton. The three I have seen are not, as the titles suggest, collections of similes, but are religious dissertations. Of the three, Robert Cawdray's is the only one with a savor of humor. There is, indeed, some justification for stating on his title page: "Similes: both pleasant, delightful, and profitable." By turning to the index, and examining some of the similes taken from his book, the reader will discover that while Robert Cawdray was an uncompromising "devil-chaser", he was possessed, at times, with a pungent wit. His statement, "Newly collected into heades", does not, as one might suppose, mean that he had collected the similes of the great writers of England up to his time; but merely that they are his own original efforts. His quotations are taken almost entirely from the scriptures. John Spencer appears to have known nothing of Chaucer, Spenser, Shakespeare, or Butler. In fact, his book shows that he was intimately acquainted only with the ecclesiastical writers of his time.

Perhaps some student of literature, — a hundred years hence, — will turn to this book to discover if I were acquainted in any degree with some writer now unknown to fame, but whose name will then be on everybody's lips! This, to me at least, is an interesting speculation. Who will then be remembered? Will it be George Ade or Henry James; O. Henry or Mrs. Humphry Ward; Joseph Conrad or George Meredith; Alfred Henry Lewis or Ambrose Bierce; Maurice Hewlett or Walter Pater; John Davidson or Rudyard Kipling? Robert Cawdray, in ignoring Shakespeare, — and indeed all the great Elizabethan writers, — thus missed his chance for a niche in the Temple of Fame.

The first to make a collection of similes was John Ray, botanist and miscellaneous writer. His "A Collection of English Proverbs" was published in 1670, and there have been many subsequent editions. It was not Ray's purpose to group together the proverbs and incidentally the similes to be found in English literature, but rather those in colloquial use by the people of England. The "Proverbial Similes" which he collected comprise but eight and a half pages of the two hundred and eighty, of the fifth edition of his book. Many of those gathered by Ray are of a character too gross for modern taste, while others are of a distinctly local character. Other collectors added many which came into general use after Ray's time; but all avoided making use of similes to be found in the works of the writers of preceding ages. The first to overcome this reluctance was Vincent Stuckey Lean, whose great work, "Lean's Collectanea", in five volumes, was published at Bristol, England, in 1903. A part of the second volume of this erudite compilation is given over to "A New Treasury of Similes." Lean not only embodied in his work all of the similes to be found in the various books of proverbs, but added very many from the old English writers. It is evident that he had a very considerable Elizabethan library to delve in; but, oddly enough, he made use of but three modern similes, — one each from Dickens, Tennyson, and George Eliot. Of the four simile books mentioned, Lean knew of but one, and that by Robert Cawdray.

I began this Dictionary of Similes in 1894. It did not occur to me at once that there might be any particular need for such a book, — nor had George Moore yet written: "It is hard to find a simile when one is seeking for one." One day in the spring of that year, when in Boston, I was looking over the morning papers and, being interested in some incident at the State House, read that "the news spread like wildfire." Having noted the coincidence of all the newspapers using this simile, and having observed its frequent use in the press, I asked a journalistic acquaintance if there was no substitute for "spread like wildfire." He replied that he had never heard of news spreading in any other way. My curiosity aroused, I stepped into the bookstore of Little, Brown & Company, then located in Washington Street, near the Globe newspaper office, and asked for a "Dictionary of Similes." The clerk looked in vain over the shelves; then, having fumbled through the leaves of a huge volume, returned with the information that such a book had never been published. As I was actively engaged at the time, I had then no intention of supplying the apparent omission. But from that day I began to copy into a large blank book the similes in every book I read. Finding this collection of use to others, as well as to myself, it occurred to me that as opportunity presented I would begin with Chaucer and gather all the useful and picturesque similes from all of the important poets and prose writers, down to the present time. It seemed an endless undertaking; but I pursued the work with growing interest and delight. As my occupation during the intervening years took me back and forth from New York to San Francisco and hither and thither to all parts of the country, much of the work was done on railroad trains, and many an evening hour was spent in the libraries of Boston, Washington, Chicago, Detroit, Cincinnati, New Orleans, St. Louis, and other cities.

Victor Hugo, in "Les Misérables", tells of an old man who never went out without a book, and who seldom came back without two. This has a humorous application to myself. Year after year I have carried about with me some volume or other on which I had set my covetous eyes, hoping during an idle moment in a busy day to rifle it of its similes. And often, like the character in "Les Misérables", I have ventured forth with a single volume and returned with a precious arm-load. So this work has been carried on through sheer love of the chase.

To shake all the similes, as leaves from the forest, of English Literature would be a task beyond the possibilities of one human life. Therefore, such a collection must necessarily be incomplete, except in so far as the great masters are concerned, and to have excluded the best from modern writers would have deprived such a collection of very much of its interest and charm. I have not been influenced by the reputation of any contemporary writer; but have selected those similes which seemed really worth while.

When I came to collate the similes under headings, — similes collected during nearly a quarter of a century, and from thousands of volumes, — I discovered that there were hundreds of duplicates. So, I credited the simile to that writer who was the one farthest back in point of time. When any simile was used by a group of authors of the same age, through necessity I have marked it anonymous.

In numerous instances, it will be discovered that I have given credit for many similes to authors far back in the reaches of time which are usually attributed to modern writers. There is no certainty, of course, that many of these similes were really original with the authors to whom they are credited. To have examined the writings of all authors would have been an impossibility. While I have been able to find many an apt simile as having been used hundreds of years before any collector has so far discovered them, I have no doubt I shall find, in time, that many similes in this Dictionary, credited to a modern writer, have been "picked from the worm holes of old time."

Although I have drag-netted the ocean, as well as the numerous narrow streams and wide rivers of literature, for similes, many a rare and curious specimen has doubtless escaped me. Had all been secured this collection would be of too great a size for general use.

To discover the authorship of many curious similes has been a matter of long quest. Here are three examples: "Cold as an enthusiastic New England audience", "Noisy as a living skeleton having a fit on a hardwood floor", and "About as much privacy as a goldfish." The first of these I had from the lips of James Whitcomb Riley, in 1886. But when I lately wrote to the Hoosier poet and asked him if he were its father, he disclaimed ever having heard of the child. Years ago, I noted that Opie Read had been given credit for "Noisy as a living skeleton having a fit on a hardwood floor"; but Mr. Read, some years back, denied the authorship. On the other hand, Irvin S. Cobb informs me that he accepts all blame for having made merry with the privacy of the goldfish.

Much of an interesting nature might be said on the subjects chosen for similes during different periods. This will be apparent to any reader who has curiosity enough to examine this volume. Nature it will readily be observed, had well nigh the sole appeal for the ancients, — for Homer and Virgil particularly. As we come down to modern times, we find that new and novel inventions have been seized upon as means for comparison. Byron, shortly after the introduction of gas for illumination in the playhouse, wrote in "Don Juan":

"Grand a sight
As is a theatre lit up by gas."

Then came the adding machine, and Oliver Wendell Holmes made use of Mr. Babbage's calculating machine as a comparison for certainty; Morgan Robertson wrote "Faint as the voice of the telephone", and, lately, a play was advertised as "Crackling with wit like a Marconi." Then too, — "Sly as a submarine." The moving picture also furnishes interesting examples. Its first form was the magic lantern. Thomas Moore made use of it:

"But now 'a change came o'er my dream,'
Like the magic lantern's shifting slider."

The next invention was the diorama, and we have George Eliot saying: "Shifts its scenes like a diorama." Finally, when the moving picture was perfected, William Archer wrote: "Feverishly accelerate, like the movements we see in the cinematograph."

It would be unwise to credit a dramatist with a simile used in a play, for the reason that actors have, more especially in musical comedy, a way of introducing some happy phrase with or without the author's consent. It is astonishing how quickly a simile heard in a play will come into current use. Not long ago I overheard two persons talking in a street car, and one said: "It was as cruel as a barren stepmother's slap." I had no notion that this was an original phrase with the person in the street car. That night I went to see a play by Lady Gregory, and then discovered the source of the simile; the authoress, however, had written not "cruel", but "Hard as a barren stepmother's slap."

From earliest time poets have been remarkable for their intimate acquaintance with the solar system. Astronomers themselves could hardly have made so many observations on the sun, the moon, and the stars, — the moon particularly. Also, the bards, when in need of a simile, have been free in their use of the boundless ocean, and with the rippling brook as well. The flowers of the fields, the birds of the air, — of the latter the eagle being easily the favorite, — have graphically served their purpose. While the moon shows signs of waning popularity, the eagle retains an undiminished favor. Indeed, the poets have so delighted in similes that they have written whole poems, every line a simile. A small volume might easily be made of this species of poetistic ingenuity, — the most curious example being the one devised by John Gay.

Thomas Hood, in his poem "The Tale of the Trumpet", relates the adventures of an "old woman hard of hearing", in which he rings the changes on the simile "deaf as a post." By way of novelty, Sterne began the fifteenth chapter of "Tristram Shandy" with a simile, and added, — "I don't think the comparison a bad one:"

"An eye is, for all the world, exactly like a cannon, in this respect, That it is not so much the eye or the cannon, in themselves, as it is the carriage of the eye, and the carriage of the cannon; by which both the one and the other are enabled to do so much execution."

In the use of similes, Chaucer, Shakespeare, Spenser, Shelley and Swinburne were the most profuse. Of these, Swinburne, easily led the others in this form of expression. In fact there is hardly a page of his works that does not contain from one to three similes. The poet who made the smallest use of the simile was Walt Whitman.

I have taken the liberty, rather broadly, of including in this book, as an aid for reference, a number of comparisons from various sources which would not technically come under the definition of simile. There is, of course, a thin shade of difference, but one overlooked by many grammarians. However, when one can, without undue license, enlarge the usefulness of a book of reference there is no necessity of allowing research to be embarrassed by unimportant breaches of definition. The reader will find, I trust, the few comparisons in this dictionary quite as welcome as the out and out similes.

To achieve anything like correctness in quotation has proved, at times, a most perplexing matter, for the reason that the texts of many of the poets have undergone, from editor to editor, various alterations. With Shakespeare, because of the imperfect First Folio, this was necessary. But, in tampering with the text of the First Folio, there have been many curious revisions, or new readings, well known to students of the Bard. The most singular to come under my observation appears in the Blair edition of Shakespeare, which, according to its editor, J. Talfourd Blair, was "Carefully edited and compared with the best text." In this volume one may read:

"How sharper than a servant's tooth it is To have a thankless child."

In this case we may well rely upon the First Folio, which has it "serpent's", not "servant's" tooth.

The ideal method would have been to select only those editions of the classics which have acquired authority. But this has been quite impossible, for I have had to accept whatever I have been able to lay hands on, for my purpose. In making verifications there have been disclosed many discrepancies. Take, for example, Thomas Campbell's verse:

"Like angel visits, few and far between."

The words "angel visits" are often printed as a compound word, but in Hoyt's "Cyclopedia of Practical Quotations", in one place they are printed as two words, and in another hyphenated.

Storms have raged around Robert Burns' best-known simile, beginning: "But pleasures are like poppies spread." These verses appeared first in Francis Grose's "Antiquities of Scotland", (London, 1791), volume 2, page: 199-201, as follows:

"But pleasures are like poppies spread,
You seize the flower, its bloom is shed;
Or like the snow falls in the river,
A moment white — then melts for ever;

Or like the borealis race,
That flit ere you can point their place;
Or like the rainbow's lovely form,
Evanishing amid the storm."

Chambers printed the couplet :

"Or like the snowfall in the river,
A moment white —then melts for ever."

But it will be observed that Burns had it "snow falls", not "snowfall." The ever careful John Bartlett changed the third verse, making it read :

"Or, like the snow-fall in the river."

Several editors have arbitrarily made the line read "Like snow falls on the river." But Douglas says in his edition of 1877: "We suspect that Burns would have preferred: "Like snowflakes on the river."

In conclusion I would quote the final passage of Thomas Fuller's preface to John Spencer's "Things new and old, or a store-house of Similes": "But the reader will catch cold, by keeping him too long in the porch of the Preface, who now (the door being opened) may enter into the house itself."

FRANK J. WILSTACH.

A DICTIONARY OF SIMILES

Abandon.

Abandoned, like the waves we leave behind us. — DONALD G. MITCHELL.

Abate.

Abate, like a flame grown moderate. — ROBERT HERRICK.

Abide.

The sweet-laden thoughts come, like bees, to abide in his heart as a hive. — D. F. MCCARTHY.

Ability.

Native ability without education is like a tree without fruit. — ARISTIPPUS.

Natural abilities are like natural plants, that need pruning by study. — BACON.

The abilities of man must fall short on one side or the other, like too scanty a blanket when you are abed. — SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE.

Ablaze.

All ablaze like poppies in the sun. — OUIDA.

Abortive.

Abortive as the first-born bloom of spring. — MILTON.

Abound.

Abound, like blades of grass which clothe the pregnant ground. — GEORGE SANDYS.

Abrupt.

Abruptly as string that snaps beneath the bow. — E. W. HORNUNG.

Abrupt as a sultry little thunder shower. — AMY LESLIE.

Absence.

Absence, like death, sets a seal on the image of those we have loved. — GOLDSMITH.

Absolute.

Absolute, sure, as the sun-dial's gnomon, compassing all the world's fate. — A. H. BEESLY.

Absolute as the art which built the Parthenon. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Absolute as the Sultan of Turkey. — MACAULAY.

Abstemious.

Abstemious at the banquet as a hermit. — C. C. COLTON.

Absurd.

Absurd as an excuse. — ANON.

Absurd as to ask a man if he'll have salt on his ice cream. — IBID.

Absurd as to ask if the flowers love the dew. — IBID.

Absurd as to expect a beauty to search for her likeness in the back of a looking-glass. — IBID.

How absurd you must have looked with your legs and arms in the air, like a shipwrecked tea-table. — DION BOUCICAULT.

As absurd as for an epic poet to disdain the composition of a perfect epigram, or a consummate musician the melody of a faultless song. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Absurd as if you took a divorce petition to a chemist's. — ANTON TCHEKHOV.

Absurd — continued.

Absurd as giving bread-pills for a broken leg. — KIPLING.

Absurd as to imagine that the hair-lip or carbuncled nose a man sees in the glass, belongs to the figure in the mirror, and not to his own face. — BONNELL THORNTON.

Abundant.

Abundant as air and water. — ANON.

Abundant as the light of the sun. — CARLYLE.

As the sycamore trees are in the vale for abundance. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Abuse.

If abuse, like a weed, be cut down by the scythe of neglect, it will die of itself. — THOMAS BRYDSON.

Accelerate.

Feverishly accelerated like the movements we see in a cinematograph. — WILLIAM ARCHER.

Accounted.

We are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. — NEW TESTAMENT.

Accumulate.

Accumulate . . . like acorns beneath the trees of a modern forest. — THOMAS H. HUXLEY.

Accurate.

Could tell the hour by his movements as accurately as by a sun-dial. — WASHINGTON IRVING.

As accurately as a bugler knows the notes of the reveille. — OUIDA.

Ache.

His full heart ached with love's sweet pain

Like a sealed fountain, charged with rain,

That longs to sing in the summer air,
Yet faints in the caverns of despair.

— T. BUCHANAN READ.

Acrobats.

A troupe of acrobats is like a combination to a safe: both have tumblers. — ANON.

Action.

Like a squirrel in a cage, always in action. — APHRA BEHN.

Actions of the last age are like almanacs of the last year. — SIR JOHN DENHAM.

A good action like a ring on the finger, the relief of a man of wit, the patronization of a clergyman. — HUGO.

Reprehensible actions are like over-strong brandies; you cannot swallow them at a draught. — IBID.

Our actions are like the termination of verses, which we rhyme as we please. — ROCHEFOUCAULD.

No more action than a stalled hearse in a snow storm. — WILLIAM WINTER.

Active.

Active as a boy climbing a crab-apple tree for a cargo of cramp-generators. — ANON.

Active as a fire department during a conflagration. — IBID.

Active as a pea in a bladder. — IBID.

Active as a pea on a griddle. — IBID.

Active as quicksilver. — IBID.

As active as the roe. — NATHANIEL COTTON.

Active as some mind that turns a sphere. — COWLEY.

Active as an ape. — SIR A. CONAN DOYLE.

Active as a griffin. — HOOD.

Active as light. — HENRY VAUGHAN.

Active as the sun. — ISAAC WATTS.

Actor.

An actor is like a cigar; the more you puff him the smaller he gets. — ANON.

Actor — continued.

Actors are like pet birds. When a pet bird dies, there may be, to those who knew it in the day of its song and its ruffling plumage, some poor comfort in the sight of its stuffed body. For others, there is only a sense of depression. — MAX BEERBOHM.

Actors are like burglars : they always change their names for business purposes. — FRANK RICHARDSON.

Acute.

Acute like the glow of hope. — THOMAS TURNLEY.

Addition.

Adhere.

Adhere like burrs. — ANON.

Adhering . . . like shipwrecked mariners on a rock. — J. M. BARRIE.

Adhere like ticks to a sheep's back. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

Adhesive.

Adhesive as a postage stamp. — ANON.

Adhesive as fly-paper. — IBID.

Admonition.

The admonition of a true friend should be like the practice of a wise physician, who wrappeth his sharp pills in fine sugar ; or the cunning Chirurgeon, who lancing a wound with an iron, immediately applieth to it soft lint ; or as mothers deal with their children for worms, who put their bitter seeds into sweet raisins. If this order had been observed in thy discourse, that interlacing sour taunts with sugared counsel, bearing as well a gentle rein as using a hard snaffle, thou mightest have done more with the whisk of a wand, than now thou canst with the pick of the spur, and avoid that which now thou mayest not, extreme unkindness. But thou art like that kind of judge which Proptertius noeth, who condemning his friend, cause him for the more ease to be hanged with a silken twist. And thou, like a friend, cuttest my throat with a razor, not with a hatchet, for my more honour. — LYL. Y.

Adorable.

Adorable as a dazzling and innocent creature who walks along, holding in her hand the key to paradise without being conscious of it. — HUGO.

Adorable as is nothing save a child. — SWINBURNE.

Adrift.

Adrift as a pinnacle in peril. — SWINBURNE.

Adrift as a spirit in doubt that dissembles

Still with itself, being sick of division and dimmed by dismay. — IBID.

Advance.

Where like a fire to heather set, Bauld Thomas did advance. — ANON.

Advancing, as the chorus to the footlights. — ANON.

Advancing like the shadow of death. — RUSKIN.

Advance, like sheep before the wolf. — SOUTHEY.

Advanced, like Atalanta's star, But rarely seen, and seen from far.

— SWIFT.

Adventure.

Adventurous as a paladin of romance. — WILLIAM H. PRESCOTT.

Adventures are like leaps in hunting, — they bring you into the chase sooner, but may chance to cost you a fall. — JAMES PUCKLE.

Adventurous as a bee. — WORDSWORTH.

Adversity.

The storms of adversity, like those of the ocean, rouse the faculties, and excite the invention, prudence, skill and fortitude of the voyager. — CAPTAIN MARRYATT.

Sweet are the uses of adversity,
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Advertising.

Doing business without advertising is like winking at a girl in the dark. You know what you are doing, but nobody else does. — ANON.

Advice.

Advice after mischief is like medicine after death. — ANON.

Advice is like kissing: it costs nothing and is a pleasant thing to do. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Advice is like snow; the softer it falls, and the longer it dwells upon, the deeper it sinks into the mind. — COLERIDGE.

To listen to the advice of a treacherous friend, is like drinking poison from a golden cup. — DEMOPHILUS.

Advice all the world over is like wind in a cage. In the case of lovers, like water in a sieve. — PILPAY.

Affable.

Affable as a wet dog. — ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

Affairs.

Affairs, like a salt fish, ought to be a good while a-soaking. — ANON.

Affectation.

Affectation is as necessary to the mind as dress is to the body. — WILLIAM HAZLITT.

Affection.

Affection, like spring flowers, breaks through the most frozen ground at last, and the heart which asks but for another heart to make it happy, will never seek in vain. — BENTHAM.

Affection, like the nut within the shell, wants freedom. — DION BOUCAULT.

The affections, like conscience, are rather to be led than driven. Those who marry where they do not love, will be likely to love where they do not marry. — THOMAS FULLER.

The human affections, like the solar heat, lose their intensity as they depart from the centre, and become languid in proportion to the expansion of the circle on which they act. — ALEXANDER HAMILTON.

Affection, like melancholy, magnifies trifles; but the magnifying of the one is like looking through a telescope at heavenly objects; that of the other, like enlarging monsters with a telescope. — LEIGH HUNT.

Affinity.

No more affinity for each other than a robin for a goldfish. — ELEANOR KIRK.

Affliction.

Affliction, like the iron-smith, shapes as it smites. — C. N. BOVÉE.

Afflictions are like lightning: you can not tell where they will strike until they have fallen. — LACORDAIRE.

Afraid.

Afraid as a grasshopper. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Age.

Age, like a double-fronted Janus, looks all ways, and ponders wisely on the past. — BARRY CORNWALL.

The age of man resembles a book; infancy and old age are the blank leaves, youth the preface, and man the body or most important portion of life's volume. — E. P. DAY.

Age, like woman, requires fit surroundings. — EMERSON.

Like mist upon the lea,
And like night upon the plain,
Old age comes o'er the heart.

— ROBERT NICOL.

Age like winter bare. — SHAKESPEARE.

Ageless.

Ageless as the sun. — SWINBURNE.

Aghast.

Aghast, like beaten hounds that dare not whine. — ANON.

Agile.

Agile as a cat. — ANON.

Agile as a monkey. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Agitated.

Agitated with delight like a waving sea. — ARABIAN NIGHTS.

Aglow.

Aglow, like fruit when it colors. — WILLIAM CANTON.

Thy lips are aglow
As a lover's that kindle with kissing.
— SWINBURNE.

Agony.

Blind agony, like a scorpion, stung by his own rage. — SHELLEY.

Agree.

Agree like pikes in a pond, ready to eat up one another. — THOMAS ADAMS.

Agree like finger and thumb. — ANON.

Agree like the hare and the hound. — IBID.

Agree together as harp and harrow. — THOMAS BECON.

Agree like a bell and its clapper. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Agrees like the note with its measure. — DANTE.

Agree like Dogges and Cattes. — STEPHEN GOSSON.

Agree together like bells. — "A KNACKE TO KNOWE A KNAVE," 1584.

Agree as Lent and fishmongers. — JOHN MARSTON.

Agreement is like the uniting of two halves of a seal. — MENCIVS.

Agree like the wax and the wick of the candle. — RICHARD PERCIVAL.

Agree like pickpockets in a fair. — JOHN RAY'S "HANDBOOK OF PROVERBS," 1670.

Agree like married music in Love's answering air. — C. G. ROSSETTI.

Agree as wasp doth with bee. — THOMAS TUSSER.

Agree as Angels do above. — EDMUND WALLER.

Aimless.

Aimless as an autumn leaf
Borne in November's idle winds afar.
— P. H. HAYNE.

Alacrity.

Expressed their alacrity, like horses full of fire and neighing for the race. — PLUTARCH.

Alarm.

Full of alarm
She stood, like a young bird quitting its nest. — DORA SIGERSON.

Alert.

Alert as a chamois. — ANON.
Alert as a bird in the springtime. — GEORGE MOORE.

Alike.

Alike as two peas. — ANON.
Alike as my fingers is to my fingers. — SHAKESPEARE.

Alive.

Alive as a vision of life to be. — SWINBURNE.

Allure.

One of those beautiful, brilliant enigmas, which irresistibly allure every one like a sphinx. — GUY DE MAUPAS-SANT.

Alluring as a ripe peach. — IBID.

Allured all hearts as ocean lures the land. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Alone.

Like to the moon am I, that cannot shine

Alone. — MICHELANGELO.

Alone, like a leper. — ANON.

The old man proceeded alone into the waste, like a bold vessel leaving its haven to enter on the trackless field of the ocean. — J. FENTIMORE COOPER.

Alone, like Crusoe. — EDWARD S. MARTIN.

Stands alone like a rock in a sandy vale. — OSSIAN.

Alone . . . like an owl in an ivy-bush. — J. R. PLANCHÉ.

I go alone
Like a lonely dragon, that his fen Makes fear'd, and talk'd of more than seen. — SHAKESPEARE.

Alone, like one that had the pestilence. — IBID.

Alone like some deserted world. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Stand alone like a substantive. — SIR HENRY WOTTON.

Alter.

Altering, like one who waits for an ague fit. — DRYDEN.

Alteration of Religion is dangerous, because we know not where it will stay: 'tis like a Millstone that lies upon the top of a pair of Stairs; 'tis hard to remove it, but if once it be thrust off the first stair, it never stays till it comes to the bottom. — JOHN SELDEN.

Alternate.

But hope and fear alternate sway my soul, like light and shade upon a waving field. — JOHN HOME.

Alternate like the moon. — POPE.

Amazed.

Amazed, as one that unaware Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Ambition.

Ambition is like choler, which is a humor that maketh men active, earnest, full of alacrity, and stirring, if it be not stopped: but if it be stopped, and cannot have its way, it becometh a dust (hot and fiery) and thereby malign and venomous. — BACON.

Ambitious as the devil. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Ambition is like hunger; it obeys no law but its appetite. — JOSH BILLINGS.

To reach the height of our ambition is like trying to reach the rainbow; as we advance it recedes. — W. T. BURKE.

Like dogs in a wheel, birds in a cage or squirrels in a chain, ambitious men still climb and climb, with great labor and incessant anxiety, but never reach the top. — HENRY BURTON.

As a tree the higher it is, the greater force the winde hath of it, and euerie little blast will bee puffing at it, so that the sooner and greater is the fall thereof: So the Ambitious man, the higher he climeth, the greater is his fall. — ROBERT CAWDRAY'S "A TREASURIE OR STORE-HOUSE OF SIMILIES," 1600.

Ambition is like love, impatient both of delays and rivals. — SIR JOHN DENHAM.

Ambition — continued.

Ambition, like a seeled [blind] dove mounts upward, Higher and higher still, to perch on clouds,
But, tumbles headlong down with heavier ruin. — JOHN FORD.

As ambitious as Lady Macbeth. —
JAMES HUNEKER.

Ambition, like a torrent, never looks back. — BEN JONSON.

Ambition, like love, can abide no lingering; and ever urgeth on his own successes, hating nothing but what may stop them. — SIR PHILIP SIDNEY.

Ambition

Is like the sea wave, which the more you drink
The more you thirst — yea — drink too much, as men
Have done on rafts of wreck — it drives you mad. — TENNYSON.

Amiable.

Amiable as the surface of parchment. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Amorous.

Amorous as a pair of love-birds. —
ANON.

Amorous as a parrakeet. — IBID.

Amorous as an Arcadian. — GEORGE COLMAN, THE YOUNGER.

Ample.

Ample as the largest winding-sheet.
— KEATS.

Ample as the wants of man. —
LONGFELLOW.

Amused.

Unbending their minds, and amused with every trifle; like birds, which, after the serious and important business of preparing nests for their young, fly sportfully about, free and disengaged, as if to relieve themselves from their toils. — CICERO.

Amusements.

Amusements are to religion like breezes of air to the flame, — gentle ones will fan it, but strong ones will put it out. — DAVID THOMAS.

Ancestors.

The man who has not anything to boast of but his illustrious ancestors is like a potato, — the only good belonging to him is under ground. —
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY.

Ancient.

Ancient as the sun. — WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Ancient as the spot on which the bricks of Babylon are found. — J.
FENIMORE COOPER.

Ancient as the stings of death. —
DE QUINCEY.

As ancient as the world. — GEORGE
GRANVILLE.

Ancient as the stars. — VOLTAIRE.

Ancient as the sea. — WALLER.

Angel.

Like angel visits, few and far between. — CAMPBELL.

Anger.

Anger in our mirth is like poison in a perfume. — ADDISON.

Like fragile ice, anger passes away in time. — ANON.

A fit of anger is as fatal to dignity as a dose of arsenic to life. — J. G.
HOLLAND.

Watch against anger; neither speak of it nor act in it; for, like drunkenness, it makes a man a beast, and throws people into desperate inconvenience. — WILLIAM PENN.

Anger is like rain which breaks itself whereon it falls. — SENECA.

Anger is like a full-hot horse, who being allowed his way, self-mettle tires him. — SHAKESPEARE.

Angry as a waspe. — JOHN SKELTON.

Angling.

Our Angles are like money put to usury; they may thrive, though we sit still and do nothing but talk and enjoy one another. — IZAAK WALTON.

Angling is somewhat like Poetry, men are to be born so. — IBID.

Angling may be said to be so like the Mathematics that it can never be fully learnt; at least not so fully but that there will still be more new experiments left for the trial of other men that succeed us. — IBID.

Answer.

Answer like a book. — ANON.

Answer like a parrot. — IBID.

Answered like a sail taking a breeze. — IBID.

Antique.

Antiquity is like fame . . . her head is muffled from our sight. — BACON.

Antique as the statues of the Greeks. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Antique as if I had been preserved in the ark. — MRS. CENTLIVRE.

Anxious.

Anxious as hind towards her hidden fawn. — KEATS.

As anxious as a maid

To show a decent dress.

— GEORGE MEREDITH.

Apart.

Far apart as the earth and the arch above. — ANON.

Far apart as the poles. — IBID.

Blown apart

Like a rose that ready is

For the sun's perfecting kiss.

— CHARLES L. MOORE.

Lips apart,

Like monument of Grecian art.

— SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Sat apart, as one forbid. — WHITTIER.

Apathy.

Full of apathy as a territorial delegate during the chaplain's prayer. — O. HENRY.

Aphorism.

Aphorism, like vinegar, should be used with discretion. — ANON.

The aphorisms of wise and excellent men are of great value, like the dust of gold, or the least sparkle of diamonds. — DR. JOHNSON.

Appalled.

Appall'd;
As children discover'd bugbears.
— BYRON.

Appetite.

Appetite and reason are commonly like two buckets; when one is at the top, the other is at the bottom. — JEREMY COLLIER.

Appreciate.

Poorly appreciated — like a fine landscape in dull weather — or in the reflection of a bad camera obscura. — SCHOPENHAUER.

Approach.

Approaches his lighter topics as a humming bird approaches flowers. — DONALD G. MITCHELL.

April.

April is like a child that smiles in waking. — HUGO.

Apt.

As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint. — SHAKESPEARE.

Arch.

Arching, like a fish-hook. — ANON.

Arched, like a horn. — IBID.

Arched like a mule's back in a hail storm. — IBID.

Arch'd like the crescent moon. — EDWIN ATHERSTONE.

Arch — continued.

Arches like a giant's bow. — E. B. BROWNING.

Arched like the leaf of a peach-tree. — EDWARD HERON-ALLEN.

Arched like the bow of Cupid. — LEWIS MORRIS.

Ardent.

Ardent as a boy. — ANON.

Ardent as the lips of love. — P. H. HAYNE.

Ardent in the search as the Argonauts of forty-nine. — BRANDER MATTHEWS.

Ardent as the sun. — C. J. WELLS.

Argument.

Argument is like an arrow from a crossbow, which has equal force though drawn by a child. — ROBERT BOYLE.

Arguments, like children, should be like

The subject that begets them.

— THOMAS DEKKER.

Arid.

Arid as the sands of Sahara, without restful shade, without refreshing water. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Arise.

Arise like Farianata from his fiery tomb. — LONGFELLOW.

Arise as the spring out of tempest and snow. — SWINBURNE.

Saw the moon arise like Venus from the sea. — ROBERT K. WEEKS.

Arm.

Behold mine arm
Is like a blasted sapling, withered up.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Army.

An army, like a serpent, goes upon its belly. — FREDERICK THE GREAT.

Aromatic.

Aromatic, like the perfume of faded leaves in a china jar. — ALFRED AINGER.

Around.

She walked in flowers around my fields
As June herself around the sphere.
— EMERSON.

Around him like a sun of a system.
— WASHINGTON IRVING.

Arrogant.

An arrogant person, is like unto a goodly tall tree, that groweth and mounteth very high, but bringeth forth no fruit. — ANTHONIE FLETCHER'S "CERTAIN VERY PROPER AND PROFITABLE SIMILIES", 1595.

Art.

Without favor, art is like a wind-mill without wind. — JUVENAL.

Oaks, like arts, a length of years demand. — WILLIAM WHITEHEAD.

Arteries.

Pulseless arteries
Are like the fibres of a cloud instinct
With light. — SHELLEY.

Artful.

Artful as the most dexterous cast of the best trout-killing rod. — DONALD G. MITCHELL.

Artifice.

Shallow artifice begets suspicion,
And, like a cobweb veil, but thinly shades
The face of thy design.
— CONGREVE.

Artificial.

Artificial as clockwork. — ANON.

Artificial as made ice. — ALAN DALE.

Artificial as a trellis. — LOWELL.

Artless.

Artless, as Eve yet unbeguiled. —
C. S. CALVERLEY.

Artless as Nature's notes in birds untaught. — CONGREVE.

Artless . . . like a lammie. — JOHN IMLAH.

Artless as the air. — FRANCIS THOMPSON.

Ascend.

Ascends like the hoof of a camel.
— ARABIC.

Ascend, like angels beautiful, a shining Jacob's ladder of the mind.
— P. H. HAYNE.

Ascended as the smoke of a furnace.
— OLD TESTAMENT.

Ashamed.

Ashamed, like Elisha before the entreaties of Elijah's disciples. —
KINGSLEY.

She that maketh you ashamed is as a rottenness in the bones. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Ashamed, like a guilty thing. —
THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON.

Askew.

Askew, like sheep through a hurdle.
— R. D. BLACKMORE.

Aslant.

Aslant, like the angels in Jacob's dream. — DICKENS.

Asleep.

Asleep,
As Cerberus at Thracian poet's feet.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Lay asleep like green waves on the sea. — R. B. SHERIDAN.

Aspire.

Aspire, as all the sea's life toward the sun. — SWINBURNE.

Aspires as a flame. — IBID.

Assault.

I advance to attack, I climb to assault,
Like a choir of young worms at a corpse in a vault.

— CHARLES BAUDELAIRE.

Astray.

Gone astray like a lost sheep. —
OLD TESTAMENT.

Asunder.

Asunder like the arches of a bridge.
— ROBERT BURTON.

Attend.

Attending,
As if their lives were on his words depending. — TASSO.

Attention.

Attracted about as much attention in the artistic world as the advent of another fly in a slaughter house. — JAMES L. FORD.

Audacious.

Audacious as the day. — CHARLES L.
MOORE.

Austere.

Austere as a tree full of owls. —
ANON.

Austere as the dawn. — BLISS CAR-MAN.

Austere as so many weather-beaten ascetics from the desert. — SIR A.
CONAN DOYLE.

Authority.

Authority without wisdom is like an axe without an edge, fitter to bruise than polish. — ANNE BRADSTREET.

Authors.

Authors, like privateers, are always fair game for one another. — DR.
JOHNSON.

Authors, like maids at fifteen years,
Are full of wishes, full of fears.

— ROBERT LLOYD.

Authors — continued.

A pin has as much head as some authors and a great deal more point.
—GEORGE D. PRENTICE.

Authors I have named are like certain workers in metal, who try a hundred different compounds to take the place of gold—the only metal which can never have any substitute.
—SCHOPENHAUER.

Automatic.

He moved automatically, like a prisoner captured by the evil power of a masquerading skeleton out of the grave. —JOSEPH CONRAD.

Rose automatically as the sap in the twigs. —THOMAS HARDY.

Automobile.

Automobiles, gliding like phantoms with burning eyes. —LEONID ANDREYEF.

Avarice.

Avarice is like a graveyard; it takes all that it can get and gives nothing back. —JOSH BILLINGS.

Avaricious.

The avaricious man is like the barren, sandy ground of the desert, which sucks in all the rain and dews with eagerness, but yields no fruitful herbs or plants for the benefit of others. —ZENO.

Averse.

Averse to change as flesh. —ROBERT BROWNING.

Awake.

Awaken, like seas by a mighty tempest shaken. —BARRY CORNWALL.

Aware.

Aware as the air of the light that fills full all of its girth. —RICHARD HOVEY.

Away.

Away like a ghost at break of day.
—ROBERT BROWNING.

Into the night away they go
Like a bolt that's launched from a steel crossbow.

—GOTTFRIED A. BURGER.

Away like a glance of thought. —JOSEPH R. DRAKE.

Away, like wild pigeons startled in the wood. —EURIPIDES.

Like two drops of dew
Exhaled to Phœbus' lips, away they are gone. —KEATS.

They fall away like the flower on which the sun looks in his strength, after the mildew has passed over it, and its head is heavy with the drops of night. —JAMES MACPHERSON.

Away, with never a look behind
... like an eagle before the wind.
—GEORGE H. MILES.

Away, like mists that flee from summer sea. —THOMAS MOORE.

Away, like mists when winds arise.
—T. BUCHANAN READ.

Chased away as the vision of the night. —OLD TESTAMENT.

Away as with a whirlwind. —IBID.

Awful.

Awful as the negligence of woe. —ANON.

Awful as justice. —GEORGE H. BOKER.

Awful as the last trump that shall proclaim to mankind the end of the world. —ANATOLE FRANCE.

Awful as clouds that nurse the growing storm. —GOLDSMITH.

Awful as the thunder. —JOHN M. MASON.

Awful as a villain in a domestic melodrama. —CHARLES SELBY.

Awful as silence. —SHELLEY.

Awkward.

Awkward as a blind dog in a meat shop. — ANON.

Awkward as a man in a bag. — JOHN BURROUGHS.

Awkward . . . like jackanapes swallowing of pills. — RABELAIS.

BBabble.

Babble like one mad with wine. — SWINBURNE.

Bachelor.

The bachelor who passes through life without marrying, is like a fair mansion left by the builder unfinished; the half that is finished runs to decay from neglect, or becomes at best but a sorry tenement, wanting the addition of that which makes the whole both useful, comfortable, and ornamental. — A. P. MORRIS.

Back.

Back . . . with the instinct of homing pigeons. — MARY AUSTIN.

Backward as the wind sweeps flame. — E. B. BROWNING.

Backward, like a witch's prayers. — EARL OF DORSET.

Like the pace of a crab, backward. — ROBERT GREENE.

Backward like the long wash of a wave. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

Spelling it backward, like a Hebrew book. — LONGFELLOW.

Like a rope-maker's were his ways, for still one line upon another he spun, and, like his hempen brother, kept going backwards all his days. — HORACE SMITH.

Slideth back as a backsliding heifer. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Bad.

Bad as the itch. — ANON.

Bad as a blight. — HOOD.

As bad, as what is worst. — LYLY.

Beauty.

Beauty is like an almanac ; if it lasts a year, it is well. — THOMAS ADAM.

Beauty without modesty is like a flower broken from its stem. — ANON.

Beauty is as summer fruits, which are easy to corrupt and that cannot last. — BACON.

Beauty, like truth and justice, lives within us ; like virtue and like moral law, it is a companion of the soul. — GEORGE BANCROFT.

As amber attracts a straw, so does beauty admiration, which only lasts while the warmth continues ; but virtue, wisdom, goodness, and real worth, like the loadstone, never lose their power. — ROBERT BURTON.

Beauty in a modest woman is like fire or a sharp sword at a distance ; neither doth the one burn, nor the other wound, those that come not too near them. — CERVANTES.

Beauty, like ice, our footing does betray :

Who can tread sure in the smooth slippery way ?

Pleased with the passage, we slide swiftly on,

And see the dangers which we cannot shun. — DRYDEN.

We cannot get at beauty. Its nature is like opaline doves'-neck lustres, hovering and evanescent. — EMERSON.

Thy beauty lies
Veiled like a violet nestling in the moss.
— CLAYTON HAMILTON.

The made-up beauties we commonly meet, like artificial flowers, are all show, and no fragrance. — THOMAS HOLCROFT.

Beauty's a slipp'ry good, which decreaseth Whilst it is increasing resembling the Medler, which, in the moment of its full Ripeness, is known to be in a rottenness. — LYL. Y.

Beautie is like the blackberry, which seemeth red, when it is not ripe, resembling precious stones that are polished with honie, which the smoother they looke, the sooner they breake. — IBID.

Beauty, like the fair Hesperian tree,
Laden with blooming gold, hath need the guard

Of dragon watch with unenchanted eye,

To save her blossoms and defend her fruit

From the rash hand of bold incontinence. — MILTON.

A chaste beauty is like the bellows, whose breath is cold, yet makes others burn. — SIR THOMAS OVERBURY.

Her beauties were like sunlit snows,
Flush'd but not warm'd with my desire. — COVENTRY PATMORE.

Beauties, like tyrants, old and friendless grown,

Yet hate repose, and dread to be alone.
— POPE.

Ah ! yet doth beauty like a dial-hand,
Steal from his figure and no pace perceived. — SHAKESPEARE.

Beauty — continued.

Beauty, like truth, never is so glorious as when it goes plainest. — STERNE.

Beauty, like supreme dominion,
Is best supported by opinion.

— SWIFT.

Beauty passes like a breath. — ALFRED TENNYSON.

A beauty masked, like the sun in eclipse, gathers together more gazers than if it shined out. — WYCHERLEY.

Bedraggled.

Bedraggled, like the flounce of a vulgar rich woman's dress that trails on the sidewalk. — O. W. HOLMES.

Beg.

Beg like a dog at a fair. — ANON.

Beg like a cripple at a cross. — WHITTINGTON'S "VULGARIA."

Behavior.

Men's behaviour should be like their apparel, not too straight or point device, but free for exercise or motion. — BACON.

Behind.

His tail extended all the while Behind him like a rat-tail file.

— O. W. HOLMES.

See behind, as doth the hunted hare. — KEATS.

Always behind, like a donkey's tail. — ENGLISH PROVERB.

Belch.

Belch . . . as loud as a Musket. — APHRA BEHN.

Belching like a torn balloon. — ANGUS McNEILL.

Belief.

Cherished beliefs are like those drinking glasses of the ancient pattern, that serve us all so long as we keep them in our hand, but spill all if we attempt to set them down. — O. W. HOLMES.

Bellow.

Bellows like the vagrant winds. — ANON.

Bellow, like a burst of thunder. — ARISTOPHANES.

Bellowing as if he was possessed of the devil. — BOCCACCIO.

— O. W. HOLMES.

Body.

The body is like a piano, and happiness is like music. It is needful to have the instrument in good order. —
HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Man's Body's like a House: His greater Bones
Are the maine Timber; And the lesser ones,

Are smaller Splints: His Ribs are Laths, daubed ore,
Plaister'd with flesh and blood: His Mouth's the Doore:

His Throat's the narrow Entry: And his Heart

Is the Great Chamber, full of curious Art:

His Midreife is a large partition-Wall,
'Twixt the Great Chamber, and the spacious Hall:

His Stomacke is the Kitchen, where the Meate

Is often but half sod, for want of Heate:

His Spleen's a Vessel, Nature does allott

To take the skimme, that rises from the Pott:

Body—continued.

His Lungs are like the Bellows that respire

In ev'ry office, quickning ev'ry Fire:
His Nose, the Chimney is, whereby are vented

Such Fumes, as with the Bellows are augmented:

His Bowels are the Sinke, whose part's to dreine

All noysome filth, and keep the Kitchin cleane:

His Eyes like Christall Windowes
cleare and bright

Lets in the Object and lets out the Sight:

And as the Timber is, or great or small,
Or strong or weak; 'tis apt to stand or fall. — FRANCIS QUARLES.

Timbuctu itself is not safe from British Literature. — CARLYLE.

A book, like a grape-vine, should have good fruit among its leaves. — E. P.
DAY.

As a thing on the eastern mountains shineth by the presence of the sun;
so one of humble birth, even, may be enlightened by the allurements of good books. — HITOPADESA.

Be as careful of the books you read as of the company you keep, for your habits and character will be as much influenced by the former as the latter.
— PAXTON HOOD.

It is with books as with women,
— where a certain plainness of manner

and of dress is more engaging than the glare of paint and airs and apparel, which may dazzle the eye, but reach not the affections. — DAVID HUME.

Gentlemen vse bookes as Gentlewomen handle their flowers, who in the morning stick them in their heads, and at night strawe them at their heeles. — LYLX.

Books are as meats and viands are : some are good, some of evil substance. — MILTON.

A book, like a person, has its fortunes with one ; is lucky or unlucky in the precise moment of its falling in our way, and often by some happy accident ranks with us for something more than its independent value. — WALTER PATER.

We ought to regard books as we do sweetmeats, not wholly to aim at the pleasantest, but chiefly to respect the wholesomest ; not forbidding either, but approving the latter most. — PLUTARCH.

To buy books only because they were published by an eminent printer, is much as if a man should buy clothes that did not fit him, only because made by some famous tailor. — POPE.

Books, like men their authors, have no more than one way of coming into the world, but there are ten thousand to go out of it, and return no more. — SWIFT.

Books, like proverbs, receive their value from the stamp and esteem of ages through which they have passed. — SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE.

Great brains (like brightest glass), crack straight; while those of stone or wood hold out, and fear not blows.
— BISHOP EARLE.

I suspect that there is in an English-man's brain a valve that can be closed at pleasure, as an engineer shuts off steam. — EMERSON.

My brain, methinks, is like an hourglass,

Wherein th' imaginations run to sands,

Filling up time; but there are turn'd and turn'd

So that I know not what to stay upon,
And less to put in act.

— BEN JONSON.

Buried like a camellia. — WASHINGTON IRVING.

Bushy.

Bushy as the fleece of the ram. — ANON.

Business.

But certainly, some there are that know the resorts and falls of business that can not sink into the main of it; like a house that hath convenient stairs and entries, but never a fair room. — BACON.

Let business, like ill watches, go
Sometimes too fast, sometimes too slow. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

The tide of business, like the running stream,

Is sometimes high and sometimes low,
A quiet ebb, or a tempestuous flow,
And always in extreme.

Now with a noiseless gentle course,
It keeps within the middle bed,
Anon it lifts aloft the head,
And bears down all before it with impetuous force. — DRYDEN.

Bustle.

Bustled about like so many ants roused by the approach of a foe. — J. HAMPDEN PORTER.

Busy.

Busy as a beaver. — ANON.

Capricious, like the thinkings of a child. — GEORGE MACDONALD.

Capricious as a zephyr. — TUPPER.

Capture.

Captured the eyes as a sharp cry secures attention. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Care.

Care is like a husbandman who doth guard our treasures:

And the while, all ways he can, spoils our harmless pleasures.

Loving hearts and laughing brows, most he seeks to plunder,

And each furrow that he ploughs turns the roses under. — ALICE CARY.

Second-hand cares, like second-hand clothes, come easily off and on. — DICKENS.

As much care as pilots of ships avoid the rocks of the sea. — RABELAIS.

As rust eats iron, so care eats the heart. — A. RICARD.

Careful.

Careful as the chief eunuch is of the Grand Seignior's favorite Sultana. — ANON.

Cautious as a fox. — ANON.

As cautious as a Scot. — IBID.

Cautious as a good housekeeper. —
BALZAC.

Cautious as a cragsman. —
G. K. CHESTERTON.

A vague caution, like that of a wild beast that is fierce but feeble — or like that of an insect whose little fragment of earth has given way, and made it pause in a palsy of distrust. —
GEORGE ELIOT.

Cautious as a girl. — ARSÈNE HOUSSAYE.

As cautious as a burglar walking over a tin roof in cowhide boots. — WAL-LACE IRWIN.

Cease.

Ceased like an exquisite lyric
That dies on the breast of night.

— DON MARQUIS.

Ceaselessly, Like delicate hands that are clapped in glee. — T. BUCHANAN READ.

Celebrated.

Celebrated as the sun. — HENRI MURGER.

Celebrity.

Emile Augier . . . carried his celebrity not as a mantle but as a flower in his button-hole. — EDMONDO DE AMICIS.

Celerity.

Celerity : like the motion of a bullet in the air, which flieth so swift as it outruns the eye. — BACON.

Censure.

Censure is like the lightning which strikes the highest mountains. —
BALTASAR GRACIAN.

Censorious . . . as a superannuated sinner. — WYCHERLEY.

Central.

One central mystery, as a darkness within a darkness. — DE QUINCEY.

Ceremony.

Ceremony keeps up all things :
'Tis like a Penny-Glass to a rich Spirit, or some excellent water ; without it the Water were spilt, the Spirit lost. — JOHN SELDEN.

Certain.

As certain as that a brook must have banks. — ANON.

As certain as that a squirrel will climb a tree. — IBID.

Certain as that no mill no meal. — IBID.

Certain as that plants and animals grow and die. — IBID.

Certain as that sticks burn away in the fire. — IBID.

Certain as the movements of heavenly bodies. — IBID.

Certain as the multiplication table. — IBID.

Certain as that the ocean is the meeting-place of all waters ; the skies, the meeting-place of all torches ; the tongue, of all tastes ; the nose, of all smells ; the mind, of all precepts. — IBID.

Certain as the rising of the morning sun. — IBID.

Certain as that the Tweed runs from east to west. — IBID.

Certain as Christmas. — HAROLD BRIGHOUSE.

Certainly, as evening empties morning into night. — E. B. BROWNING.

Certain as a gun. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

As certain as a tail will follow a comet. — CARLYLE.

Certain to make his way there as a gimlet is to go through soft deal. — DICKENS.

A sound brain should always evolve the same fixed product with the certainty of Babbage's calculating machine. — O. W. HOLMES.

As certainly as the thunder-crash follows the lightning. — LEVER.

Certain as wayes unto the blinde. — RICHARD LOVELACE.

Certain as bodies moved with greater impulse, progress more rapidly than those moved with less. — VOLTAIRE.

Certainly as day comes after day. — WILLIAM WATSON.

Chagrin.

His chagrin was like those newly invented furnaces which consume their own smoke. — HUGO.

Chambermaid.

Chambermaids are like lotteries : you may draw twenty, ere one worth anything. — SIR THOMAS OVERBURY.

Chance.

About as much chance as a lamb in Mr. Armour's slaughter house. — GEORGE ADE.

No more chance than a hen has of hatching a codfish from a fried egg. — ANON.

About as much chance as a man with a wooden leg in a forest fire. — GEORGE BROADHURST.

About as much chance as a Hamburg steak in front of a starving iron-moulder. — R. L. GOLDBERG.

Good a chance to win as a man learning to play poker on an ocean steamer. — O. HENRY.

As much chance as a dog with tallow legs chasing an asbestos cat in Hades. — ELBERT HUBBARD.

No more chance than a one-legged man in a football game. — IBID.

About as much chance as a fat June bug would have in the pathway of a road roller. — GRANTLAND RICE.

No more chance than a thaw in Zembla. — SYDNEY SMITH.

About as much chance as a prohibition candidate in a Democratic ward.
— NEW YORK TIMES.

No more chance than a motorist's word has against a policeman's.
— NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Changeful as the neck of dove
In colour.

— WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR.

Changeful . . . as windwaved flame.
— LOWELL.

Changes color as a maid at sight of sword and shield. — MACAULAY.

In affection, as light and changeful as the gaudy fly which hastens to the rose with eager speed, and on its damask leaves, with fond embrace, flutters her painted wings a little while, but lift she but her eyes, and the first thistle flower that catches them catches her fancy too, and thither speeds she. — WILLIAM J. MICKLE.

But now a change came o'er my dream,
Like the magic lantern's shifting slider.
— THOMAS MOORE.

As changeful as the spring. — LEWIS MORRIS.

Changed like one who knows his time must be
But short and bitter. — IBID.

Changeful as the lunar ray. — PE-TRARCH.

Like April, she may wear a changeful face
Of storm and sunshine.

— JAMES PILGRIM.

Changeful as a madman's dream.
— WINTHROP M. PRAED.

Like leaves, as chance inclin'd,
Those wills were chang'd with every wind.

Character.

Characterless as a china shepherdess. — ANON.

Character, like porcelain ware, must be painted before it is glazed. There can be no change after it is burned in. — HENRY WARD BEECHER.

A character is like an acrostic or Alexandrine stanza — read it forward, backward, or across, it spells the same thing. — EMERSON.

Some characters are like some bodies in chemistry; very good, perhaps, in themselves, yet fly off and refuse the least conjunction with each other. — FULKE GREVILLE.

Your character at present is like a person in a plethora, absolutely dying from too much health. — R. B. SHERIDAN.

Charitable.

Charitable as a whole convent. — PAUL BOURGET.

Charity.

Charity is like molasses, sweet and cheap. — ANNA CHAPIN RAY.

Charm.

Charms
Like new-mown meadows, when the grass exhales

Sweet fragrance to the foot that tramples it.

— D. A. ATTERBOM.

Charm, like beauty's goddess. — ENGLISH BALLAD.

Sheds a charm, like to the fabled Cytherea's zone, binding all things with beauty. — BYRON.

Charms, as resistless as the fascinating Egyptian, for which Anthony wisely paid the bauble of the world. — C. C. COLTON.

Charms like gleams of opening Heav'n. — JOHN GILBERT COOPER.

Charmed like an April rose. — W. H. HOLCOMBE.

Charming as a god. — OTWAY.

cloud that beautifies Aurora's face. —
H. CONSTABLE.

There's a mantling flush that dwells in his cheeks,
Like a roseleaf thrown on the snow.
— ELIZA COOK.

With a cheek like a burning rose. —
BARRY CORNWALL.

Like a rose set in snow was the bloom on her cheek. — JOHN CRAWFORD.

Her glowing cheeks like youthful Hebe's fair. — JOHN CUNNINGHAM.

A blooming pair of vermeil cheeks, like Hebe's in her ruddiest hours. —
GEORGE DARLEY.

Your cheeks of late are like bad printed books,
So dimly charactered, I scarce can spell
One line of love in them.

— THOMAS DEKKER.

Her cheeks were like the roses red.
— MICHAEL DRAYTON.

The frightened blood
Scarce yet recalled to her pale cheeks,
Like the first streaks of light broke loose from darkness,
And dawning into blushes.
— DRYDEN.

Cheeks pearly as those of Pallas of Virgil. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Cheek — continued.

A cheek like an apple-blossom. —
GEORGE ELIOT.

cherry. — DAVID GARRICK.

That human, humorous mouth ; those cheeks [Lincoln's] that hold Like some harsh landscape all the summer's gold.

— RICHARD WATSON GILDER.

Cheeks like the rose on a bed of snow. — A. P. GRAVES.

A cheek wherein for interchange of hue
A wrangling strife 'twixt lily and the rose. — ROBERT GREENE.

Her cheeks, like rose and lily yield forth gleams. — IBID.

Her cheeks like ripened lilies steeped in wine,

Or fair pomegranate kernels washed in milk,

Or snow-white threads in nests of crimson silk,

Or gorgeous clouds upon the sun's decline. — IBID.

Cheeks that shamed the rose. —
JOHN HARRINGTON.

Cheeks like creame enclairited. —
ROBERT HERRICK.

Cheeks like roses when they blow. —
IBID.

hue. — JEAN INGELow.

Cheeks as pink as a seashell. —
MARY JOHNSTON.

Cheeks for all the world like a raspberry ice upon a ground of custard. — HUGH KELLY.

Her cheek was as a rainbow, it so changed,
As each emotion o'er its surface ranged. — MISS LONDON.

Her cheeks are like the blushing cloud,
That beautifies Aurora's face ;
Or like the silver crimson shroud,
That Phœbus' smiling looks doth grace. — THOMAS LODGE.

Cheeks like the dawn of day. —
LONGFELLOW.

Your cheeks are roses fair yet pink.
— CATULLE MENDÈS.

Cheek was wan as clay. — WILLIAM
J. MICKLE.

As cheery as young day. — TYRONE POWER.

Chide.

Chide as loud
As thunder. — SHAKESPEARE.

Children.

Thou art not dead ; not even though thou didst die, for children are to the deceased reputation preserving ; and like corks they buoy up the net, upholding the twist of the flaxen cord from the deep. — ÆSCHYLUS.

Children . . .

Like bells rung backwards,
Nothing but noise and giddiness.

— BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Children are like grown people ; the experience of others is never of any use to them. — DAUDET.

It is the case with children as with plants, that their future character is indicated by their early dispositions. — DEMOPHILUS.

Children are like beggars ; often coming without being called. — W. S. DOWNEY.

Childhood shows the man, as the morning shows the day. — MILTON.

Children are never too tender to be whipped ; like tough beef-steaks, the more you beat them the more tender they become. — POE.

Children — continued.

The smallest children are nearest to God, as the smallest planets are nearest the sun. — J. P. RICHTER.

Childhood is like a mirror, which reflects in after life the images first presented to it. — SAMUEL SMILES.

Chill.

Chill as death. — ANON.

Chirping, like the dry High-elbow'd grigs that leap in summer grass. — TENNYSON.

Choleric.

Choleric as fire. — CHARLES READE.

Chorus.

He who makes use of a Chorus in Tragedy seems to me to do like a Physitian, who, prescribing a Dose for the evacuation of Peccant Humors, should afterwards order Restringtons to be taken in the midst of its kind Operation. — JOHN DENNIS.

Christianity.

Christianity is like the neutrality of Belgium, which is guaranteed by all the nations and inviolate in times of peace, but which must not be allowed to stand in the way of the interests of a people on the road to great things. — SIMEON STRUNSKY.

Chubby.

Chubby as a cherub. — ANON.

Chubby as the Diana of Jordaens. — ARSÈNE HOUSSAYE.

Chuckle.

Chuckles, like the opening of a bottle of some effervescent beverage. — DICKENS.

Chuckling like a setting hen. — HUGO.

Cigar.

A cigar is like a wife !
 Put it up to your lips, and light it ;
 When you've learned to do it right, it
 Adds a certain zest to life.
 Mind you keep on puffing it,
 Or it's out, and can't be lit.
 Ah, the aroma !
 Ah, the glow !
 Will I have one ?
 Thank you, No. — ALEISTER CROWLEY.

Circle.

Circular like Plato's year. — ALEX-ANDER BROME.

 Round the high moon in a bright sea of air. — SHELLEY.

Circles round,
 Like the soft waving wings of noonday dreams. — IBID.

Circulate.

Circulate like oil. — BEN JONSON.

Circumstances.

Happy circumstances in life are like certain groups of trees. Seen from the distance they look very well ; but go up to them and among them, and the beauty vanishes ; you don't know where it can be ; it is only trees you see. And so it is that we often envy the lot of others. — SCHOPENHAUER.

City.

Cities, like forests, have their dens in which hide all their vilest and most dangerous monsters. — HUGO.

I love the city as dearly as a brown thrasher loves the green tree sheltering its young. — CHARLES MATHEWS.

Civilization.

Civilization is like a soldier's stock ;
 it makes you carry your head a good deal higher, makes the angels weep a little more at your fantastic tricks, and half suffocates you the while. — ALEX-ANDER SMITH.

Clairvoyant.

Clairvoyant as the X-Ray. —
 ANON.

Clambering.

Clamb'ring, like a runaway lunatic.
 — COLERIDGE.

Glammy.

Glammy as death. — OWEN MERE-DITH.

Clamor.

As clamorous as Hecuba. — ROBERT
 BURTON.

As when two vultures on the mountain's height

Stoop with resounding pinions to the fight ;

They cuff, they tear, they raise a screaming cry ;

The desert echoes, and the rocks reply :

The warriors thus oppos'd in arms, engage

With equal clamours, and with equal rage. — HOMER (POPE).

Clamored . . . as though a besieging foe was in the house. — DOUGLAS JERROLD.

Cold as the clod. — AUBREY T. DE VERE.

Cold as one who waits for burial mould. — JULIA C. R. DORR.

Cold. — continued.

Cold as a leaf long pillowed on a stone. — ARTHUR D. FISKE.

Cold as the coiling water-snake. — O. W. HOLMES.

Cold, just like a summer grate. — HOOD.

Cold as salt. — JAMES HUNEKER.

Cold as the mountain stream. — MRS. INGLIS.

Cold as a bubbling well. — KEATS.

Cold as a skeleton. — AMY LESLIE.

Cold as the breath of winds that blow
To silver shot descending snow.

— RICHARD LOVELACE.

As cold as an earthworm. — MAURICE MAETERLINCK.

Cold as the night-dews on the world. — GERALD MASSEY.

Cold as a fireless hearth. — IBID.

Cold as a fish. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Cold as a mountain in its star-pitched tent. — IBID.

Cold as Death's chill hand. — WILLIAM J. MICKLE.

Cold as the snows of Rhodope. — HANNAH MORE.

Cold as a dead maid's cheek. — MISS MULOCK.

Cold as the Cloyster'd Nun. — "THE MUSES RECREATION," 1656.

Cold as marble. — PETRARCH.

Cold as Diana's Crescent. — JANE PORTER.

Cold as the world's heart. — CHARLES READE.

Cold as when death's foot shall pass. — D. G. ROSSETTI.

Cold as a dead man's nose.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Cold as a snowball. — IBID.

My belly is as cold as if I had swallowed snowballs for pills to cool the reins. — IBID.

Cold as dew to drooping leaves.

— SHELLEY.

Cold, like a frozen chaos. — IBID.

Cold as blight of dew. — SWINBURNE.

Cold as . . . dawn. — IBID.

Cold as the cast-off garb that is cold as clay. — IBID.

Grew cold as a winter wave
In the wind from a wide-mouthed grave,

As a gulf wide open to swallow
The light that the world held dear.

— IBID.

Cold as fears. — IBID.

Cold as rains in autumn. — IBID.

Cold as winter's sky. — J. A. SYMONDS.

Cold as the moon. — JOHN B. TABB.

As the night-mists . . . cold. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Cold, like a star. — WILLIAM WATSON.

Cold as the rank and wasting weeds, which lie in the pool's dark bed. — WHITTIER.

Collapse.

Collapsed like a house of cards. — ANON.

Collapse, like the Apostle in the pictures of the Conversion of St. Paul. — WILLIAM DE MORGAN.

Like a dissolving palace of snow, it collapsed. — DE QUINCEY.

Collapse like the cheeks of a starved man. — DICKENS.

Collapses like a pricked bladder. — G. B. SHAW.

Color.

Colorless as a statue. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Colorless as an etching. — JOHN DENNIS.

Colorless as lead. — JOHN RUSKIN.

Coloured as the moon. — SWINBURNE.

Colorless as equal quantity of air. — HENRY D. THOREAU.

Colossal.

Colossal as the face of Big Ben. — ANON.

Come.

Where the dreams come in from the rush and the din
Like sheep from the rains and the thunder.

— W. S. BRAITHWAITE.

As the birds come in the Spring,

We know not from where;

As the stars come at evening

From depths of the air;

As the rain comes from the cloud,

And the brook from the ground;

As suddenly, low or loud,

Out of silence a sound;

As the grape comes to the vine,

The fruit to the tree;

As the wind comes to the pine,

And the tide to the sea;

As come the white sails of ships

O'er the ocean's verge;

As comes the smile to the lips,

The foam to the surge;

So come to the Poet his songs,

All hitherward blown

From the misty realm, that belongs

To the vast Unknown.

— LONGFELLOW.

Airy tinklings come and go,

Like chimings from far off tower,

Or prattling of an April shower,

That makes the daisies grow.

— MRS. AGNES E. MITCHELL.

Cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Comely.

Comely as a bride. — ANON.

Comely as is a cow in a cage. — JOHN HEYWOOD.

Comely as Apollo. — ARSÈNE HOUSSAYE.

Comfort.

Comfortable as coin. — ANON.

Comfortable as an annuity. — IBID.

Comfortable as matrimony, — to an old woman. — IBID.

Comfortable as an anvil. — IRVIN S.
COBB.

Comfortable as the hungry pig was, when he was shut up by mistake in the grain department of a brewery. —
DICKENS.

Comforting as April air
After the snow. — JEAN INGELow.

Love comforteth like sunshine after rain. — SHAKESPEARE.

That comfort comes too late;
'Tis like a pardon after execution.
— IBID.

Comfortless.

Comfortless as a truss of straw. —
OUIDA.

Comfortless
As frozen water to a starved snake.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Comfortless,
As silent lightning leaves the starless night. — SHELLEY.

Command.

Commands like a full soldier.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Comments.

Harsh comments have no effect:
they are like hammers which are always repulsed by an anvil. — HEL-VETIUS.

Commit.

Commit as many absurdities as a clown in eating of an egg. — JOHN RAY'S "HANDBOOK OF PROVERBS," 1670.

Common.

Common as the stones in our streets. — THOMAS ADAMS.

Common as a convenient saying. — ANON.

Common as backfence cats. — IBID.

Common as boiled cabbage. — IBID.

Common as coals from Newcastle. — IBID.

Common as daisies. — IBID.

Common as lying. — IBID.

Common as pig tracks in wet weather. — IBID.

Common as pins. — IBID.

Common as pug noses in Pittsburgh. — IBID.

Common as sawdust around a saw-mill. — IBID.

Common as the town sewer. — IBID.

Common as the air. — APHRA BEHN.

Common as Robin Adair on a full brass band. — ARNOLD BENNETT.

Common as rain. — PIERCE EGAN.

Common as poverty. — MRS. GAS-KILL.

Friendship as common as a prostitute's favors. — GOLDSMITH.

Common as a barber's chair. — STEPHEN GOSSON.

As common as the power of moving the ears voluntarily, which is a moderately rare endowment. — O. W. HOLMES.

Common as a mart. — BEN JON-KEY.

Comune as the cart-way to knaves and to alle. — LANGLAND.

Common as Get-out. — LEAN'S "COLLECTANEA."

Common as delirium tremens in New York. — ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

Common as scolding at Billingsgate. — LYT.

Common as the highway. — RAY'S "HANDBOOK OF PROVERBS," 1670.

Common as dirt. — CHARLES READE.

Common as the stairs That mount the Capitol. — SHAKESPEARE.

Common as any tavern door. — EDWARD SHARPHAM.

Common as light is love, and its familiar voice wearies not ever. — SHELLEY.

Common as bribery. — JOHN WEBSTER.

Common as sickness. — IBID.

Common as dew and sunshine. — WHITTIER.

Commonplace.

Commonplace as mud. — ANON.

Commonplace as a street pavement. — FLAUBERT.

Companionless.

Companionless as a prisoner in his dungeon. — CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

Companionless as the last cloud of an expiring storm. — SHELLEY.

Company.

Bad company is like a dog that dirties those most he loves the best. — SWIFT.

Compare.

Compares with — as the glow-worm compares with the eagle. — ANON.

Compasseth.

Compasseth them about as a chain.
— OLD TESTAMENT.

Compassionate.

If he be compassionate towards the afflictions of others, it shows that his heart is like the noble tree that is wounded itself when it gives the balm.
— BACON.

Complacent.

Complacent as a cat. — KEATS.

Complex.

Complex as the Iliad. — HUGO.

Complex as a mathematician's schedule of the Zodiac. — AMY LESLIE.

Complexion.

Complexion like a pink rose's. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

Complexion clear and warm, like rose-cordial. — O. W. HOLMES.

Her complexion like the jasmine. — "VIKRAM AND THE VAMPIRE."

A complexion like the red glow of evening upon snow. — HEINRICH ZSCHOKKE.

Compliment.

A compliment is something like a kiss through a veil. — HUGO.

Composed.

Composed as heaven. — WILLIAM LIVINGSTON.

Concave.

Concave as a covered goblet, or a worm-eaten nut. — SHAKESPEARE.

Conceal.

Conceal, like cosmetics. — OSMAN EDWARDS.

Concealed,

Like some fair bud close folded in its sheath,

Gives not to view the blooming of its beauty. — KALIDASA.

Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopped,
Doth burn the heart to cinders.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Conceit.

Strong conceit is a kind of mental rudder which reason should hold for the purpose of steering the mind into its right courses. — ANON.

Deep conceits, like maggots, breed in carrion. — EARL OF DORSET.

Talk about conceit as much as you like, it is to human character what salt is to the ocean ; it keeps it sweet and renders it endurable. Say rather it is like natural unguent of the sea fowl's plumage, which enables him to shed the rain that falls on him and the waves in which he dips. When one has had all his conceit taken out of him, when he has lost all his illusions, his feathers will soon soak through, and he will fly no more. — O. W. HOLMES.

Conceit is just as natural a thing to human minds as a centre is to a circle. — IBID.

Concession.

Individual concessions are like political, when you once begin, there is no saying where you will stop. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Confident.

As confident as a bird committing itself to the air or a great fish to the deep. — ANON.

Confident as justice. — GEORGE COLMAN, THE YOUNGER.

Confident as Hercules. — WILLIAM PRYNNE.

Confident as of your own fingers. — RABELAIS.

Confident, as is the falcon's flight. — SHAKESPEARE.

Confidence in an unfaithful man in time of trouble is like a broken tooth, and a foot out of joint. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Confining.

Confining it to such limits as paintings are confined in by their frames. — W. S. LANDOR.

Conform.

Conform your temper to that of each friend. Be like the polypus, which looks like the rock it has twisted its arms around. — THEOGNIS.

Confound.

Confounds thy fame as whirlwinds shake fair buds. — SHAKESPEARE.

Confounded, as corn blasted before it is grown up. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Confused.

Confused as in a dream. — ANON.

Confused, like the roaring of waves. — IBID.

Confusion of voices, like the chirping of young birds when the brood is just hatched under the down. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Confusedly, like a flight of dark shadows. — HUGO.

Confused as a soul heavy-laden with trouble that will not depart. — SWINBURNE.

Speaks to confuse, like speech by age o'ertaken. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Conscience.

Many men carry their conscience like a drawn sword, cutting this way and that, in the world, but sheath it and keep it very soft and quiet, when it is turned within, thinking that a sword should not be allowed to cut its own scabbard. — HENRY WARD BEECHER.

A fly or dust shows itself at once in milk; so in a pure conscience, any, the smallest stain, cannot be hid. And, as a fly is quickly cast forth by any one who is drinking milk, so the busy fly of impure thought is cast from the pure conscience. — ST. BONAVENTURA.

He that has a scrupulous conscience is like a horse that is not well wayed, he starts at every bird that flies out of the hedge. A knowing man will do that which a tender-conscience man dares not do by reason of his ignorance, the other knows there is no hurt: as a child is afraid to go into the dark when a man is not because he knows there is no danger. — SELDEN.

Conscientious.

Conscientious as a dog. — ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

Consistent.

Simple and consistent as a plant. — ANON.

Consoling.

Consoling as night. — FRANCIS S. SALTUS.

Conspicuous.

Conspicuous as pyramids. — ANON.

Conspicuous as the brightness of a star. — COWPER.

Conspicuous like a cathedral. — ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

Conspirator.

Conspirators and traitors are like moths, which eat the cloth in which they are bred; like vipers, that gnaw the bowels where they are born; like worms, which consume the wood in which they were engendered. — AGESILAUS.

Constant.

Constant as a shadow in the sun. — ANON.

Constant in motion as the spheres. — IBID.

Constantly in my thoughts, like the lost voice of his victim in those of the murderer. — IBID.

More constant than the evening star, Which mildly beams above. — IBID.

Constant as the dove. — MRS. J. HUNTER.

Constant — continued.

Constancy is like unto the Storke, who wheresoeuer she flye commeth into no neast but hir owne, or the Lap-winge, whom nothing can driue from hir young ones, but death. — LYLY.

Constant as the years are rolled. — MARTIAL.

Her constancy, that, like a rock, Beats off temptation, as that mocks
the fury
Of the proud waves. — MASSINGER.

Constant in intercommunication as are the sun and earth. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Constant as the day and night from east to west. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Constant as the stars that never move. — OTWAY.

Constant as the sun. — CHARLES READE.

Constant as the constant hours. —
MARGARET E. EASTER.

But I am as constant as the northern star

Of whose true-fix'd and resting quality
There is no fellow in the firmament.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Constantly as the week passes. —
ABIGAIL A. SMITH.

Constant as a soaring lark. —
WORDSWORTH.

Constant as the motion of the day. —
IBID.

Consume.

Consume as snow against the sun. —
ANON.

Consumed her . . . like a flame. —
MATTHEW ARNOLD.

Consume, like a devouring fire. —
GEORGE SANDYS.

Consumeth, as a garment that is moth eaten. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Consume away like a moth ; surely every man is vanity. — IBID.

Consumed like smoke. — IBID.

Consumed them as stubble. — IBID.

Consuming like a vapor. —
WHITTIER.

Contagious.

Contagious as activity. — ANON.

Contagious as a yawn. — IBID.

Contagious, like the gladness of a happy child. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Contagious as the smile of a keeper showing you through the wards of a madhouse. — J. H. GARDINER.

Contagious, like silliness. — ARSÈNE HOUSSAYE.

Contempt.

Contempt is like the hot iron that brands criminals : its imprint is almost always indelible. — ALIBERT.

Contemptible.

Contemptible as pebbles to an admirer of diamonds. — BALZAC.

Contemptible as habitual contempt.
— E. L. MAGOON.

As contemptible as any man who breaks open a lock, or as any rascal on the lookout for a house left defenseless and without protection, or as any adventurer looking for some easy and profitable stroke of business. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Contend.

Contended, like gales of spring. —
OSSIAN.

Content.

Content as infant smiling through its dreams. — WILLIAM ALLINGHAM.

Content as the males of Adrianus. —
ANON.

A contented man is like a good tennis-player, who never fatigues and confounds himself running eternally after the ball, but stays till it comes to him. — POPE.

Content — continued.

Contented as a Fox when the Hounds were drawn off and gone home from him. — COLLEY CIBBER.

Her sweet content is like a flattering glass to make my face seem fairer to mine eye. — THOMAS HEYWOOD.

Mutual content is like a river, which must have its banks on either side. — LE SAGE.

Contention.

Contention is like fire ; for both burn so long as there is any exhaustible matter to contend with. — THOMAS ADAMS.

Contention, like a horse full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose, and bears down all before him. — SHAKESPEARE.

Contentious.

As coals are to burning coals, and wood to fire ; so is a contentious man to kindle strife. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Continually.

As the bees come forth continually in fresh numbers, so fresh bands of Greeks keep continually coming forth from the ships and tents. — HOMER.

Continue.

Continuous, like the brook. — ANON.

Continued as long as the sun. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Continuous as the stars that shine And twinkle on the milky way.

— WORDSWORTH.

Contract.

Her face contracted like the petals of a flower in the sultry heat that precedes a storm. — ALESSANDRO MANZONI.

Contract and purse thy brow together As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain Some horrible conceit.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Contrary.

As contrary as Dick's hatband. — ANON.

Contrary, like wind and tide meeting. — IBID.

Contrary as light and darkness. — SIR RICHARD STEELE.

Contrast.

Contrast like twin sparks of fire. — AGNES REPPLIER.

Conversation.

Jeffrey, in conversation, was like a skilful swordsman flourishing his weapon in the air ; while Mackintosh, with a thin sharp rapier, in the middle of his evolutions, ran him through the body. — SIR A. ALISON.

Our conversation with the ladies, like whip syllabub, was very pretty, but had nothing in it. — WILLIAM BYRD.

I have sometimes compared conversations to the Italian game of Mora, in which one player lifts his hand with so many fingers extended, and the other matches or misses the number, as the case may be, with his own. I show my thought, another his ; if they agree, well ; if they differ, we find the largest common factor, if we can, but at any rate avoid disputing about remainders and fractions, which is to real talk what tuning an instrument is to playing on it. — O. W. HOLMES.

A transition from an author's book to his conversation, is too often like an entrance into a large city, after distant prospect. Remotely, we see nothing but spires of temples and turrets of palaces, and imagine it the residence of splendor, grandeur, and magnificence ; but, when we have passed the gates, we find it perplexed with narrow passages, disgraced with despicable cottages, embarrassed with obstructions and clouded with smoke. — DR. JOHNSON.

The conversation of a man resembles a piece of embroidered tapestry, which, when spread out, showed its figures, but, when it is folded up, they are hidden and lost. — THEMISTOCLES.

Conviction.

Convictions will come to you in an active career, as the muscles develop in a gymnasium. — OUIDA.

Convincing.

Convincing as the multiplication table. — ANON.

Convivial.

Convivial as a live trout in a lime-basket. — DICKENS.

Coo.

Coo,
Like voices of the gods from Bolotoo.
— BYRON.

Cool.

Cool as a snow bank. — LOUISA M. ALCOTT.

Cool as a November twilight. — ANON.

Head as cool as an usurer's. — IBID.

Cool as a dog's nose in a wire muzzle. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Cool as a deep river

In shadow.

— RUPERT BROOKE.

Cool down like a dish of tea. — COLLEY CIBBER.

Cooled, like lust in the chill of the grave. — EMERSON.

Cool as a cucumber. — JOHN GAY.

Cool as the silent shades of sleep. — ROBERT HERRICK.

Cool as a moonbeam on a frozen brook. — O. W. HOLMES.

Cool as the pool that the breeze has skimmed. — HOOD.

Cool as the call of a wind on the still of the sea. — RICHARD HOVEY.

Cool as aspen leaves. — KEATS.

Cool . . . like a cutlass blade. — AMY LOWELL.

Coöperation.

We are made for coöperation, like feet, like hands, like eyelids, like the rows of the upper and lower teeth. — MARCUS AURELIUS.

Copious.

Copious as rivers. — E. B. BROWNING.

Coquette.

The heart of a coquette is like a rose, of which the lovers pluck the leaves, leaving only the thorns for the husband. — ANON.

A coquette is to a man what a toy is to a child : as long as it pleases him, he keeps on ; when it ceases to please him he discards it. — IBID.

A coquette is like a recruiting sergeant, always on the lookout for fresh victims. — DOUGLAS JERROLD.

A coquette may be compared to tinder, which lays itself out to catch sparks, but does not always succeed in lighting up a match. — HORACE SMITH.

Corneille.

Corneille is to Shakespeare as a clipped hedge is to a forest. — DR. JOHNSON.

Corpulent.

Corpulency of the body is like the corpulency of some of our institutions ; the larger they grow the more corrupt they become. — JOHN LIVINGSTON.

Correct.

Correct as a machine. — PIERRE DE COULEVAIN.

Corrupt.

Corrupt—continued.

Corruption is like a ball of snow, when once set a rolling, it must increase. It gives momentum to the activity of the knave, but it chills the honest man, and makes him almost weary of his calling: and all that corruption attracts, it also retains; for it is easier not to fall, than only to fall once, and not to yield a single inch, then having yielded, to regain it. — C. C. COLTON.

Corrupted as the grave. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

There is something in corruption which, like a jaundiced eye, transfers the color of itself to the object it looks upon, and sees everything stained and impure. — THOMAS PAINE.

Costly.

Costly as an election. — PIERRE DE COULEVAIN.

Cosy.

As cosy as down among country lanes. — ROBERT BUCHANAN.

Cosy as the nest of the bird. — PHEBE CARY.

Cosy as a dormouse. — RICHARD HOVEY.

Cosy as a nest of wood-pigeons. — MISS MULOCK.

Couch.

Couch'd like a lion watching for his prey. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

He stooped down, he couched as a lion, and as an old lion. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Coughed.

Coughed like a cow who finds feathers mixed with hay. — BALZAC.

Counsel.

Counsel to him is as good as a shoulder of mutton to a sick horse. — BEN JONSON.

Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water; but a man of understanding will draw it out. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Count.

Counted as sheep for the slaughter. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Countenance.

Her countenance looked like the gentle buds

Unfolding their beauty in early Spring. — ANON.

Countenance as clear as friendship wears at feasts. — SHAKESPEARE.

His countenance is as Lebanon, excellent as the cedars. — OLD TESTAMENT.

His countenance was like lightning. — IBID.

Countless.

Countless, as the drops that glide
In the ocean's billowy tide.

— ANON.

Countless as locusts. — IBID.

Countless as the stars that roof our night. — AUBREY DE VERE.

Countless as the wraiths of slumber. — JULIA C. R. DORR.

Countless as the golden motes
That dance upon the sun's earth-kissing beams.

— FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE.

Countless as motes in the sunbeams. — SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Countless . . . as leaves on autumn's tempest shed. — SHELLEY.

Countless as the desert sands. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Country.

He told me that he thought one's country like one's wife: you were born in the first, and married to the second, and had to learn all about them afterwards, — ay, and make the best of them. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Couple.

In couples, like the clean and unclean beasts in Noah's ark. — ANON.

Fall into couples, like the birds on Valentine's day. — IBID.

Wheresoe'er we went, like Juno's swans,
Still we went coupled, and inseparable.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Courage.

Courage is like the diamond — very brilliant ; not changed by fire, capable of high polish, but except for the purpose of cutting hard bodies, useless.
— C. C. COLTON.

If charg'd with Courage Man should be,

(Like Powder in Artillery Proportion'd to the Barrel)

Can'st thou, a Blunderbuss so large,
With scarce a Pocket-Pistol's Charge,

Presume to bounce, or quarrel ?

— "FOUNDLING HOSPITAL FOR WIT," 1743.

Courage, like cowardice, is undoubtedly contagious, but some persons are not liable to catch it. —
GEORGE D. PRENTICE.

Courageous.

Courageous as the cocks of Tanagra.
— ANON.

Courageous and choleric as a hive. —
HUGO.

Courageous as a tinker. — IBID.

Court.

Court favors lie above the common road by modesty and humble virtue trod ; like trees on precipices, they display fair fruit, which none can reach but birds of prey. — WALTER HARTE.

The court is like a marble statue, I mean, it may be finely polished but it is very hard. — M. DE LA BRUYÈRE.

Courtesy.

How sweet and gracious, even in common speech,

Is that fine sense which men call Courtesy !

Wholesome as air and genial as the light,

Welcome in every clime as breath of flowers. — JAMES T. FIELDS.

Courthouse.

The courthouse looks imposing ; it is like a sea whose waters are the advocates deep in sagacious thought, whose waves are messengers in constant movement hurrying to and fro, whose fish and screaming birds are vile informers, whose serpents are attorney's clerks, whose banks are worn by constant course of legal action. — SUDRAKA.

Courtiers.

Courtiers are, with regard to court rumours, like old soldiers who distinguish through blasts of wind and moaning of leaves the sound of distant steps of an armed troop. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Courting.

Courting iz like strawberries and cream, wants tew be did slow, then you get the flavor. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Courting iz like 2 little springs ov soft water that steal out from under a rock at the fut ov a mountain and run down the hill side by side singing and dansing and spattering each uther, eddying and frothing and kaskading, now hiding under bank, now full ov sun and now full ov shadder, till bimeby tha jine and then tha go slow. — IBID.

See this 'ere slipper with the paste buckle on to make it look pretty ? Courting is like that, lass — all glitter and of no use to nobody. — HAROLD BRIGHOUSE.

Courtly.

Courtly as the French. — JOHN FORD.

Cover.

Covers the country as the dew. — ANON.

They covered mountain and valley like grasshoppers for their number. — PENTAUR.

Covers it, like a stone covered in grass. — D. G. ROSSETTI.

Covered as thick as a pastry-cook's shop on a Christmas-eve. — SWIFT.

Covert.

Covert as the birth of thought. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Stole out as covertly as starlight from the edging of a cloud. — N. P. WILLIS.

Covetous.

Covetousness, like a candle ill made, smothers the splendor of a happy fortune in its own grease. — ANON.

Covetous persons are like sponges which greedily drink in water, but return very little until they are squeezed. — G. S. BOWLES.

Covetousness, like jealousy, when it has once taken root, never leaves a man but with his life. — TOM BROWN.

A covetous man is like a dog in a wheel, that roasteth meat for others. — JOHN RAY'S "HANDBOOK OF PROVERBS," 1670.

Coward.

Base and crafty cowards are like the arrow that flieth in the dark. — BACON.

A coward in the field, is like the wise man's fool; his heart is at his mouth, and he doth not know what he doth profess: but a coward in his faith, is like a fool in his wisdom; his mouth is in his heart, and he dares not profess what he does know. — ARTHUR WARWICK.

Cowardly.

Cowardly as a mob. — ANON.

Cowardly as a wild duck. — SHAKE-SPEARE.

Cower.

Cower and shrink as Pariah before Brahma. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Cower and crouch like an English housemaid when knees are calloused with scrubbing. — HUGO.

Coxcomb.

Coxcombs keep each other company, like two knives, to whet each other. — VANBROUGH.

Coy.

Coy as a Croker's mare. — ANON.

As coy and stille as doth a mayde Were newe spoused. — CHAUCER.

Coy as ys a mayde. — IBID.

Crabbed.

Crabbed as a cuckoo. — ANON.

Her temper is as crabbed as a thorn. — T. BUCHANAN READ.

Crack.

Every hard head has a crack in it somewhere, like a safety valve, as it were, for the steam. — BALZAC.

Crack'd your skull through like a bottle. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Cracks like a tortured chord of harmony. — HAVARD.

Making the floor crack as if an image of stone were walking over it. — HUGO.

Crackit like a gun. — ALEXANDER LAING.

Cracked as a cocoa-nut bowled by a monkey. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Crack and bounce like parched peas. — CHARLES READE.

Crackle.

Crackling as artillery. — R. D. BLACKMORE.

Crackling, like de bay-leaf i' de fire. — BEN JONSON.

Crackle—continued.

Crackled like charcoal at the flirt of a fan. — SIR RICHARD STEELE.

Crafty.

Crafty as a fox. — ANON.

Crafty as any Jesuit. — JOSEPH JOUBERT.

Crafty as a snake. — KEATS.

Cram.

Crammed in, like salted fish, in their barrel. — CARLYLE.

Cranky.

Cranky as a holy friar fed with hail-stones. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Crash.

Crashing . . . like thunder nigh, whose burst of ruin strikes the shatter'd ear with horror. — RICHARD GLOVER.

Crashing . . . like the ice of polar sea. — W. H. LECKY.

Crash as if rock were hurled upon rock. — OUIDA.

Crash, as when the whirlwind rends the ash. — SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Crashed, like a hurricane. — TENNYSON.

Crave.

Craves to see thy face as the moon-blown moon-flower's swelling heart pines for the moon. — EDWIN ARNOLD.

Craved the trumpets eager note,
As the bridled earth the spring.
— GEORGE MEREDITH.

Crawl.

Crawl like a snail. — ANON.

Crawl like shadows forth in Spring.
— MATTHEW ARNOLD.

Crawl,

Like caterpillars on a wall.

— JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Wailing creak,
Like an almost human shriek.
— JOHN T. TROWBRIDGE.

Creaked like the implacable cicala's cry. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Creak like the chariot wheels of Satan. — BEN JONSON.

Cream.

Cream and mantle, like a standing pond. — SHAKESPEARE.

Creamy.

Creamy as the opening rose. — LEWIS MORRIS.

Crease.

Creased like dog's ears in a folio. — THOMAS GRAY.

Creation.

Creation, says one, lies before us, like a glorious Rainbow; but the Sun that made it lies behind us, hidden from us. — CARLYLE.

Credit.

Credit lost is like a Venice glass broken. — ANON.

Credit is like chastity; they can both stand temptation better than suspicion. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Credulous.

Credulous as a child. — GEORGE W. SMALLEY.

Like simple noble natures, credulous.
— TENNYSON.

Creed.

Creeds are as thistle-down wind-tost and blown, but deeds abide throughout eternity. — GEORGE BARLOW.

Creep.

Creeping into her innocent heart like a maggot into a rose. — ANON.

Crept . . . like a chill. — E. B.
BROWNING.

Creep
Like the grey mists upon the mountain side. — GERHART HAUPTMANN.

Creep like torpid Hottentots. —
A. F. F. VON KOTZEBUE.

O'er our silence creep
Like whispers of the household gods that keep
A gentle empire o'er fraternal souls.
— KEATS.

Creep like shadows. — SHAKE-
SPEARE.

Creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. — IBID.

Creeping close as snakes in hidden weeds. — SPENSER.

Creep
Like the downy wing of sleep.
— ARTHUR SYMONS.

Softly creeping, like a breath of air,
Such as is sometimes seen, and hardly seen,
To brush the still breast of a crystal lake. — WORDSWORTH.

Crestfallen.

Crest-fallen as a dried pear. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Crimson.

As crimson as August heather. —
ALFRED AUSTIN.

Crimson as a comic opera climax.
— J. CHEEVER GOODWIN.

Crisp as a head of young lettuce. —
ANON.

Crisp as the unshorn desert hay. —
GEORGE DARLEY.

Crisp as new bank notes. — DICKENS.

Crisp as wintergreen berries. — AMY LESLIE.

Critic.

Critics are like a kind of flies, that breed,
In wild fig-trees, and when they are grown up feed
Upon the raw fruit of the nobler kind,
And by their nibbling in the outward rind
Open the pores, and make way for the sun
To ripen it sooner, than he would have done. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

Criticism is like champagne, nothing more execrable if bad, nothing more excellent if good; if meagre, muddy, vapid, and sour, both are fit only to engender colic and wind; but if rich, generous, and sparkling, they communicate a genial glow to the spirits, improve the taste, and expand the heart. — C. C. COLTON.

Critics avaunt! for you are fish of prey, and feed, like sharks, upon an infant play.

Beat every monster of the deep away;
let's a fair trial have, and a clear sea. — CONGREVE.

Critic — continued.

A critic is like an idler amusing himself with a spy-glass ; he looks at the defects of a work through the end that magnifies, then inverts the instrument to discover the virtues. — E. P. DAY.

The theatre is like a Turkish seraglio : The critics are the eunuchs. — FARQUHAR.

The critics . . . like Cerberus, are posted at all the avenues of literature, and who settle the merits of every performance. — GOLDSMITH.

A critic should be a pair of snuffers. He is oftener an extinguisher ; and not seldom a thief. — JULIUS C. HARE.

Critics are a kind of freebooters in the republic of letters, who, like deer, goats, and divers other graminivorous animals, gain their subsistence by gorging upon buds and leaves of the young shrubs of the forest, thereby robbing them of verdure, and retarding their progress to maturity. — WASHINGTON IRVING.

But some will say, Criticks are a kind of Tinkers, that make more faults than they mend ordinarily. — BEN JONSON.

The eyes of critics, whether in commending or carping, are both on one side, like a turbot's. — WALTER S. LANDOR.

Critics, like surgeons, blest with curious art,
Should mark each passage to the human heart ;
But not, unskillful, yet with lordly air,
Read surgeon's lectures while they scalp and tear.

— ROBERT LLOYD.

Some critics are like chimney-sweepers ; they put out the fire below, and frighten the swallows from the nests above ; they scrape a long time in the chimney, cover themselves with soot, and bring nothing away but a bag of cinders, and then sing out from the top of the house, as if they had built it. — LONGFELLOW.

A young critic is like a boy with a gun ; he often fires at every living thing he sees ; he thinks only of his own skill, not of the pain he is giving.
— IBID.

Critics are the eunuchs of art ; they talk about what they cannot do. — VLADIMIR DE PACHMANN.

A critic is a legless man who teaches running. — CHANNING POLLOCK.

Critics, like weather-cocks, are not infallible. — LEWIS ROSENTHAL.

The eye of the critic is often, like a microscope, made so very fine and nice that it discovers the atoms, grains, and minutest particles, without ever comprehending the whole, comparing the parts, or seeing at once the harmony. — POPE.

A true critic, in the perusal of a book, is like a dog at a feast, whose thoughts and stomach are wholly set upon what the guests fling away, and consequently is apt to snarl most when there are the fewest bones. — SWIFT.

Critics are like brushers of noble-men's clothes. — SIR HENRY WOTTON.

Croak.

Croak like raven and rook. — WILLIAM DUNBAR.

Curled, as when the Sirian star
Withers the ripening corn.

— OSCAR WILDE.

Curls, like ivy. — WORDSWORTH.

Curse.

Curse away!

And let me tell thee, Beauseant, a wise proverb

The Arabs have, — "Curses are like young chickens,
And still come home to roost."

— BULWER-LYTTON.

A curse is like a cloud — it passes. —
BYRON.

An orphan's curse would drag to Hell
A spirit from on high;
But oh! more horrible than that
Is a curse in a dead man's eye!

— COLERIDGE.

Foul and cursed as if some holy temple had been robbed. — JOHN FORD.

Curses are like processions; they return to the place from which they came. — GIOVANNI RUFFINI.

JOHN DYER.

Dance up and down, like a bear asking for supper. — MAURICE HEW-LETT.

Your dancing, like true wit, is best express'd

By nature only to advantage dress'd ;
'Tis not a nimble bound, or a caper
high,

That can pretend to please a curious eye.

Good judges no such tumblers' tricks regard ;

Or think them beautiful, because they're hard.

— SOAME JENYNS.

Danced in his eyes, as the sunbeams dance on the waves of the sea. —

Deaf as a nail — that you cannot hammer a meaning into. — IBID.

She was deaf as a nut — for nuts, no doubt,

Are deaf to the grub that's hollowing out. — IBID.

Deaf as a stone — say one of the stones Demosthenes sucked to improve his tones;

And surely deafness no further could reach

Than to be in his mouth without hearing his speech. — IBID.

Deaf as bricks. — IBID.

Deaf as God and Magog. — IBID.

Deaf as Pharaoh's mother's mother's mummy. — IBID.

As deaf, alas! as the dead and forgotten —

(Gray has noticed the waste of breath, In addressing the "dull, cold ear of death"). — IBID.

Deaf as the still-born figures of Madame Tussaud,

With their eyes of glass, and their hair of flax,

That only stare whatever you "ax,"
For their ears, you know, are nothing but wax. — IBID.

Deafe as an adder. — BEN JONSON.

As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart. — IBID.

As dear to me as life itself. — IBID.

Dearer than eye-sight, space, and liberty. — IBID.

Dear
As human heart to human heart may be. — SHELLEY.

Dear as remember'd kisses after death. — TENNYSON.

Dear as the visions of the promised bride lighted by love. — C. P. WILSON.

Death.

Death is like sleep ; and sleep shuts down our lids. — BYRON.

Deathless.

Deathless as love. — SWINBURNE.

Debase.

Debas'd by gross alloy :
As gold in mines lies mix'd with dirt and clay. — DAVID MALLET.

Debauch.

Debauches are like figs growing on a precipice : the fruit cannot be gathered by men, but only by crows and vultures. — DIOGENES.

Debt.

Debt is like a millstone about a man's neck. — ANON.

Debt—continued.

Debt is like any other trap, easy enough to get into, but hard enough to get out of. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Debts are now-a-days like children, begot with pleasure, but brought forth with pain. — MOLIÈRE.

Decay.

Decay like the rainbow's hue. — ANON.

We decay like grass of the hill ; our strength returns no more. — JAMES MACPHERSON.

All decay, like the glories of the Spring. — MISS MULOCK.

As soon decay'd and done
As is the morning's silver-melting dew.

desert. — ANON.

Deceptive as the costume of a bal masque. — G. K. CHESTERTON.

Decisive.

Decisive, like a flash of lightning. —
LUDOVIC HALÉVY.

Decline.

Declining to change themselves, even as sulphuric acid declines to be sweet milk, though you vote so until the end of the world. — CARLYLE.

Declined, like a flower surcharged with dew. — MILTON.

Declined — like shadow in the dying of the day. — POE.

Deeds.

His deeds inimitable, like the sea
That shuts still as it opes, and leaves no tracts
Nor prints of precedent for poor men's facts. — CHAPMAN.

Disappeared as if he had vanished in the air. — IBID.

Disappear, as if it all had vanished through the sky. — SHELLEY.

Disappointing.

Disappointing as wet gun-powder. — ANON.

Discipline.

Discipline, like the bridle in the hand of a good rider, should exercise its influence without appearing to do so, should be ever active, both as a support and as a restraint, yet seem to lie easily in hand. It must always be ready to check or pull up, as occasion may require; and only when the horse is a runaway should the action of the curb be perceptible. — JULIUS C. HARE.

Disconnected.

Disconnected as a dream. — MAX NORDAU.

Discontentment.

As for discontentments, they are in the politic body like to humors in the natural, which are apt to gather a preternatural heat and to inflame; and let no prince measure the danger of them by this, whether they be just or unjust. — BACON.

Discordant.

Discordant as the cries of a gull. — DAUDET.

Discordant as croaking frogs. — BONNELL THORNTON.

Discourse.

Themistocles said that a man's discourse was like to a rich Persian carpet, the beautiful figures and patterns of which can be shown only by spreading and extending it out; when it is contracted and folded up, they are obscured and lost. — PLUTARCH.

Discover.

Men of great genius as easily discover one another as freemasons can. — FIELDING.

Disease.

The disease and its medicine are like two factions in a besieged town; they tear one another to pieces, but both unite against their common enemy, nature. — RICHARD JEFFERIES.

Disguise.

Weakness ineffectually seeks to disguise itself, — like a drunken man trying to show how sober he is. — C. N. BOVÉE.

Disgust.

Disgust, as . . . she had touched a snake. — E. B. BROWNING.

Disgusting, like moving cheese. — EMERSON.

With disgust . . . like one who draws out a hair from fresh butter. — OSMANLI PROVERB.

Dishevel.

As disheveled as any naturalist's wig. — BALZAC.

Dishevell'd hair,
Like eagle's plumage ruffled by the air.
— JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Dispersed, as by a tempest. — JOHANN L. UHLAND.

Display.

Display is like shallow water, where you can see the muddy bottom. — ALPHONSE KARR.

Disposition.

The disposition is moulded in a happy manner by instruction, as the shapeless material assumes a beautiful form in the hands of a skilful artist. — DEMOPHILUS.

Disputant.

True disputants are like true sportsmen, their whole delight is in the pursuit ; and a disputant no more cares for the truth than the sportsman for the hare. — POPE.

Disrobed.

Disrobed, like a pure image in a secret shrine. — CHARLES L. MOORE.

Dissembling.

Dissembling as the sea, that now wears brows as smooth as virgins' be, tempting the merchant to invade his face, and in an hour calls his billows up, and shoots 'em at the sun, destroying all he carries on him. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Dissension.

Dissensions like small streams, at first begun,
Scarce seen they rise, but gather as they run. — SAMUEL GARTH.

Dissimilar.

As dissimilar as the pure, white, gleaming lily of the hothouse is unlike the wind-tossed, sand-sustained, yellow leaf downtrodden in the mud. — OUIDA.

Dissimilar as a trading town and a watering-place. — R. S. SURTEES.

Dissipated.

Durable as bronze. — HENRY JAMES.

Durable as manhood. — LAMARTINE.

Durable as the firmament. — WIL-LIAM MATHEWS.

Dusk.

Dusk as dying stars. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Dwarfed.

Dwarfed . . . like starved plants under Greenland skies. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Dwell.

Love's secret may dwell,
Like Zephyr asleep in Some rosy sea-shell.

— THOMAS MOORE.

Dwindle.

Dwindling away like echoes down a valley of rocks. — THOMAS HARDY.

She dwindled, as the fair full moon doth turn

To swift decay and burn
Her fire away. — C. G. ROSSETTI.

EEager.

Eager as a bridegroom. — ANON.

Eager . . . like a mettlesome hound,
Into the fray with a plunge and a bound. — JOHN S. BLACKIE.

Eager as men, when haply they have heard

Of some new songster, some gay-feathered bird,

That hath o'er blue seas strayed in hope to find

In our thin foliage here a summer home,

Fain would they catch the bright things in their mind,

And cage them into sonnets as they come. — F. W. FABER.

Eager as a cry for life. — GEORGE
MEREDITH.

Eager for it as a hound. — IBID.

Eager as greyhound on his game. —
SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Eager as hunters in pursuing their prey. — IBID.

Eager as a ghoul for blood. —
THACKERAY.

Eager as a fine-nosed Hound. —
WORDSWORTH.

Ear.

The public ear is like a common ;
there is not much to be got off it, but that little is for the most part grazed down by geese and donkeys.
— SAMUEL BUTLER (1835-1902).

Her little ears were like rosy shells, — they had a pearl dangling from each of them. — WILKIE COLLINS.

Flapping ears like water-flags. —
SWINBURNE.

Earnest.

Earnest . . . as sober Lanesbro' dancing with the gout. — ANON.

Earnest as a seer who invokes the dead. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Earnest — continued.

Earnest as bees. — LEIGH HUNT.

In earnest as a mouse in a trap. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Earnest as life and hope. — DONALD G. MITCHELL.

As a guardian Muse thou art earnest. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Earrings.

Earrings like chandeliers. — THACKERAY.

Earth.

The earth, like a fallen woman sitting in her dark chamber and trying to forget the past, seemed tormented with remembrances of the spring and summer, and waited in apathy the inexorable winter. — ANTON TCHEKHOV.

Ease.

Like a coy maiden, Ease, when courted most,

Furtherest retires — an idol, at whose shrine

Who oft'nest sacrifice are favour'd least. — COWPER.

He taught them love of toyle;
toyle, which does keep obstructions from the minde, and quench the blood; ease does belong to us like sleep, like opium in our medicine, not our food. — SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT.

As much at ease as a farmer on his own acres. — THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

At ease

As a flower of the springtime of corn.
— SWINBURNE.

Easy.

Easy as for a blackbird to whistle. — ANON.

Easy as a conjurer swallowing a poker. — IBID.

Easy as breathing. — IBID.

Easy as counting the blossoms on a century plant. — IBID.

As easy as finding reasons why other people should be patient. — IBID.

Easy as for a dog to lick a dish. — IBID.

Easy as getting money in a letter. — IBID.

Easy as peeling a hard boiled egg. — IBID.

Easy as pie. — IBID.

Easy as robbing a child's bank. — IBID.

Easy as to say "Jack Robinson." — IBID.

Easy as winking. — IBID.

Easy as an old shoe. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Shall be as easy as going down the river in a boat. — DANTE.

As easy as for you to take a drink. — JOHN DAVIDSON.

Easy, as blinding a chicken on the roost with a torch. — W. N. HARDEN.

Easy as forgetting oaths. — O. W. HOLMES.

Easy as swan could bear the snowy fleece. — HOMER (POPE).

As aisy as winter shakes leaves from the trees. — LOVER.

As easy as a man dyin' wi' due warnin'. — KIPLING.

Easy as for the grass to be green. — LOWELL.

Easy as kissing. — IBID.

Easy as loving. — IBID.

About as easy as to gather a bag of feathers thrown to the four winds. — SYDNEY MUNDEN.

With as much ease as the sun outshines and dims the stars with his meridian rays. — RABELAIS.

Easy as shelling peas. — CHARLES READ.

Easy — continued.

Easy as a down-bed. — SHAKE-SPEARE.

Easy as lying. — IBID.

Easy as to set dogs on sheep. — IBID.

Easy as thanks. — IBID.

For it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. — NEW TESTAMENT.

With as much ease as whirlwinds move feathers. — IZAAK WALTON.

Easy as fitting a new harness to an old horse. — THOMAS WATSON.

Easily.

Flows as easily as California wine out of French bottles. — ANON.

As easily as an oak looseneth its golden leaves. — P. J. BAILEY.

Easily — as you'll go to bed. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Easily as a nurse leads a docile child. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Easily as Hocus Pocus. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

Easily as eagles cleave the air. — MRS. SARAH HALE.

Pouring as easily as hour-glass sand. — KEATS.

Easily as one might wind a watch. — DONALD G. MITCHELL.

As easily as persuading a French aristocrat in the Revolution to get aboard the tumbril that was to land him at the guillotine. — LLOYD OSBOURNE.

Easily removable as a pair of spectacles from the nose. — RABELAIS.

Easily as the eagles soar. — SCHILLER.

Gluts her vengeance with his hated blood : easily as a hawk, the bird of augury, darting from a lofty rock, comes up with a dove high in the clouds, holds her in her gripe, and with crooked talons tears out her heart, while gore and plucked feathers come tumbling from the sky. — VIRGIL.

Eat.

Eat like a hog. — ANON.

Eat like a horse. — IBID.

Eats like rust. — IBID.

Eat like wolves. — IBID.

Eat like maggots into an estate. — CHARLES LAMB.

Eating, sharply as aqua-fortis into brass, into the metal of her vanity — and her pride. — OUIDA.

Eat up like fire the ashen autumn days. — SWINBURNE.

Eat as doth a canker. — NEW TESTAMENT.

Eat, your flesh as it were fire. — IBID.

Eating.

As a lamp is choked with a multitude of oil, or a little fire with overmuch wood quite extinguished ; so is the natural heat with immoderate eating strangled in the body. — ROBERT BURTON.

Ebb.

Ebb like the tides of a living heart. — P. H. HAYNE.

Ebb like hopes that wither. — SWINBURNE.

Eccentric.

Eccentric as comets. — DICKENS.

Moves eccentric, like a wandering star, Whose motion's just, though 'tis not regular. — DRYDEN.

Echo.

An echo is like a woman, always determined to have the last word. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Echoless.

Echoless, as ripe fruit on the ground unshaken. — E. B. BROWNING.

Ecstasy.

With ecstasy . . . like fathers that behold their infants crawl. — HOOD.

Ecstatic.

Ecstatic and inviolate as the red glad mouth of morn. — SWINBURNE.

Education.

A human soul without education, like marble in the quarry, which shows none of its inherent beauties, till the skill of the polisher fetches out the colors. — ADDISON.

Education is, to its possessor, like a golden crown, in which honour is united with intrinsic worth. — DEMO-PHILUS.

Eerie.

Eerie as a witch's ballad. — AMY LESLIE.

Effect.

Produced as little effect as a flake falling on the glaciers of the high Alps. — BEACONSFIELD.

Effective.

As effective as Gibraltar under a fusillade of grapeshot. — ANON.

Effervescent.

Effervescent as a sulphur springs geyser. — ANON.

Effervescent as young wine. — AMY
LESLIE.

Efficient.

Efficient as a bear trap. — WARREN
H. MILLER.

Effortless.

Effortless as stars awakening and melting out, at eve, and morning's breaking. — N. P. WILLIS.

Egotism.

There's nothing like egotism. It preserves a man as ice preserves meat.
— ANON.

Elastic.

Elastic as a caterpillar. — ANON.

Elastic as all flesh. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Elastic as the gas of gunpowder. —
EMERSON.

Elasticity.

Capable of elasticity as a washed glove. — ANON.

Elate.

Elate as Heaven. — SWINBURNE.

Elegant.

Elegant as a Chesterfield. — ANON.

Elegant as a Tuscan. — IBID.

Elegant as simplicity. — COWPER.

Eloquence.

Unprofitable eloquence is like the cypress; great and tall but bears no fruit. — ANON.

Fierce bursts of eloquence like the wail of a clarion thrilling beneath the blasts of a storm. — IBID.

False eloquence, big empty sound, Like showers that rush upon the ground,

Little beneath the surface goes,
All streams along and muddy flows.

— MATTHEW GREEN.

Eloquence is an engine invented to manage and wield at will the fierce democracy, and, like medicine to the sick, is only employed in the paroxysms of a disordered state. — MONTAIGNE.

Eloquent.

Eloquent as a rattlesnake's tail. —
ANON.

Eloquent as Cicero. — IBID.

Eloquent as angels. — C. C. COLTON.

With her mouth she was eloquent,
As if to her ear an angel bent,
Whispering her that she might say
The word which wipes all tears away.
— D. G. ROSSETTI.

Elude.

Elude us like the echo of falling waters in a dream. — ANON.

Elude the grasp like an essence. — CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

Elusive.

As elusive as the pestilence that walketh in darkness. — ANON.

Elusive as quicksilver. — IBID.

Elusive as sheet lightning playing among June clouds. — JAMES HUNTER.

Elusive as the sea-line far, and all the secret of the wind. — GEORGE STERLING.

Embrace.

In close embrace,
Like friends that, having liv'd far apart,

Meet and relieve in tears the joy-o'erburdened heart.

— WILLIAM TENNANT.

Emotion.

All loving emotions, like plants, shoot up most rapidly in the tempestuous atmosphere of life. — RICHTER.

Emphatic.

Emphatic as an oath. — GEORGE MOORE.

Empire.

A great empire, like a great cake, is most easily diminished at the edges. — FRANKLIN.

Emptier.

Emptier than a reed. — BOCCACCIO.

Empty.

Empty as a bird's nest in December. — ANON.

Empty as a politician's address to the people. — IBID.

Empty as a quill. — IBID.

Empty of expression as a squeezed sponge of water. — IBID.

Empty as Vanity Fair. — IBID.

Empty . . . like a shell dishabited. — T. E. BROWN.

Empty of religion, as the white of an egg is of savor. — BUNYAN.

Empty as shade. — C. C. COLTON.

Empty as a church on a week-day. — DAUDET.

Empty as a cobbler's curse. — THOMAS DERMODY.

As empty of ideas as an opera. — FIELDING.

Empty as an idiot's mind. — GEORGE CABOT LODGE.

Empty as space. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Empty as air-pumps drain'd of air. — WILLIAM SHENSTONE.

Empty as a skull. — TENNYSON.

Empty as wind. — MRS. TROLLOPE.

Enchanting.

Enchanting as beauty weeping in her weeds. — WILLIAM WILKIE.

Enchased.

Walls enchased like chalices. — ROBERT NOEL.

Encircled.

Encircled him as a belt. — ANON.

Encumber.

Encumbering . . . like a circumambient Bedlam. — CARLYLE.

Encumbrance.

The encumbrances of his fortune were shaken from his mind, as dew drops from a lion's mane. — DR. JOHNSON.

Ends.

I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea. — SHAKESPEARE.

Enduring.

Enduring as marble. — ANON.

Enduring — continued.

Enduring as the stars. — ANON.

Enduring as eternity. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

As enduring as a camel. — KEATS.

Energy.

Energy, even like the biblical grain of mustard-seed, will remove mountains. — HOSEA BALLOU.

In energy . . . like unto the Sun. — MAHABHARATA.

Enfold.

Enfolds . . . like mist. — JOHN KEBLE.

Enlisting.

Enlisting in the United States navy to see the world is like going to the workhouse to learn broom-making. — ABE MARTIN.

Enlivening.

Enlivening as a sneeze. — HENRY BROOKE.

Enraged.

Enraged as the wild winds to reason deaf. — R. H. HORNE.

Enshrined.

Enshrined, as in a holy altar, under guard of consecrated keepers. — RICHARD CUMBERLAND.

Enslaved.

Enslaved as a spell. — PETRARCH.

Entangled.

Entangled like vines. — ANON.

Entangled in words as a bird in lime-twigs. The more he struggles the more belimed. — THOMAS HOBBS.

In her faire lookes were his thoughts intangled, like birds of canarie, that have fallen into a silken net. — LYLY.

Entangled . . . like a mouse caught in a trap. — RABELAIS.

Enthrall.

A nameless charm enthralling, like the ghost of music melting on a rain-bow spray of sound. — P. H. HAYNE.

Enthusiasm.

Enthusiasm, like a bottle rid of the cork. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Enthusiast.

The enthusiast has been compared to a man walking in a fog ; every thing immediately round him, or in contact with him, appears sufficiently clear and luminous ; but beyond the little circle, of which he himself is the centre, all is mist, error, and confusion. — C. C. COLTON.

Enticing.

Enticing as a riddle. — P. W. SHEDD.

Entrance.

Entrancing as the gardens in a fairy romance. — ANON.

Entrances like a siren. — IBD.

Entrance as young conquerors fresh from spoil. — P. J. BAILEY.

Enveloped.

Enveloped, like a martyr's robe of flames. — PRESCOTT.

Envious.

Envious people are disarmed by their own dispositions, as iron by rust. — ANTISTHENES.

Envious as a pretty woman is of another woman, as a banker is of another banker, as a political adversary is of a rival. — HAWTHORNE.

Envious as an old maid verging on the desperation of six and thirty. — R. B. SHERIDAN.

Envy.

As rust corrupts iron, so envy corrupts man. — ANTISTHENES.

Envy, like merit, doth its shade pursue. — IBD.

Envy — continued.

Envy lurks at the bottom of the human heart, like a viper in its hole. — BALZAC.

Envy, like the worm, never runs but to the fairest fruit; like a cunning bloodhound, it singles out the fattest deer in the flock. — FRANCIS BEAUMONT.

A rustiness consumeth iron: So envie consumeth the envious man. — ANTHONIE FLETCHER'S "CERTAIN VERY PROPER AND PROFITABLE SIMILIES," 1595.

As a moth gnaws a garment, so doth envy consume a man. — SAINT CHRYSOSTOM.

Envy, like a cold prison, benumbs and stupefies; and, conscious of its own impatience, folds its arms in despair. — JEREMY COLLIER.

Pity and envy, like oil and vinegar, assimilate not. — C. C. COLTON.

Envy excels in exciting jealousy, as a rat draws the crocodile from its hole. — HUGO.

Envy, like a flame soars upward. — LYVY.

Envy, like flame, blackens that which is above it, and which it cannot reach. — J. PETIT-SENN.

Ephemeral.

Ephemeral as dew. — BLISS CARMAN.

Ephemeral, like Michael Angelo's snow statue. — RUSKIN.

Epigram.

Like a bee or an epigram, all his sting is in his tail. — THOMAS ADAMS.

Equal.

Equal as flowers in the field. — EDWIN MARKHAM.

Erect.

Erect as an Indian. — ANON.

Erect as a sunbeam, upspringeth the palm. — EMERSON.

Erect as a live hydra. — HUGO.

Erect as alders. — OVID.

Grow erect as the great pine grows. — E. R. SILL.

Erect, like pillars of the temple. — SOUTHEY.

Erratic.

Erratic as electrical phenomena. — BALZAC.

Erratic

As the strong star smiles that lets no mourner mourn.

— SWINBURNE.

Error.

Errors, like straws, upon the surface flow;

He who would search for pearls must dive below. — DRYDEN.

Escape.

'Scape as did Arion on the Dolphin's back. — THOMAS HEYWOOD.

My soul escaped as a bird out of the snare of the fowlers: the snare is broken, and we are escaped. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Essential.

Essential as the dew. — EDNA P. C. HAYES.

As essential to the river as a fish. — HENRY D. THOREAU.

Established.

Established for ever as the moon. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Esteemed.

Esteemed as a minstrel at a feast. — GEORGE SANDYS.

Eternal.

Eternal as life. — ANON.

Eternal as the eternal God. — J. C. GUTHRIE.

Eternal — continued.

Eternal as is Sion. — HUGO.

Eternal as the peace of God. —
HUGH McCULLOCH.

Ethereal.

Ethereal as the air. — CHARLES SANGSTER.

Ethereal, like a lovely ghost Soft looming in the hazy distance dreaming. — CELIA THAXTER.

Ethereal as the sensuous pallor of waxen candles. — G. VERE TYLER.

Evanescent.

More evanescent than the rainbow.
— WILLIAM ARCHER.

So evanescent that it was like a shape made in water. — DICKENS.

Evanescent as the crimson flush that tints the daybreak. — MISS LONDON.

Events.

Events, like the pendulum of a clock, have swung forward and backward, but after all, man, like the hands, has gone steadily on. — R. G. INGER-SOLL.

Everlasting.

Everlasting as the sun. — WILLIAM KING.

Everlasting as the voiceless hills. —
CONDÉ B. PALLEN.

Evident.

Evident as Euclid's axioms. — ANON.

Evident,
As is the universal light of day.
— JOHN BANIM.

Evident as the sun at noon. —
CARLYLE.

Evident as light in dark. — GEORGE
MEREDITH.

Evil (Adjective).

Evil report, like the Italian stiletto, is an assassin's weapon, worthy only of the bravo. — MADAME DE MAINTENON.

Evil as treason. — SIR THOMAS MORE.

As the fishes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men snared in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them. — OLD TESTA-MENT.

Evil (Noun).

Evils, like poisons, have their uses, and there are diseases which no other remedy can reach. — THOMAS PAINE.

Exact.

Exact as clock-work. — CARLYLE.

Exacting.

Exacting as a senior clerk. — BALZAC.

Exasperated.

Exasperated . . . like the huntsman's first distant halloo to a stag. — BALZAC.

Exceed.

As far exceed . . . as doth the flower
the weed. — JOHN HEYWOOD.

Excel.

As the fair lawn excels the rushy mead,
As firs the thorn, and flow'rs the pois'- nous weed. — RICHARD JAGO.

Then I saw that wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness.
— OLD TESTAMENT.

Excelling, as much as orient gold surmounteth brass. — WILLIAM THOMSON.

Exchequer.

The king's exchequer was like the spleen; for when that did swell, the whole body did pine. — TRAJAN.

Excite.

Exciting as a Quaker Meeting. —
GEORGE ADE.

Excite him, as the donkeys on the green did Betsy Trotwood. — DICKENS.

Excrement.

A little rounded excrement like a steel wart. — IRVIN S. COBB.

Exhaustless.

Exhaustless as the ocean. — OUIDA.

Exhaustless as the choral founts of night. — T. BUCHANAN READ.

Expand.

Expanded like a flower under the sun. — ANON.

Expanding like the dawn. — JOHN DAVIDSON.

Expand, as tides that ebb, or tides that flow. — LORD DE TABLEY.

Expanded like the face of the sun when it mounts above the eastern hill. — JEREMY TAYLOR.

Expect.

Expectation, like a fiery steed, anticipates the course, and pants to hear the sprightly signal start him for the goal. — ROBERT JEPHSON.

Expensive.

Expensive as glory. — SYDNEY SMITH.

Experience.

It is costly wisdom that is bought by experience. We know by experience itself, that it is a marvelous pain, to find out but a short way by long wandering. And surely, he that would prove wise by experience, he may be witty indeed, but even like a swift runner, that runneth fast out of his way, and upon the night, he knoweth not whither. — ROGER ASCHAM.

Experience, like a pale musician, holds A dulcimer of patience in his hand, Whence harmonies, we cannot understand,

Of God's will in his worlds, the strain unfolds

In sad, perplexed minors : deadly colds Fall on us while we hear, and countermand

Our sanguine heart back from the fancy-land

With nightingales in visionary words.

— E. B. BROWNING.

Human experience, like the stern lights of a ship at sea, too often illuminates only the path we have passed over. — COLERIDGE.

Expire.

Expired like the sound of a melancholy echo. — ANON.

Expired like hardy plants which lose their color and perfume when transplanted to a hot-house. — IBID.

Expiring like the deserted camp-fires of a retiring army. — GEORGE W. CURTIS.

Expire like an exhausted taper. — GOLDSMITH.

Doomed to expire like blossoms that ne'er see a second sun. — RACINE.

Exploded.

As exploded as the mysteries of Eleusis. — RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

Expression.

True expression, like the unchanging sun,

Clears and improves whate'er it shines upon. — POPE.

Expressionless.

Expressionless as a cheese. — ANON.

Expressionless as a gravestone. — IBID.

Expressionless as a Sphinx's face. — IBID.

Expressive.

Expressive as the ridge of a cat's back. — ANON.

Exquisite.

Exquisite, like the heart of a wild rose. — ANON.

Exquisite in their mechanism as the motion of the planets. — JAMES HUNEKER.

Exquisite
Like fiery chrysoprase in deep basalt.
— D. G. ROSSETTI.

Exquisite — continued.

Exquisite as the coming of spring and quite as natural. — OSCAR WILDE.

Extended.

Extended, like home-bound cranes.
— ANON.

Extended as the heavens. — VAN-BRUGH.

Extinct.

Extinct as the dodo. — ANON.

Extinck as th' bison. — FINLEY
PETER DUNNE.

Extinguish.

Extinguished as stars by the rising sun. — ANON.

Extinguished like a taper's flame. —
AMBROSE BIERCE.

Extinguished, like a flame that sinks down hopelessly among the late decaying embers. — HAWTHORNE.

Extinguish'd, like the vital spark in death. — HOOD.

Extortion.

Extortion is like a whirlpool, that swalloweth whatever it catches. —
ANON.

Extravagance.

Extravagance is like a violent fire, that is no sooner stopped in one place than it breaks out in another. — VAN-BRUGH.

Exult.

Exulting like a conqueror. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Exulted as the sunrise in its might.
— SWINBURNE.

Eye.

My eyes like the wheels of a chariot roll around. — ÆSCHYLUS (E. B. BROWN-ING).

Her eyes were like a butterfly's gorgeous wings. — JAMES LANE ALLEN.

Eyes like mountain water that's flowing on a rock. — WILLIAM ALLING-HAM.

Dovelike eyes, depths as of heaven
when charged with gloom. — ANON.

Eyes like burnt holes in a blanket.
— IBID.

Eyes like saucers. — IBID.

Eyes transparent as a cloudless sky.
— IBID.

Eyes, brilliant and humid like the reflection of stars in a well. — ED-MONDO DE AMICIS.

Languishing eyes like those of a roe looking tenderly at her young. — AMRILKAIS.

Eyes like a hind's in love-time. —
EDWIN ARNOLD.

Her sparkling eyes, like Orient pearls,
Did cast a heavenly light.

— ENGLISH BALLAD.

His eyes, like those of a pitiless judge, seemed to go to the very bottom of all questions, to read all natures, all feelings and thoughts. —
BALZAC.

Burning eyes that blaze through a lace veil, like flame through cannon smoke. — IBID.

These lovely lamps, these windows of the soul. — DU BARTAS.

Eyes like flames of sulphur. — BEAU-MONT AND FLETCHER.

Eyes, like torches, fling their beams around. — IBID.

Blue violet, like Pandora's eye. —
THOMAS L. BEDDOES.

Eyes glazed over like harebells wet with dew. — CAROLINE BOWLES.

Her eyes are bright as stars
In the blue.

— ROBERT BRIDGES (American).

Her sunken grey eyes, like reflections from the aspect of an angel. — CHAR-LOTTE BRONTË.

Eye—continued.

Her eyes are dark and humid,
Like the depth on depth of lustre hid i' the harebell.

— ROBERT BROWNING.

With eyes, like fresh-blown thrush-eggs on a thread,
Faint-blue and loosely floating in his head. — IBID.

Doubting eyes,
Like a child that never knew but love
Whom words of wrath surprise.

— E. B. BROWNING.

Shining eyes, like antique jewels set in Parian statue-stone. — IBID.

Eyes like the summer's light blue sky. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Beautiful eyes in the face of a handsome woman are like eloquence to speech. — IBID.

His eyes are like a balance, apt to propend each way, and to be weighed down with every wench's looks. —
ROBERT BURTON.

Eyes like the dawn of day. —
F. A. BUTLER.

Brilliant eyes, swift-darting as the stars. — CARLYLE.

Twin violets by a shady brook were like her eyes. — ALICE CARY.

Eyes, shining like thin skins full of blood. — IBID.

What a curious workmanship is that of the eye, which is in the body, as the sun in the world; set in the head as in a watch-tower, having the softest nerves for receiving the greater multitude of spirits necessary for the act of vision. — STEPHEN CHARNOCK.

Those dry eyes of his shining more like poisoned stones than living tissue.
— JOSEPH CONRAD.

Expectant yellow eyes, like a cat watching the preparation of a saucer of milk. — IBID.

Her eyes are sapphires set in snow.
— CONSTABLE.

An eye like the polar star. — ELIZA
COOK.

O my love has an eye,
Like a star in the sky.

— BARRY CORNWALL.

Honest eyes . . . Blue like the tropic skies. — D'ANNUNZIO.

Eyes, gleaming and sparkling like lizards' eyes in the crevices of old walls. — DAUDET.

Her eyes grew bright and large,
Like springs rain-fed that dilate their marge. — AUBREY DE VERE.

Her eyes, like stars in midnight waters glossed. — IBID.

Her eyes are bright as beryl stones that in the tankard wink. — AUSTIN DOBSON.

Eyes like the morning. — IBID.

Eyes like live coals. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Her eyes like shadows in the light of torches on the Mount of Doom. — MAURICE FRANCIS EGAN.

Old men's eyes are like old men's memories, they are strongest for things a long way off. — GEORGE ELIOT.

When a man speaks the truth in the spirit of truth, his eye is as clear as the heavens. When he has base ends, and speaks falsely, the eye is muddy, and sometimes asquint. — EMERSON.

An eye can threaten like a loaded and levelled gun, or can insult like hissing or kicking; or, in its altered mood, by beams of kindness, it can make the heart dance with joy. — IBID.

But oh, to see his solar eyes
Like meteors which chose their way — And rived the dark like a new day.

— IBID.

Her eyes like the radiance the sunbeams bring. — ANCIENT ERSE.

Eyes like the summer skies when twin stars beam above. — F. A. FAHY.

Eye — continued.

Eyes as azure as the wave. — VIOLET FANE.

Eyes like dark blue pansies. — NORMAN GALE.

Eyes as greye as glasse. — GEORGE GASCOIGNE.

A burning eye, yellow and phosphoric like the eye of a crocodile or a lion. — GAUTIER.

The most dazzling stars are pebbles without lustre beside the diamonds of her eyes. — JOSEPH A. DE GOBINEAU.

His eyes were like the eyes of doves when washed by the dews of the morning. — GOLDSMITH.

Mary with her cheerful eyes,
Like heartsease where a dew drop lies.
— EDMUND GOSSE.

Azure eyes, like stars upon the river's brink. — IBID.

Her eyes, fair eyes, like to the purest lights,

That animate the sun, or cheer the day ;
In whom the shining sunbeams brightly play,

Whiles fancy doth on them divine delights. — ROBERT GREENE.

Her eyes two twinkling stars in winter nights. — IBID.

Her eyes like glassy streams. — IBID.

The dame had eyes like lightning, or the flash

That runs before the hot report of thunder. — IBID.

Two eyes,
Like heaven's bright lamps in matchless beauty shining. — IBID.

His eyes were grey,
Like Titan in a Summer day. — IBID.

Eyes like violets steep'd in dew. — J. C. GUTHRIE.

Her eyes, like moonbeams glowing. — HAFIZ.

Eyes that mock the diamond's blaze. — JOHN HARRINGTON.

Eyes like twin blue stars. — HEINRICH HEINE.

Ambiguous . . . blue eyes like the china dog on the mantel piece. — O. HENRY.

Eyes frosty blue, like a winter sea that is made bright, not warm, by the sun. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

Eyes like a hare's, that look sideways for danger. — IBID.

Eyes like stars, robed in dull red. — IBID.

Shrewd old party . . . eyes like gimlets. — HEADON HILL.

The lack-lustre eye, rayless as a Beacon street door-plate in August. — O. W. HOLMES.

An eye as clear and steady as the evening star. — IBID.

Eyes . . . mild as a gazelle's. — HOOD.

Brilliant eyes,
As deeply dark as desert skies.
— LAURENCE HOPE.

Dreaming, wistful eyes,
Dark and deep as mysterious skies,
Seen from a vessel at sea. — IBID.

Wistful eyes,
As luminous and tender as Kotri's twilight spies. — IBID.

His eyes . . . deep sunk beneath his lowering brows,
Like caverns by a moonlit sea.
— R. M. MILNES.

Eyes . . . overflow like two cups filled above the brim. — HUGO.

Sweet eyes . . . tender as the deeps in yonder skies. — JEAN INGELow.

The sophist's eye,
Like a sharp spear, went through her utterly,
Keen, cruel, perçant, stinging.
— KEATS.

Eye — continued.

Eyes like two streams of liquid light. — FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE.

Eyes like the dawn of day. — IBID.

Her eye

Flames like a fresh caught hind's.

— KINGSLEY.

Eyes that droop like summer flowers. — MISS LONDON.

Eyes like the flower that was Rousseau's delight. — ANDREW LANG.

O lovely eyes of azure,

Clear as the waters of a brook that run Limpid and laughing in the summer sun ! — LONGFELLOW.

I dislike an eye that twinkles like a star. Those only are beautiful which, like the planets, have a steady, lambent light — are luminous, but not sparkling. — IBID.

Eyes dilated, as if the spirit-world were open before him, and some beautiful vision were standing there. — IBID.

Like the stars that nightly shine,
Thy sweet eyes shed light divine.

— LOVER.

Flaw-seeing eyes, like needle points. — LOWELL.

Eyes pe[er]ing like the Sun beames. — LYLY.

Blue eyes, like Delft saucers. — MAARTEN MAARTENS.

His eyes like meteors of night. — JAMES MACPHERSON.

Bright eyes

Which were like lotus-blossoms.

— MAHABHARATA.

Eyes . . . like restless stars in the pit of night. — EDWIN MARKHAM.

Vacant eyes, blue as the flowers of the flax plant. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Unfathomable eyes, which hid their secrets under the undisturbed serenity of majestic repose, like a mountain lake, whose waters seem black on account of their depth. — IBID.

Her eye beams as kindly and bright,
As the sun in the azure-tinged sky.

— CATULLE MENDES.

Blessed eyes, like a pair of suns,
Shine in the sphere of smiling.

— THOMAS MIDDLETON.

And the bright dew-bead on the bramble lies, like liquid upon beauty's eyes. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Eyes like setting planets, weak and dim. — CHARLES L. MOORE.

Each bright eye,

Like violets after morning's shower,
The brighter for the tears gone by.

— THOMAS MOORE.

Eyes, whose sleepy lid like snow on violets lies. — IBID.

Eyes as soft as doves. — MISS MULOCK.

Eyes, like reflected moonbeams on a distant lake. — OSSIAN.

Eyes flashed like the sun playing on water. — OUIDA.

Eyes like blue heavens in a night of frost. — IBID.

Eyes shining like the planets. — IBID.

Her eyes were of a deep brown hue, like the velvety brown of a stag's throat. — IBID.

Her eyes are like free-booters, living upon the spoils of stragglers. — SIR THOMAS OVERBURY.

Eyes like an orange-grove
In whose enchanted bowers the magic fire-flies rove. — IBID.

What eyes ! [Daniel Webster's] like charcoal fire in the bottom of a deep, dark well. — THEODORE PARKER.

Eyes blazed like a bale-fire. — JOHN PAYNE.

Eye — continued.

Her black eyes sparkled like sunbeams on a river : a clear, deep, liquid radiance, the reflection of ethereal fire. — THOMAS L. PEACOCK.

Eyes . . . stared like windows at the peep of day. — STEPHEN PHILLIPS.

The eye, like a shattered mirror, multiplies the images of its sorrow. — POE.

Luminous eyes,
Brightly expressive as the twins of Leda. — IBID.

The eye is the window of the soul; the mouth, the door; the intellect, the will, are seen in the eye. — HIRAM POWERS.

The eyes are the pioneers that first announce the soft tale of love. — PROPERTIUS.

Eyes glittering like basilisks. — CHARLES READE.

Her eye worked like an ice gimlet in her daughter's face. — IBID.

Her eyes are blue and dewy as the glimmering Summer-dawn. — JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Eyes as fresh and clear as morning skies. — IBID.

With a pair o' eyes like two fried eggs. — IBID.

Her eyes are like the open heaven
Holy and pure from sin.

— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Dim dried eyes like an exhausted well. — IBID.

Eyes
As of the sky and sea on a gray day.
— D. G. ROSSETTI.

Her eyes were deeper than the depth
Of waters stilled at even. — IBID.

Her dazzling eye;
As liquid in its brilliancy as the deep blue of midnight ocean,

When underneath, with trembling motion,
The phosphor light floats by.
— RUSKIN.

Her eyes were like a heaven, where sunlight always glows. — A. J. RYAN.

His eyes like those that Houris wear. — SADI.

Thine eyes
Mirage of sultry prisons, flashing in —
And out, like fulg'rous lightning through dark skies.

— FRANCIS S. SALTUS.

As a moonbeam white,
As a starbeam white,
Was her eye of iris ray.

— IBID.

An eye like Mars, to threaten and command. — SHAKESPEARE.

Her eyes, as murder'd with the view,
Like stars ashamed of day, themselves withdrew. — IBID.

Thy eyes' windows fall, Like death, when he shuts up the day of life. — IBID.

His eye
Red as 'twould burn Rome. — IBID.

His eyes, like glow-worms, shine when he doth fret. — IBID.

Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.
— IBID.

Eyes as fair
As star-beams among twilight trees.
— SHELLEY.

His faint eyes,
Like dew upon a sleeping flower.
— IBID.

Thine eyes are like the deep, blue boundless heaven. — IBID.

Eyes like kindling flame. — LYDIA
H. SIGOURNEY.

Eye — continued.

In her hazel eyes her thoughts lay clear
As pebbles in a brook.

— ALEXANDER SMITH.

Her goodly eyes like sapphires shining bright. — SPENSER.

An eye is, for all the world, exactly like a cannon, in this respect, That it is not so much the eye or the cannon, in themselves, as it is the carriage of the eye, and the carriage of the cannon; by which both the one and the other are enabled to do so much execution.
— STERNE.

An old light smolders in her eye.
There ! she looks up. They grow and glow

Like mad laughs or a rhapsody
That flickers out in woe.

— TRUMBULL STICKNEY.

Eyes as glad as summer. — SWIN-BURNE.

Gold-eyed as the shore-flower shelter-less

Whereon the sharp-breathed sea blows bitterness,

A storm-star that the seafarers of love Strain their wind-wearied eyes for glimpses of. — IBID.

Your grave majestic eyes
Like a bird's warbled words Speak, and sorrow dies.

— IBID.

Eyes,
Pale as the skies.

— ARTHUR SYMONS.

His threatening eyes
Like flaming torches burned.

— TASSO.

Eyes . . . clear as the unshadowed
Grecian heaven. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Like a blue spot in the sky
Was her clear and loving eye.

— SIR HENRY TAYLOR.

Eyes like heaven's own blue. —
ESAIAS TEGNER.

His eyes are like the eyelids of the morning. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Thine eyes are like the fish-pools in Heshbon, by the gate of Bathrabbim.
— IBID.

Eyes like unto a flame of fire. — IBID.

But woe's me, and woe's me,
For the secrets of her eyes !
In my visions fearfully
They are ever shown to be
As fringed pools, whereof each lies Pallid — dark beneath the skies
Of a night that is
But one bleak necropolis.
And her eyes a little tremble, in the wind of her own sighs.

— FRANCIS THOMPSON.

Like pansies dark i' the June o' the year, grow my Love's glad eyes. —
JAMES THOMSON.

Her eyes are like the statues, — mild, grave, and wide. — PAUL VERLAINE.

Eyes, dark and mysterious as Night's ; but, like Night's own eyes, ready, I thought, to call up the throbbing fires of a million stars. — THEO-DORE WATTS-DUNTON.

Eyes flashing like sapphires. — IBID.

Eyes like English skies, where seemed to play
Deep azure dreams behind the tender grey. — IBID.

O deep eyes,
Darker and softer than the bluest dusk
Of August violets, darker and deeper Like crystal fathomless lakes in summer moons. — AUGUSTA WEBSTER.

How brilliant and mirthful the light of her eye,
Like a star glancing out from the blue of the sky. — WHITTIER.

Eyes like a bright blue-bell. — ELLA
WHEELER WILCOX.

Your eyes are like fantastic moons that shiver in some stagnant lake. —
OSCAR WILDE.

Eye — continued.

Eyes half veiled . . .

Like bluest waters seen, through mists of rain. — OSCAR WILDE.

Blue eyes shimmer with angel glances Like spring violets over the lea.

— CONSTANCE F. WOOLSON.

Her eyes as stars of twilight fair.
— WORDSWORTH.

Eyes

Like the harebells bathed in dew.

— IBID.

Eyes like sunbeams. — JOHANN ZSCHOKKE.

Eyebrow.

Eyebrows like curved snow-drifts.
— MAURICE HEWLETT.

Her eyebrows like a bent bow. —
“VIKRAM AND THE VAMPIRE.”

Eyeless.

Eyeless as old Destiny. — SHELLEY.

Eyelid.

Eyelids close

Calmly, as to a night's repose,
Like flowers at set of sun.

— FITZ-GREENE HALLECK.

FFabulous.

As fabulous as Aladdin's ring. —
O. W. HOLMES.

As fabulous as the immortality of the giants of mythology. — THOMAS PAINE.

Fabulous as Bucephalus or Black Bess. — THACKERAY.

Face.

His face is like a street before they lay the pavement. — ANON.

Thy face, like dawn when it lights
the dawn. — ARABIAN NIGHTS.

Sweet youthful face, fair as the moon at full. — EDWIN ARNOLD.

His face looks like a warrant. —
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

A face that cannot smile is like a bud that cannot blossom which dries up in the stalk. — HENRY WARD BEECHER.

His face is fair as heaven. — WIL-LIAM BLAKE.

His face is like the pippin, grown red ripe in frosty suns that shone. —
ARTHUR C. BENSON.

A sharp face, like a knife in a cleft stick. — E. B. BROWNING.

He had a face like a benediction. —
CERVANTES.

That face of yours looks like the title-page of a whole volume of roguery. — COLLEY CIBBER.

His face looked like a face that had refused to jell and was about to run down on his clothes. — IRVIN S. COBB.

Face,

Long as a courtier's out of place.

— COLMAN.

Face like an ancient lemon.

— JOSEPH CONRAD.

A face like a smoked herring.

— ANATOLE FRANCE.

A face like the setting sun on a summer's day, when promise of a hot day to-morrow is read in its ruddy hue.

— F. C. GRIFFITH.

Face—continued.

Her little face is like a walnut shell
With wrinkling lines.

— W. E. HENLEY.

Face like a flame. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

Her face like roses blown,
And in the radiance and the hush,
Her thought was shown.

— JEAN INGELow.

A face that was like an open letter in a foreign tongue. — HENRY JAMES.

His face is like a squeezed orange.
— BEN JONSON.

Her face was like the earthen pitcher of Gideon : it concealed the light. —
GEORGE MACDONALD.

His face was like the April morn
Clad in a wintry cloud.

— DAVID MALLET.

A face, like nestling luxury of flowers.
— GERALD MASSEY.

Her fair face half hid, like a ripe peeping rose. — OWEN MEREDITH.

Her face is as white
As her pillow by night.

— IBID.

She is hid away all but her face, and that's hung about with toys and devices, like the signe of a taverne, to draw strangers. — SIR THOMAS OVER-BURY.

Faces did glisten like the key-hole of a powdering-tub. — RABELAIS.

A face open as day. — ROGERS.

Thy face is like the full moon of heaven, allied to light, but far from my hopes. — "ROMANCE OF ANTAR."

Her own face was like a flower
Of the prime,

Half in sunshine, half in shower,
In the year's most tender time.

— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Her face was like an opening rose,
So bright to look upon :
But now it is like fallen snows,
As cold, as dead, as wan.

— IBID.

Faces are as legible as books, with this difference in their favor, that they may be perused in much less time than printed pages, and are less liable to be misunderstood. — FREDERIC SAUNDERS.

'Tis not that she paints so ill but, when she has finished her face, she joins so badly to her neck, that she looks like a mended statue, in which the con-noisseur may see at once that the head is modern, though the trunk's antique.

— R. B. SHERIDAN.

Her face was like a lily hidden in holy dusks. — GEORGE STERLING.

Her face was like the Milky Way i' the sky,

A meeting of gentle lights without a name. — SIR JOHN SUCKLING.

Thy face
Was as a water's wearied with wind.

— SWINBURNE.

His face was as the must that lies upon a vat of new-made wine. — OSCAR WILDE.

Factions.

These factions amongst great men, they are like

Foxes, when their heads are divided,
They carry fire in their tails, and all the country,

About them goes to wreck for't.

— JOHN WEBSTER.

Fade.

Fade as a passing breath. — GILBERT
ABBOTT À BECKETT.

Faded as the iris after rain in April's tearful weather. — ANON.

Fades as the splendor fades from the sky, when the sun sinks to sleep. —
IBID.

Fade — continued.

He faded away like a pound of soap in a hard day's wash. — ANON.

Fade away like some fabled city of mythology. — IBID.

Fade like autumn leaves, and fade and die

With no kind hand to raise the head and gently close the dying eye.

— IBID.

Fade . . . like ghosts prohibited the day. — IBID.

Faded like snow. — IBID.

Faded like the morn. — ARABIAN NIGHTS.

Fades like an unfixed photograph.

flower, in the shadow of the forest. —
HAWTHORNE.

Faded like a dream of youth. —
O. W. HOLMES.

Faded . . . like dew upon the sea. —
IBID.

Fade like the roseate flush, the golden glow,

When the bright curtain of the day is rolled.

— IBID.

Fade unspoken,
Like daffodils that die with sheaths unbroken.

— IBID.

Fades like an old faith grown gray.
— BRIAN HOOKER.

Fade away like the pale sister of the night,

When she resigns her delighted light,
Lost in the blaze of day.

— JOHN HUGHES.

Faded from me like a dream. —
HUGO.

Fade like an August marigold. —
JEAN INGELOW.

Fade,
As shadows passing into deeper shade.
— LONGFELLOW.

Faded slowly from the sight as blushes from the cheek. — IBID.

Fade away like a thin vapory cloud.
LORD LYTTTELTON.

Faded like some rich raiment worn of old. — ROSAMUND MARRIOTT WAT-SON.

Is all faded, like fragrance,
From the languishing late flowers.
— OWEN MEREDITH.

Fade — continued.

That pales at sunrise in the waters of light. — LLOYD MIFFLIN.

Fades like a funeral lay. — THOMAS
MOORE.

Fades like a once-heard tale. —
LEWIS MORRIS.

Fades like sunset flame. — CON-STANCE C. W. NADEN.

Fading like a ghost
At gray cock-crow.
— JOHN G. NEIHARDT.

How fading are the joys we dote upon !
Like apparitions seen and gone.
— JOHN NORRIS.

Faded away like a woodcock leaves a weasel. — EDWARD PEPLE.

Faded like a wreath of mist at eve.
— GEORGE D. PRENTICE.

Fade . . . like a nightmare's ghastly presence, in the truthful dawn of day.
— ADELAIDE A. PROCTER.

Fade as a flower in May. — R. PYN-SON.

Fade like the gowans in May. — ALLAN RAMSAY.

Fade . . .
Like stars half quenched in mists of silver dew. — SHELLEY.

Fade like vapor. — IBID.

Fade, like the hopes of youth. —
SOUTHEY.

Fade like to a flowre that feelles no
heate of sunne. — SPENSER.

Faded, as fields that withering winds leave dry. — SWINBURNE.

Fade like flame. — IBID.

Fade as leaves when the woods wax hoary. — IBID.

We all do fade as a leaf. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Fading as hearts forget, as shadows flee. — F. O. TICKNOR.

Fade

As placidly as when an infant dies.
— THOMAS WARD.

Fade, like waves breaking on a dreary shore. — JOHN WILSON.

Fades like the lustre of an evening cloud. — WORDSWORTH.

Fail.Failed

Like a brief dream of unremaining glory. — SHELLEY.

Failing like an un replenished stream.
— IBID.

Fail like the trances of the summer
air. — IBID.

Fain.

Fain of the wild glad weather
As famine is fain of feast.
— SWINBURNE.

Faint.

Faint as the hum of distant bees. —
ANON.

Fainter than scent of soever long-kept lavender. — MAX BEERBOHM.

Faint . . . like a lost star. — ROBERT
BROWNING.

Faint as a waft from years
Long past.
— HELEN G. CONE.

As faint and helpless as a new-born babe. — LORD DE TABLEY.

Faint as the music that in dreams we hear. — MARY A. DE VERE.

I hear their cry afar
Faint like the death-song of a fallen star. — ARTURO GRAF.

Faint as the dim ghost of a dream-sea. — RICHARD HOVEY.

Faint as the light of stars and wan.
— JEAN INGELow.

Faint as a glimmering taper's wasted light. — SIR WILLIAM JONES.

Faint as the visions in a dream. —
KIPLING.

Faint — continued.

Faint as the Spring. — OWEN MEREDITH.

Faint . . . like chimings from some far-off tower. — AGNES C. MITCHELL.

A faint strain,
As if some echo, that among
Those minstrel halls had slumber'd long,
Were murm'ring into life again.
— THOMAS MOORE.

Faint and forlorn . . . like the breath of a spirit sighing. — MRS. NORTON.

Faint as the voice of the telephone.

Like great god Saturne faire. — SIR PHILIP SIDNEY.

As fair as the first beams of the morning. — ROUMANIAN SONG.

Faire as Phœbus sunne. — SPENSER.

Fair as a fairy. — SWINBURNE.

Fair as a field in flower. — IBID.

Fair as all that the world may call most fair, save only the sea's own face. — IBID.

Fair as any poison-flower Whose blossom blights the withering bower

Whereon its blasting breath has power. — IBID.

Fair as a star-shaped flower. — IBID.

Fair as dawn. — IBID.

Fair as dreams that die and know not what they were. — IBID.

Fair as even the wakening skies. — IBID.

Fair as flame. — IBID.

Fair as fled foam. — IBID.

Fair as heaven in spring. — IBID.

Fair as hope divines. — IBID.

Fair as life. — IBID.

Fair as peace. — IBID.

Clean and fair

As sunlight and the flowerful air.

— IBID.

Fair as the ambient gold of wall-flowers. — IBID.

Fair as the eyes are fair. — IBID.

Fair as the face of the star-clothed night. — IBID.

Fair as the frondage each fleet year sees fade. — IBID.

Fair as the morning. — IBID.

Fair as the sunbright air. — IBID.

Fair as the sundawn's flame Seen when May on her first-born day bids earth exult in her radiant name. — IBID.

Fair as the world's old faith of flowers. — IBID.

Fair as thine eye's beam
Hidden and shown in heaven.
— IBID.

Fair as in Mirza's Bagdad dream. — WHITTIER.

Fair
As Pison was to Eden's pair.
— IBID.

Fairer than the day, or the flowery meads in May. — GEORGE WITHERS.

Fair as a star, when only one
Is shining in the sky.
— WORDSWORTH.

Fair as beams of light. — THOMAS YALDEN.

Faith.

Faith without works is like a bird without wings; though she may hop with her companions on earth, yet she will never fly with them to heaven; but when both are joined together, then doth the soul mount up to her eternal rest. — FRANCIS BEAUMONT.

Faith, like the phoenix, soars and sings. — RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

Faith, like light, should ever be simple and unbending. — MARTIN LUTHER.

Faith, like the itch, is catching. — LUIGI PULCI.

Faith is like a lily lifted high and white. — C. G. ROSSETTI.

Faith, amid the disorders of a sinful life, is like the lamp burning in an ancient tomb. — MADAME SWETCHINE.

Faithful.

Faithful as dog, the lonely shepherd's pride. — ÆSCHYLUS.

Faithful as a good book. — ANON.

Faithful as the planets. — IBID.

Faithful as wax to one settled impression. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Faithful as the sun in the heavens. — JAMES R. GILMORE.

Faithful as the knee-joint to its socket. — ARTHUR GUETERMAN.

Faithful as the eagle to the sun, as is the steel unto the magnet. — HUGO.

Faithful as the hands of a clock to the springs. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Faithful as the star is to the night. — T. BUCHANAN READ.

Faithful, from day to day,
As Hesperus, that leads the sun his way.
— TASSO.

Faithful as the sun. — HENRY VAUGHAN.

Faithless.

Faithless as fair weather. — ANON.

Faithless . . . as the winds. — APHRA BEHN.

Fall.

(See also FELL.)

Sweet-falling as the evening dew. — ANON.

Fall like a thousand of brick. — IBID.

Falling like Sierra's April flood that pours in ponderous cadence from the cliff. — IBID.

Falls like the leaves in October. — IBID.

Falling like the tower Siloam. — IBID.

Fall like small birds beaten by the storm against a dead wall, dead. — P. J. BAILEY.

Falling . . . softly as a snowflake. — IBID.

Fall — continued.

Falling like a bolt out of the blue.
— CARLYLE.

Falls and risings, like a swan upon waving water. — COLLEY CIBBER.

Fall, like the autumn-kissed leaf.
— PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR.

Fall on me like a silent dew,
Or like those maiden showers,
Which by the peep of day, do strew
A baptism o'er the flowers.

— HERRICK.

Like a leaf that quits the bough,
The mortal vesture falls.

— O. W. HOLMES.

Like a city without walls, the grandeur of the mortal falls who glories in his strength and makes not God his trust. — MACAULAY.

They fall away, like the flower on which the sun hath looked in his strength. — JAMES MACPHERSON.

He falls like an oak on the plain;
like a rock from the shaggy hill. — IBID.

Falls like some baffled thing. —
ARTHUR W. E. O'SHAUGHNESSY.

Falling soft as snow on snow. —
F. T. PALGRAVE.

Falling as gently as an answer to a prayer. — ADELAIDE A. PROCTER.

Falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Fall as a slaughtered beast headless. — SWINBURNE.

Fallen as leaves by the storms in their season thinned. — IBID.

Softer falls
Than petals from blown roses on the grass. — TENNYSON.

They fall like grass before the mower.
— THACKERAY.

Fall off, like leaves from a withered tree. — VOLTAIRE.

False.

False as a man with a black head and a red beard. — ANON.

False as Dick's hatband. — IBID.

False friendship, like the ivy, decays and ruins the walls it embraces; but true friendship gives new life and animation to the object it supports.
— ROBERT BURTON.

False as suborn'd perjurers. — SAM-UEL BUTLER.

False as the father of lies. — G. K.
CHESTERTON.

False and fair-foliaged as the manchineel. — COLERIDGE.

False as a bulletin. — NAPOLEON.

False as the adulterate promises of favorites in power when poor men court them. — OTWAY.

False as the wind, the waters, and the weather. — IBID.

False as God is true.

— THOMAS PAINE.

False eloquence, like the prismatic glass,
Its gaudy colors spread on ev'ry place.
— POPE.

As false as Waghorn, and he was nineteen times falser than the deil. —
SCOTTISH PROVERB.

False as an obituary. — EDGAR SALTUS.

False as dice. — SHAKESPEARE.

False as dicers' oaths. — IBID.

False as hell. — IBID.

False
As stairs of sand.

— IBID.

False as water. — IBID.

False . . . as wolf to heifer's calf.
— IBID.

False as the fowler's artful snare.
— SMOLLETT.

False and foul as fear. — SWINBURNE.

Falsehood.

Falsehood, like a nettle, stings those who meddle with it. — ANON.

A mixture of falsehood is like alloy in coin of gold and silver, which may make the metal work the better, but it embaseth it. — BACON.

Falsehood, like a drawing in perspective, will not bear to be examined in every point of view, because it is a good imitation of truth, as a perspective is of the reality, only in one. — C. C. COLTON.

Falsehoods, like weeds, flourish without care. Weeds care nothing for soil or rain. They not only ask no help, but they almost defy destruction. — R. G. INGERSOLL.

To tell a falsehood is like the cut of a sabre: for though the wound may heal, the scar of it will remain. — SADI.

Falsehood, like the dry-rot, flourishes the more in proportion as air and light are excluded. — WHATELY.

Falsetto.

Falsetto, like the notes of a split reed. — WASHINGTON IRVING.

Falter.

Faltering like the skylark's young. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Fame.

Fame is like a river, that beareth up things light and swollen, and drowns things weighty and solid; but if persons of quality and judgement concur, then it filleth all round about, and will not easily away; for the odors of ointments are more durable than those of flowers. — BACON.

Fame is like a crop of kanada thissels, very eazy tew sow, but hard tew reap. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Fame is like a whimsical mistress; she flies from those who pursue her most, and follows such as show the least regard to her. — SAMUEL CROXALL.

Fame, as a river, is narrowest where it is bred, and broadest far off. — SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT.

Fame, like a new mistress of the town, is gained with ease, but then she's lost as soon. — DRYDEN.

To some characters, fame is like an intoxicating cup placed to the lips, — they do well to turn away from it who fear it will turn their heads. But to others fame is "Love disguised", the love that answers to love in its widest, most exalted sense. — MRS. JAMESON.

Fame, like money, should neither be despised nor idolized. — L. C. JUDSON.

Fame, like a wayward Girl, will still be coy

To those who woo her with too slavish knees,
But makes surrender to some thoughtless Boy,
And dotes the more upon a heart at ease. — KEATS.

Good fame is like fire: when you have kindled it, you may easily preserve it; but if you once extinguish it, you will not easily kindle it again. — PLUTARCH.

The way to fame, like the way to heaven, is through much tribulation. — STERNE.

Fragrant his fame as flowers that close not. — SWINBURNE.

Familiar.

Familiar as a popular song. — ANON.

Familiar as the sights on our streets. — IBID.

Familiar as my sleep, or want of money. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Familiar — continued.

Familiar as the simple lore
That two policemen and two thieves make four.

— AMBROSE BIERCE.

Familiar as a cradle-song. — R. J.
BURDETTE.

Familiar as a voice of home. — JOHN
CRAWFORD.

Familiar as an oath. — LORD DE TABLEY.

Familiar, like the amulet worn on the heart. — GEORGE ELIOT.

As familiar as a fiddler. — JOHN
FLETCHER.

Familiar to me as my own face in the glass ; as the speech of my own tongue. — HUGO.

Familiar as eating. — MASSINGER.

Familiar as his garter. — SHAKE-
SPEARE.

Familiar in his mouth as household words. — IBID.

Familiar as the sun and moon. —
HENRY D. THOREAU.

Familiar as our childhood's stream
Or pleasant memory of a dream.
— WHITTIER.

Familiar as a book. — N. P. WILLIS.

Familiarly.

Talks as familiarly of roaring lions
As maids of thirteen do of puppy-dogs.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Family.

His family is like potatoes ; all that is good of them are underground.
— ANON.

The family is like a book — the children are the leaves,
The parents are the covers that protective beauty gives.
At first the pages of the book are blank and purely fair,

But time soon writeth memories and painteth pictures there.

Love is the little golden clasp that bindeth up the trust,
Oh, break it not, lest all the leaves shall scatter and be lost.

— ANON.

Fan.

It fanned his cheek
Like a meadow-gale of Spring.

— COLERIDGE.

Fanciful.

Fanciful as furnitures. — ANON.

Fancy.

Fancy, like a spright,
Prefers the silent scenes of night.

— NATHANIEL COTTON.

Fancy, like the finger of a clock, Runs the great circuit, and is still at home. — COWPER.

Fangless.

Fangless as the fat worms of the grave. — JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Fantastic.

Fantastical, like a sick man's dreams.
— ANON.

Fantastic . . . as the sports of a
Naiad. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Fantastic as a war-dance. — G. K.
CHESTERTON.

Fantastic as a Chinese weapon. —
MAURICE MAETERLINCK.

Fantastic as a woman's mood. —
SIR WALTER SCOTT.

A fantastic splendor as of Aladdin and Arabian nights. — ISRAEL ZANG-WILL.

Far.

Far as good is above evil. — ANON.

As far from the heart as from the eyes. — IBID.

As far as finite is from infinite. —
P. J. BAILEY.

Far — continued.

Far as mortal eye can compass sight. — BYRON.

Atom from atom yawns as far
As moon from earth, or star from star.
— EMERSON.

Far as poles asunder. — J. S. KNOWLES.

Afar as angels or the sainted dead.
— GEORGE MACDONALD.

Far as imagination's eye can roll. — MONTGOMERY.

Far as human man is from the brute.
— LEWIS MORRIS.

As far as sleep from waking. — JOHN G. NEIHARDT.

And no star
Is from thy mortal path so far
As streets where childhood knew the way.
— D. G. ROSSETTI.

As far from help as limbo is from bliss. — SHAKESPEARE.

So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bud bit with an envious worm,
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
— IBID.

Far as the remotest line
That bounds imagination's flight.
— SHELLEY.

Burning far, like the light of an unmeasured star. — IBID.

Far as heaven's red labouring eye could glance. — SWINBURNE.

Far as hope from joy or sleep from truth. — IBID.

Far from earth as heaven. — IBID.

Far and wide, like the falcon that hunts through the sky. — ESAIAS TEGNER.

Fascinate.

Fascinate — as a snake would a bird. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Fascinating.

Fascinating as a loose tooth. — ANON.

Fashion.

An Englishman of fashion is like one of those souvenirs, bound in gold vellum, enriched with delicate engravings, on thick hot-pressed paper, fit for the hands of ladies and princes, but with nothing in it worth reading or remembering. — EMERSON.

A man of fashion is like a certain blue flower, growing spontaneously in ploughed grounds, which chokes the corn, spoils the crop, and takes up the room of something better. — M. DE LA BRUYÈRE.

For fashion's sake, as bawds go to church. — JOHN WEBSTER.

Fast.

Fast as a jack rabbit in front of a prairie fire. — ANON.

Fast as a dog will lick a dish. — IBID.

As fast as the foam-flakes drift on the river. — IBID.

As fast as a fisher could let out line. — J. M. BARRIE.

Fast as Time's swift pinions can convey. — SAMUEL BOYSE.

Fast as the streaming rain. — CHAT-TERTON.

Gulp it down as fast as a Neapolitan beggar does a plateful of free scalding-hot macaroni. — HENRY T. FINCK.

Served as fast as you throw the five baseballs at the colored gentleman's head. — O. HENRY.

Our days run
As fast away as does the sun ;
And as a vapour, or a drop of rain
Once lost, can ne'er be found again.
— ROBERT HERRICK.

Fast as the rolling seasons bring
The hour of fate to those we love.
— O. W. HOLMES.

Fast — continued.

Fast as light. — HUGO.

Fast as a horse can trot. — BEN JONSON.

Spend vows as fast as vapors, which go off

Even with the fumes.

— CHARLES LAMB.

Fast as windy flames devour. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Fading fast as rainbows. — THOMAS MOORE.

Held her fast, mercilessly, as a snake holds a little bird. — MISS MULOCK.

Fast as a dog can trot. — RABELAIS.

Fast as the magnet flies. — EDMOND ROSTAND.

As fast as the simoon's desert wind. — FRIEDRICH RÜCKERT.

Fast as an eagle through the air. — SCHILLER.

Fast

As lagging fowls before the northern blast. — SHAKESPEARE.

Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees Their medicinal gum. — IBID.

Entrap the hearts of men, faster than gnats in cobwebs. — IBID.

Faster than thought or time. — IBID.

Fast as autumn days toward winter. — SWINBURNE.

Fast as fire on earth devours. — IBID.

Fast as the gin's grip of a wayfarer. — IBID.

Fast as warriors grip their brands when battle's bolt is hurled. — IBID.

Made fast as with anchors to land. — IBID.

Fast in bondage as herded beasts. — IBID.

Fast as storm could speed. — IBID.

Faster than dolphins do o'ershoot the tide, cours'd by the yawning shark. — C. J. WELLS.

Fast as a musician scatters sound Out of an instrument.

— WORDSWORTH.

Fasten.

Like one drowning fastens upon anything that is next at hand. — JOHN EARLE.

Fastened like nails in a cartwheel. — SIR WALTER RALEIGH.

Fasten him as a nail in a sure place. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Fat.

Fat as a bacon-pig at Martlemas. — ANON.

Fat as brawn. — IBID.

Fat as a sheep's tail. — IBID.

A red bag, fat with your unpaid bills, like a landing net. — DION BOUCICAULT.

Fat as Mother Nab. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

Fat as a whale. — CHAUCER.

Fat as a barn-door fowl. — CONGREVE.

Fat as seals. — CHARLES HALLOCK.

Fatte as a foole. — LYLY.

As fat as a distillery pig. — SCOTTISH PROVERB.

As fat as a Miller's horse. — IBID.

Fat as butter. — SHAKESPEARE.

Fat as tame things. — IBID.

Fat and fulsome to mine ear As howling after music. — IBID.

Fat as grease. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Grow fat as the heifer at grass. — IBID.

Fatal.

Fatal as Herod's worms. — ANON.

Fatal — continued.

Fatal as the eye of the basilisk. — ANON.

Fatal as the tongue of the serpent. — IBID.

Fatal as the shade of Death's dark valley. — P. J. BAILEY.

Fatal as the scythe of death. — COWPER.

Anger and power are as fatal as lightning. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Fatal as the Egyptian night,
When the eldest-born were slain.
— JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Fate.

My fate is like that of an eagle, who, being shot with an arrow, observes his own feathers on the arrow that kills him. — CHESTERFIELD.

Faultless.

Faultless as blown roses in June days. — EDWARD DOWDEN.

Faultless as a flower. — SWINBURNE.

Favors.

I do confess thou'rt sweet, yet find
Thee such an unthrift of thy sweets,
Thy favours are but like the wind
That kisses everything it meets.
And since thou canst with more than one,
Thou'rt worthy to be kiss'd by none.
— SIR ROBERT AYTON.

Fawn.

Fawn like spaniels. — MARLOWE.

Fawned like hounds. — SHAKESPEARE.

Fawning like a courtier parasite. — VOLTAIRE.

Fear.

Fear, like spare diet, starves the fevers of lust and quenches the flames of hell. — O. W. HOLMES.

Fear on fear, like light reflected from the dancing wave, visits all places, but can rest in none. — ROBERT JEPHSON.

As corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost chok'd by unresisted lust.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells. — IBID.

Fear is like a cloak which old men huddle
About their love, as if to keep it warm.
— WORDSWORTH.

Fearful.

Fearful as a locust bane. — C. F. ALEXANDER.

Fearful, like a dog an old master drives away, and which fears the new one. — OUIDA.

Fearful as a siege. — SHAKESPEARE.

Fearless.

Fearless as the strong-winged eagle. — JAMES MACPHERSON.

Fearless as a drunkard. — THOMAS MIDDLETON.

Bred him fearless, like a sea-mew reared

In rocks of man's foot feared,
Where nought of wingless life may sing or shine. — SWINBURNE.

Fearlessly.

Fearlessly, like a happy child, too innocent to fear. — SOUTHEY.

Feast.

Feast like Dives. — ANON.

Feast like Lucullus. — IBID.

Feasting like fiends upon the infidel dead. — SHELLEY.

Feeble.

Feeble as a lamb's bleat. — ANON.

Feeble as the wing of a chicken in the pip. — CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

Feed.

Feed like an oxen at a stall. — SHAKESPEARE.

Feed on us, as worms devour our body. — SHELLEY.

Feel.

Nature meant that a fat man should have an appetite and that he should gratify it at regular intervals — meant that he should feel like the Grand Canyon before dinner and the Royal Gorge afterward. — IRVIN S. COBB.

Feelings.

It is with feelings as with waters : the shallow murmur, but the deep are dumb. — SIR WALTER RALEIGH.

The feelings, like flowers and butterflies, last longer the later they are delayed. — RICHTER.

Feet.

Her pretty feet like snails, did creep

A little out, and then,
As if they played at bo-peep,
Did soon draw in again.

— ROBERT HERRICK.

To make the tale of her charms
complete,

They [her hands] were matched by the shape of her exquisite feet,
Feet so light no maid might show,
So perfectly fashioned from heel to toe,
If on the eye of a lover she stepped,
Her foot would float on the tear he wept. — JAMI.

Her feet beneath her petticoat,
Like little mice, stole in and out,
As if they feared the light.

— SIR JOHN SUCKLING.

A baby's feet, like sea-shells pink,
Might tempt, should heaven see meet,
An angel's lips to kiss, we think,
A baby's feet.

Like rose-hued sea-flowers toward the heat

They stretch and spread and wink
Their ten soft buds that part and meet.

— SWINBURNE.

Felicity.

Domestic felicity, which, like the small-pox or the plague, a man can have only once in his life. — GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Fell.

(See also Fall.)

Fell like piled-up cards. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Fell as thick as harvests beneath hail. — BYRON.

The charioteer fell like a fluttered leaf ;
Or as feather shaken from the wing
Of some high-soaring eagle, when the hail

Falls in a whirlwind and the woods cry back. — LORD DE TABLEY.

Jussac fell like a mass of dead flesh. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Fell like a ninepin. — JOSÉ ECHEGARAY.

The stars of heaven fell calmly away,
Like flakes of snow in a winter day.
— JAMES HOGG.

She fell like a column of water. —
W. D. HOWELLS.

He fell as one struck dead. —
J. S. KNOWLES.

His face fell like a cookbook cake.
— JOSEPH C. LINCOLN.

Fell, like a flail on the garnered grain. — LONGFELLOW.

Like corn before the sickle the stout
Lavinians fell. — MACAULAY.

He fell, like the bank of a mountain-stream. — JAMES MACPHERSON.

She . . . fell from her full height as a stone drops from a rock into the gulf below. — OUIDA.

Like the watch-tower of a town
Which an earthquake shatters down,
Like a lightning-stricken mast,
Like a wind-uprooted tree
Spun about,

Like a foam-topped waterspout
Cast down headlong in the sea,
She fell at last. — C. G. ROSSETTI.

Fell, like ocean's feathery spray
Dashed from the boiling surge
Before the vessel's prow.

— SHELLEY.

Fell — continued.

Fell, like the unseen blight of a smiling day. — SHELLEY.

Fell fast, as the seared leaves that from the trembling tree the autumn whirlwind shakes. — SOUTHEY.

Fell like ripe grass before the mower's scythe. — IBID.

Fell like a thousand of brick. — SIMON SUGGS.

Fell as falls an ember from forth a flameless pile. — SWINBURNE.

Fell a spirit, as sinks the star of day beneath its watery bed of western waves. — JOSEPH TURNLEY.

But I fell ;
Fell, like the snow-flakes, from heaven
— to hell.

JOHN W. WATSON.

Fell upon his ears like fire-bell at night. — THOMAS WATSON.

Ferments.

Ferments like boiling yeast. — GEORGE MAC-HENRY.

Like smoke, along the level of the blast,
In mighty currents.

— WORDSWORTH.

Fluctuant.

Fluctuant, as the ark of Noah. — BACON.

Fluctuate.

Fluctuated like a stormy sea, urged by the secret Furies. — THOMAS
ASHE.

Fluctuate — continued.

Fluctuated as flowers in rain
That bends them and they tremble and rise again
And heave and straighten and quiver all through with bliss
And turn afresh their mouths up for a kiss,
Amorous, athirst of that sweet influent love. — SWINBURNE.

Fluctuates like a sleepy wave. —
BAYARD TAYLOR.

Fluent.

Fluent as the skylark sings
When first the morn allures its wings.
— AKENSIDE.

As fluent as a parrot is,
And far more Polly-glottish.
— HOOD.

Fluent as the sea. — SHAKESPEARE.

Fluid.

Fluid as a cloud or the air. — EMER-SON.

Flurried.

Helpless and flurried as a fish landed on a grassy bank with a barbed hook through his gills. — OUIDA.

Flush.

Flushed to radiance where they stood,
Like statues by the open tomb
Of shining saints half risen.
— E. B. BROWNING.

Flushed . . . like a rose. — AUBREY DE VERE.

Rosy flushes, like warm dreams of love. — FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE.

Flushes, like some young Hebe's lip.
— THOMAS MOORE.

Have ne'er by shame been taught to blush.

Like vernal roses in the sun flush.
— IBID.

Flushed as one afire with wine. —
SWINBURNE.

Flutter.

Fluttered like a dead leaf in a blast. — P. J. BAILEY.

Fluttered like a winged asp. —
IBID.

Fluttering like a raven wounded.
— R. D. BLACKMORE.

Its meaning flutters in me like a flame under my own breath. — E. B.
BROWNING.

Fluttering, like dumb creatures before storms. — IBID.

Fluttered like a tame bird, in among its forest brothers far too strong for it. — IBID.

Flutter . . . like sparrows round an
owl. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Flutters up and down like a butterfly in a garden. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

Flutters as wing'd with joy. —
BYRON.

Flutters as an unreal shadow. —
CARLYLE.

Flutterings as in a slumbering aviary. — DAUDET.

Fluttered like a bird with broken wings. — DICKENS.

Flutter like snowflakes. — HAMLIN GARLAND.

Fluttering like a piece of gold leaf.
— HAZLITT.

Fluttered noiseless as a flame. —
J. G. HOLLAND.

Fluttering like new-mown hay. —
O. W. HOLMES.

Flutter like a flickering, dying lamp. — SIGMUND KRASINSKI.

Fluttered like a lark. — GERALD MASSEY.

Flutters like a bird fresh caught. —
MISS MITFORD.

Flutter — continued.

Fluttering like a prisoned bird. —
LEWIS MORRIS.

Flutters like a flower
Along the glory of the hills.
— JOHN PAYNE.

Made my own heart flutter as a bird that beats for freedom at the bars that prison it. — JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Gauzy wings fluttered by Like the ghost of a daisy dropped out of the sky. — IBID.

Fluttering like pigeons. — C. G.
ROSSETTI.

I flutter like a child after her mother.
— SAPPHO.

Fluttered, like a vision. — SCHILLER.

Like snow-coloured petals
Of blossoms that flee
From storm that unsettles
The flower as the tree
They flutter.

— SWINBURNE.

Fluttering like spent fire. — IBID.

Fluttered like a callow lark,
With dim fore-feeling of the azure free, Sustaining wing and strength of song-ful glee. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Like an angel's pinion, fluttereth. —
J. T. TROWBRIDGE.

Fly.

(See also Fled and Flee.)

Each mysterious form, Flew like the pictures of a morning dream. — AKENSIDE.

Flew along like a bird in a tempest.
— ANON.

Flies like antic shapes in dreams.
— IBID.

His arms flew like a windmill. —
IBID.

Flying, like blown flame. — IBID.

Flies like chaff wide scattered by the wind. — IBID.

Flew like feathered Mercury. —
IBID.

Flew like granado. — IBID.

Words flew out of his mouth as shot out of a gatling gun. — IBID.

Flew like a cloth-yard shaft from a bended yew. — R. H. BARHAM.

Fly, like a yelping Cur with a Bottle at his Tail. — COLLEY CIBBER.

Fly as the leaves before the autumn tempest. — IBID.

Fly as a bird on the wings of Night.
— ARABIAN NIGHTS.

Fly like . . . the northern wind. —
FRANCIS BEAUMONT.

Fly, like a full sail. — BEAUMONT
AND FLETCHER.

Fly like chaff before the wind. —
JAMES BOSWELL.

Flying . . . like scatterings of dead leaves in autumn-gusts. — E. B.
BROWNING.

Flew, as if he knew
A frenzied wretch was on his back.
— ELIZA COOK.

Fly as from the plague. — JOHN DAVIES.

Flies like a feather in the blast. —
JOSEPH R. DRAKE.

Away like a glance of thought he flew. — IBID.

Flies like the nimble journeys of the light. — DRYDEN.

Fly like doves that the exalted eagle
spies. — RICHARD DUKE.

Friends have flown, like leaves whirled away by the blast. — MRS.
E. FORRESTER.

A headlong crowd is flying Like a billow that has broken and is shivered into spray.

— O. W. HOLMES.

Fly — continued.

Fly

Like the cannons that burst on the Fourth of July. — IBID.

Flew as in a dream. — HUGO.

Sparks that fly
Like chaff from a threshing-floor.
— LONGFELLOW.

Flies like a bird unfettered from her cage. — MARIA LOWELL.

Flew like sparks in burnt up paper.
— LOWELL.

Fly as fast as Iris or Jove's Mercury.
— MARLOWE.

Fly as fast as the hare from the horn. — BRIAN MELBANCKE.

Flown

Like a smoke melted thinner than air,
That the vacancy doth disown.
— GEORGE MEREDITH.

Flew around like the spray on a storm-driven deck. — JOAQUIN MILLER.

Flown, like morning clouds, a thousand ways. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

All flew like the down of a thistle.
— CLEMENT C. MOORE.

Swiftly flew as glancing flame. —
THOMAS MOORE.

Flown are those days with their winged delights, as the odor is gone from the summer rose. — LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON.

Flew like the swift and dazzling flight of gold-winged orioles. — OUIDA.

As before the pike will fly
Dace and roach and such small fry;
As the leaf before the gale,
As the chaff beneath the flail,
As before the wolf the flocks,
As before the hounds the fox;
As before the cat the mouse,
As the rat from falling house;
As the fiend before the spell
Of holy water, book, and bell;
As the ghost from dawning day.

— THOMAS L. PEACOCK.

Some fly, like pendulums, from good to evil,
And in that point are madder than the devil. — CHRISTOPHER PITT.

He flies like a dog that has burnt his paw. — OSMANLI PROVERB.

Flew as the spirit flies from the dead. — D. G. ROSSETTI.

Fly like eagles which pursue their prey. — GEORGE SANDYS.

Flew at him, like the young hero Siegfried when he attacked the wild, long-bearded dwarf Alberich. —
JOSEPH V. VON SCHEFFEL.

Flown like the light clouds of a Summer's day. — JOHN SCOTT.

Fly, like mist before the zephyr's sigh. — SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Fly like chidden Mercury from Jove. — SHAKESPEARE.

Like falcon to the lure, away she flies. — IBID.

Fly like thought. — IBID.

Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly. — IBID.

Like a flock of rooks at a farmer's gun
Night's dreams and terrors, every one, Fled from the brains which are their prey. — SHELLEY.

Flew like the wind. — JOHN SKEL-TON.

Flew at him like an hellish fiend. —
SPENSER.

Flew like a wyld gote. — IBID.

Fly, like scattered sheepe. — IBID.

Flew away as lightly as the wind.
— IBID.

Flying fast as roebucke through the fen. — IBID.

Flie, as leapes the deere fled from the hunter's face. — EARL OF STIR-LING.

Fly as if the devil drove. — SWIFT.

Fly — continued.

Fly away as a dream. — IBID.

Flown as flies the blown foam's feather. — SWINBURNE.

Fly as the eagle that hasteth to eat.
— OLD TESTAMENT.

Flew like a blossom blown about.
— WALTER THORNBURY.

Flown,
Like birds from the nest when their wings have grown.
— JOHN T. TROWBRIDGE.

Fly,
Like doves before the gathering storm.
— G. S. VIERECK.

Flown,
Like the morning-glory's cup.
— AMELIA B. WELBY.

Fly like flower-seeds on the breeze.
— N. P. WILLIS.

Foam.

Foamed like a wounded thing. —
SHELLEY.

Foamed like a flagon. — M. E. STEBBINS.

Foaming at the mouth like Champagne bottles. — ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

Fold.

The soft palms fold like kissing shells. — ANON.

Folds up like a crush hat or a concertina. — IRVIN S. COBB.

Folded like a wave. — O. W. HOLMES.

Shall fold their tents like the Arabs and as silently steal away. — LONGFELLOW.

The flowers fold their cups like praying hands. — GERALD MASSEY.

Folded like thoughts in a dream. —
SHELLEY.

Eyelids folded like a white-rose leaf.
— SWINBURNE.

Folded up as folds a primrose when the gates of day are shut. — EUGENE FITCH WARE.

Follow.

Follow the track of blood . . .
Like to some hound that hunts a wounded fawn. — ÆSCHYLUS.

Follow like a flock of sheep. — ANON.

Follow . . . like geese on a common. — IBID.

Follow one like Anthony's pig. —
IBID.

Followed fate as an Irishman a wheelbarrow. — IBID.

Follows like a shadow. — IBID.

Followed faithfully
As if 'twere his shadow.
— EDWIN ARNOLD.

Follow'd her desire, as sunlight tracks the shadow of a cloud. —
THOMAS ASHE.

I be bounde to followe it,
As the carpenter his ruler.
— ENGLISH BALLAD.

Follow one another like ducks in a gutter. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

The jackals of the desert follow their prey in families, like the place-hunters of Europe. — JOHN BRIGHT.

Followed like a comet-tail. — CAR-LYLE.

Followed like a child after the Pied Piper. — O. HENRY.

Follow each other, like surge upon surge. — WILLIAM KNOX.

Misfortune follows him like a faithful hound. — STEPHEN PHILLIPS.

Follow, as the night the day. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Followed . . . like one drawn by a charm. — E. R. SILL.

Follow — continued.

Youth follows life, as bees the honeybell. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Will follow thee,
As the ripple follows the bark at sea.
— WHITTIER.

Like geese each other follow.
— GEORGE WITHERS.

Folly.

Folly is like the growth of weeds, always luxurious and spontaneous; wisdom, like flowers, requires cultivation. — HOSEA BALLOU.

Folly is like a sore on a surfeited horse, cure it in one place and it breaks out in another. — DRYDEN.

Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour: so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Fond.

Fond as cat is of milk. — ANON.

Fond as the miser is of his gold.
— IBID.

Fond and sad as Juliet. — ROBERT BRIDGES (American).

Fond as a bride. — JOHN GAY.

Fond as hounds are of running after foxes. — HOOD.

Fonder than ignorance. — SHAKESPEARE.

Fond of an old sweetheart as a brisk widow of her third husband.
— JOHN WILSON.

Fool.

Fools are as like husbands as pilchards are to herrings. — SHAKESPEARE.

A fool, like a bottle, which would make you merry in company, will make you dull alone. — VANBROUGH.

Fools, like apes, are mimics from their birth. — WILLIAM WHITEHEAD.

Foolery.

Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb like the sun: it shines every where. — SHAKESPEARE.

Foolish.

Foolish as a calf. — ANON.

Foolish as an endeavor to make a lobster climb a tree and give a report of the atmospheric conditions. — IBID.

Foolish as a peacock. — IBID.

Foolish as to scratch one's head with a firebrand. — IBID.

Foolish as the tailor who sews sleeves to the pocket holes. — IBID.

Foolish as to flash a roll of bills before a lawyer. — IBID.

Foolish as to talk of color to a blind man. — IBID.

Foolish as to try to pull hair from a bald man's head. — IBID.

There is just this difference between a fule and a hen, the fule cackles before, the hen not till after the egg is laid. — JOSH BILLINGS.

More foolish than the prodigal who eats
The husks of sense.

— LEWIS MORRIS.

Foolish, as to look for a rainbow in the night. — SYDNEY MUNDEN.

Foolish as to have confidence to promise himself three years. — RABELAIS.

Foolish as the disturbing phantoms of the night. — WALTER TRUMBULL.

Foolish as a search would be for new sunlight to illuminate the marbles of Michael Angelo. — WILLIAM WINTER.

Forbidding.

Forbidding as a mourning card. — COMPTON MACKENZIE.

Force.

Creative force, like a musical composer, goes on unwearyingly repeating a simple air or theme, now high, now low, in solo, in chorus, ten thousand times reverberated, till it fills earth and heaven with the chant.

— EMERSON.

Forcible.

Forcible as custom. — BACON.

Forehead.

Her forehead's like the show'ry bow,
When shining sunbeams intervene,
And gild the distant mountain's brow.

— BURNS.

A forehead more pure than the Parian stone. — WHITTIER.

Foremost.

Foremost in his mind,
Like the keen prow of some on-forging ship.

— PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR.

Forged.

Forged like steel and tempered thought. — SWINBURNE.

Forgiving.

Forgiving like unto the Earth herself. — MAHABHARATA.

Forgotten.

Forgotten like waves on the sea. — ANON.

Thrown aside and forgotten as are the hoofs and horns of a buffalo. — J. FENIMORE COOPER.

By all forgot, like a flower whose stem is broken. — BARRY CORNWALL.

Forgotten, as the foliage of thy youth. — COWPER.

Forgotten like the forms of last year's clouds. — FRANKLIN.

Poor and forgotten like a clod upon the field. — HUGO.

Forgotten like an almanac out of date. — M. DE LA BRUYÈRE.

Forgotten like an antique tale Of Hero and Leander.

— CHARLES LAMB.

Forgotten as a fallen star. — HARRY B. SMITH.

Forgotten as changes of dreams. — SWINBURNE.

Forgotten like spilt wine. — IBID.

Forgotten as a dead man out of mind. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Forgotten like a dream. — WORDSWORTH.

Forked.

Forked like the loveliest lightnings.
— SWINBURNE.

Forlorn.

As forlorn as the faded coquette. — WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER.

Forlorn
As midnight, and despairing of a morn.
— COWPER.

Forlorn,
As the night-owl's sob of fear,
As Memnon moaning at morn.
— JEAN INGELOW.

Formal.

Formal and precise, like rooms which we enter and leave, not those in which we settle and dwell. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Formal . . . as the veil of a nun.
— HENRY JAMES.

Formal as a Quaker. — GEORGE P. MORRIS.

Formless.

Formless as air. — P. J. BAILEY.

Formless as midnight. — HUGO.

Forsaken.

Forsaken like some old house one moves out of and locks up when one has gotten a new one. — BJÖRNSTJERNE BJÖRNSSON.

Forsaken, as ships go to old Davy.
— HOOD.

Forsaken — continued.

Forsake us soon, like morning-stars.
— JOHN POMFRET.

Forsaken, like the shadows that fly from the dawn. — WILLIAM WINTER.

Fortune.

Fortune, like other females, delights rather on favoring the young than the old. — ADDISON.

Fortune is like women, loves youth and is fickle. — ANON.

Fortune is like the market, where,
many times, if you can stay a little,
the price will fall; and again, it is sometimes like Sibylla's offer, which at first offereth the commodity at full, then consumeth part and part, and still holdeth up the price. —
BACON.

The way of Fortune is like the milky way in the sky; which is a meeting, or knot, of a number of small stars, not seen asunder, but giving light together; so are there a number of little and scarce discerned virtues, or rather faculties and customs, that make men fortunate. — IBID.

Fortune resembles an unjust distributor of the Olympic prizes, in so much as she most frequently bestows her favours on the undeserving. —
DEMOPHILUS.

False Fortune, like a fawning strumpet,
About to leave the bankrupt prodigal,
With a dissembled smile would kiss at parting,
And flatter to the last. — DRYDEN.

Good fortune, like ripe fruit, ought to be enjoyed while it is present. — EPICETUS.

Many fortunes, like rivers, have a pure source, but grow muddy as they grow large. — J. PETIT-SENN.

Fortune is like a widow won,
And truckles to the bold alone.
— WILLIAM SOMERVILLE.

Fortune, like other drabs, values a man gradually less for every year he lives. — SWIFT.

Fortune is like glass — the brighter the glitter, the more easily it is broken.
— PUBLIUS SYRUS.

Fortune as well as women must be taken in the humor. — WYCHERLEY.

Forward.

Forward like a fierce hound straining on a leash. — SIR A. CONAN
DOYLE.

Forward like a wind-blown flame.
— FRANCIS THOMPSON.

Foul.

Foul as Zebedee's hen that laid three rotten eggs to a good one. — J. R. BARTLETT'S "DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS."

Foul, like a birding place. — THOMAS DEKKER.

Foul as a sty.
— EDGAR LEE MASTERS.

Foul as slander. — SHAKESPEARE.

Foul as Vulcan's stithy. — IBID.

Foul as bloated pestilence. —
RICHARD SHEIL.

Foul as plague-polluted gloom. —
SWINBURNE.

Foundling.

The devoted benches of public justice were filled by some of those foundlings of fortune, who, overwhelmed in the torrent of corruption at an early period, lay at the bottom, like drowned bodies, while soundness or sanity remained in them; but, at length, becoming buoyant by putrefaction, they rose as they rotted, and floated to the surface of the polluted stream, where they were drifted along, the objects of terror, and contagion, and abomination. — J. P.
CURRAN.

Fragile.

Fragile as a lily. — ANON.

Fragile as rainbows. — IBID.

Fragile as a shade. — BALZAC.

Fragile as a dream. — WALTER MALONE.

Fragile as a leaf. — DONALD G. MITCHELL.

As fragile as a strand of rain. — JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Fragile as some dream which Hope with hollow hand hath guided. — MARY A. TOWNSEND.

Fragrance.

The fragrance of her rich and delightful character still lingered about the place where she had lived, as a dried rosebud scents the drawer where it has withered and perished. — HAWTHORNE.

Fragrant.

As fragrant as clover's sod. — ANON.

Fragrant as musk. — IBID.

Fragrant as field-flowers. — BALZAC.

Fragrant . . . as May. — LORD DE TABLEY.

Fragrant as a violet on a summer's night. — EMERSON.

Fragrant as the breath of angels. — O. W. HOLMES.

Fragrant as thyme upon the mountains. — DR. JOHNSON.

Apples, as fragrant, and as bright a hue, as those which in Alcinous' gardens grew, mellowed by constant sunshine; or as those, which graced the Hesperides, in burnished rows. — JUVENAL.

Fragrant as the morning rose. — MARLOWE.

Fragrant as the frosted blossom of a May night. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Fragrant as the dewfall. — SWINBURNE.

Fragrant as lilacs. — THACKERAY.

Fragrant as the breath of flow'rs. — WILLIAM THOMSON.

Frail.

Frail as a lily. — ANON.

Frail as flesh is. — LAMAN BLANCHARD.

Frail as the leaf in Autumn's yellow bower. — CAMPBELL.

Frail as the clouds. — DE QUINCEY.

Frail as a sigh. — SYDNEY DOBELL.

Frail as the web that misty night has spun. — O. W. HOLMES.

Frail as dishes. — HOOD.

Frail as frost-landscapes on a window-pane. — LOWELL.

Frail as the clouds of sunset. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Frail as glass. — PETRARCH.

Frail as a flake of snow. — A. J. RYAN.

Frail
As May's first lily in a Northern vale.
— BAYARD TAYLOR.

Frail
As perfume of the cuckoo-flower.
— TENNYSON.

Frank.

Frank as growths of spring. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Frank as a soldier. — JAMES GRAHAME.

Frank as the call of April birds.
— W. E. HENLEY.

Frank as the day. — CHARLES READE.

Frantic.

Frantic as a war dance. — ANON.

Frantic like a madman's dream. — GEORGE GRANVILLE.

Frayed.

Frayed like fretted foam. — ALFRED AUSTIN.

Freckled.

Freckled like a pard. — KEATS.

Free.

Free,
As Thames and Seine, St. Lawrence,
Nile, and Ganges,
Mingled in one illimitable sea.
— GRANT ALLEN.

to fly east as west. — E. B. BROWNING.

Free as light. — IBID.

Free as a babe from cheating. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Free as cloud and sunbeam are. — IBID.

Free and winding as a poet's thought through his verse. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Free and graceful . . . like Dian when the bounding hart she tracks through the morning dew. — CHÆREMON.

Free as the wind. — CHATTERTON.

Free as the light and air. — CHURCHILL.

Free as water. — WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT.

Free as the sunbeams on the chainless air. — ROBERT T. CONRAD.

Free-handed as a harlot. — JOHN DAVIDSON.

Free as a liberated ghost. — SYDNEY DOBELL.

Free and noble as clear poesy. — MICHAEL DRAYTON.

Free as nature first made man. — DRYDEN.

Free as an Arab. — EMERSON.

Free as a mountain bird. — W. S. GILBERT.

Free as a tethered ass. — IBID.

Free as the hawk. — GOETHE.

Smiling free, as rose to summer air.
— DORA GREENWELL.

Free as the soul. — EDWARD HAKE.

Free, like one who trails the plough.
— SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN.

Good and free
As when poor Eve was innocent.
— JEAN INGELOW.

Free as an eagle. — KEATS.

Free as the sky-searching lark.

Free as first innocence. — OTWAY.

Free as mountain winds. — SHAKESPEARE.

Freer than a jailer. — IBID.

Free in spirit as the mountain. — SHELLEY.

Free from flaw or stain as diamond from the mine. — D. B. W. SLADEN.

Free,

As the stars' mountain-tops be,
As the pearl, in the depths of the sea,
From the portionless king that wears it. — E. C. STEDMAN.

Free

As birds that breast and brave the sea. — SWINBURNE.

Free as the circling sea. — IBID.

Free as heaven. — IBID.

Free-born as winds and stars and waves are free. — IBID.

Freer than birds or dreams are free. — IBID.

Free as song. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

As free as the eagle's wing. — HENRY D. THOREAU.

Free as fishing is. — IZAAK WALTON.

Free as Emperors. — WILLIAM WARD.

Free as our rivers are Ocean-ward going.

Fret as in a cage. — FREDERICK W. FABER.

Fret,

Like a pupil of Walton and Cotton,
Who remains by the brink of the water,
agape,

While the jack, trout, or barbel effects its escape

Thro' the gut or silk line being rotten. — HOOD.

Fretting like a wild horse struggling to escape. — HUGO.

Frets like a gummed velvet. — SHAKESPEARE.

Friend.

A false friend is like a shadow on a dial; it appears in clear weather, but vanishes as soon as a cloud approaches. — ANON.

A true friend is like sound health; the value of it is seldom known until it is lost. — IBID.

A real friend is somewhat like a ghost or apparition; much talked of, but rarely seen. — CHARLES N. BUCK.

The malyce of a friend, is like the sting of an Aspe, which nothing can remedie, for being pearced in the hande it must be cut off, and a friend thrust to the heart it must be pulled out. — LYLY.

But as all floures that are in one Nosegay, are not of one nature, nor all Rings that are worne vppon one hande, are not of one fashion: so all friendes that associate at bedde and at boord, are not one of disposition. — IBID.

Friends are like melons: to find one good, you must a hundred try. — CLAUDE MERMET.

A friend both wise and true amid all shocks resplendent shines, like fire upon a rock's high top, which dissipates the darkness round and fills the travellers by with joy profound. — ORIENTAL.

A friend should be like money, tried before being required, not found faulty in our need. — PLUTARCH.

A profitless friend is like a fleece without hair. — OSMANLI PROVERB.

An untried friend is like an uncracked nut. — RUSSIAN PROVERB.

A new friend is as new wine; when it is old thou shalt drink it with pleasure. — SIRACH.

Old friends, like old swords, still are trusted best. — JOHN WEBSTER.

Friends, like mistresses, are avoided for obligations past. — WYCHERLEY.

Friendless.

Friendless as an alarm clock. — ANON.

Friendly.

Friendly as a spotted leopard that's been stirred up with an elephant hook. — SEWELL FORD.

Friendly as a puppy. — BETTINA VON HUTTEN.

Friendship.

The friendship of a great man is like the shadow of a bush, soon gone. — ANON.

The friendship of the ever-genial man is too often like a grate-fire, exceedingly bright to look at, but not reliable in so far as the dispensation of warmth on a really cold day is concerned. — IBID.

False friendship, like the ivy, decays and ruins the walls it embraces; but true friendship gives new life and animation to the object it supports. — ROBERT BURTON.

Friendship — continued.

As the Sun is in the Firmament, so is friendship in the world, a most divine and heavenly band.—ROBERT BURTON.

The firmest friendships have been formed in mutual adversity, as iron is most strongly united by the fiercest flame. — C. C. COLTON.

Friendship is less apparent when too nigh,
Like objects when they touch the eye. — COWLEY.

As the harbour is the refuge of the ship from the tempest, so is friendship the refuge of man in adversity. — DEMOPHILUS.

Friendship, like love, is but a name,
Unless to one you stint the flame. —
The child whom many fathers share,
Hath seldom known a father's care.
'Tis thus in friendship; who depend On many, rarely find a friend.

— JOHN GAY.

Friendship is like a debt of honor; the moment it is talked of it loses its real name, and assumes the more ungrateful form of obligation. — GOLD-SMITH.

The feeling of friendship is like that of being comfortably filled with roast beef. — DR. JOHNSON.

Friendship, like love, is destroyed by long absence, though it may be increased by short intermissions. — IBID.

Friendship should be like the wine which Homer much commending, calleth Maroneum, whereof one pient [pint] being mingled with five quartes of water, yet it keepeth his old strength and vertue, not to be qualified by any discourtesie. Where salt doth grow nothing els can breede, where friendship is built, no offence can harbour. — LYL. Y.

Houses are like friendship; there is hardly one in a thousand worth a long lease. — OUIDA.

Friendship is like those ancient altars where the unhappy, and even the guilty, found a sure asylum. — MADAME SWETCHINE.

Friendship is like rivers, and the strand of seas, and the air, common to all the world; but tyrants, and evil customs, wars, and want of love, have made them proper and peculiar.

— JEREMY TAYLOR.

New friends, like one's best coat and patent-leather boots, are only intended for holiday wear. At other times they are neither serviceable nor comfortable; they do not answer the required purposes, are ill adapted to give us the ease we seek. A new coat, however, has this advantage, that in time it will become old and comfortable; so much can by no means be predicted with certainty of a new friend. — ANTHONY TROLLOPE.

Friendship — our friendship — is like the beautiful shadows of evening, spreading and growing till life and its light pass away. — MIHALY VITKOVICS.

The friendship of the world is like the leaves falling from the trees in autumn; while the sap of maintenance lasts, friends swarm in abundance; but in the winter of our need they leave us naked. — WARWICK.

Genius, like humanity, rusts for want of use. — WILLIAM HAZLITT.

The advent of genius is like what the florists style the breaking of a seedling tulip into what we may call high-caste colors. . . . It is a surprise — there is nothing to account for it. — O. W. HOLMES.

The richest genius, like the most fertile soil, when uncultivated, shoots up into the rankest weeds; and instead of vines and olives for the pleasure and use of man, produces to its slothful owner the most abundant crop of poisons. — DAVID HUME.

The mind contemplates genius through the shades of age, as the eye surveys through artificial capacity.
— DR. JOHNSON.

The glances of women are like certain apparently peaceful but really formidable machines. You pass them every day quietly, with impunity and without suspicion of danger. There comes a moment when you forget even that they are there. You come and go, you muse, and talk, and laugh.
Suddenly you feel that you are seized !
It is done. The wheels have caught you, the glance has captured you. It has taken you, no matter how or where, by any portion whatever of your thought which was trailing, through any absence of mind. You are lost. You will be drawn in entirely. A train of mysterious forces has gained possession of you. You struggle in vain. No human succor is possible. You will be drawn down from wheel to wheel, from anguish to anguish, from torture to torture.

You, your mind, your fortune, your soul; and you will not escape from the terrible machine, until, according as you are in the power of a malevolent nature, or a noble heart, you will be disfigured by shame or transfigured by love. — IBID.

— OLD TESTAMENT.

Your early splendor's gone
Like stars into a cloud withdrawn —
Like music laid asleep
In dried up fountains.

— WILLIAM WALLACE.

Gone, like the summer lightning's gleam. — FRANK WATERS.

Gone
As the fox-hunter follows the sound of the horn. — WHITTIER.

The red man has gone like the mist on the air. — IBID.

Gone as a cloud faded into the sky.
— W. B. YEATS.

Good.

Good as a feast. — ANON.

Good as an addled egg. — IBID.

Good as an idle bird. — IBID.

Good as ever went upon the ground.
— IBID.

Good as new. — IBID.

Beauty is as good as ready money.
— IBID.

Good as truth. — IBID.

Good as dew to flowers. — IBID.

Good as gold. — BALZAC.

Good as white bread and just as insipid. — IBID.

Good as wheat. — J. R. BARTLETT'S
"DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS."

As good as a show. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Good as a play. — CHARLES II.

As good music as when pigs play on the organ. — CLARKE'S "PROVERBS."

Good as ever water wet. — HAZ-LITT'S "PROVERBS."

Good as ever trod upon shoe leather.
— "LONDON CHANTICLEERS."

Good as bread. — LONGFELLOW.

Good — continued.

Good as puppet show. — NORTH-ALL'S "FOLK PHRASES."

Good as ever flew in the air. — JOHN RAY'S "HANDBOOK OF PROVERBS."

Good as a sermon. — SOUTHEY.

Good as a comedy. — JOHN TAYLOR.

To do good to the base is like sowing the sea. — THEOGNIS.

Good-nature.

Good-nature, like a bee, collects honey from every herb. Ill-nature, like a spider, sucks poison from the sweetest flower. — ANON.

Goodness.

True goodness is like the glow-worm in this, that it shines most when no eyes, except those of heaven, are upon it. — A. J. C. HARE.

As a horse when he has run, a bee when he has made honey, so man when he has done a good act does not call out for others to come and see, but he goes on to another act, as the vine goes on to produce again the grapes in season. — MARCUS AURELIUS.

Goodness, like the Sun, enlightens all. — SAMUEL BOYSE.

Goodnesse is like the art prospective: one point center, begetting infinite rayes. — SIR THOMAS OVERBURY.

Your goodness is as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Good-will.

Good-will, like a good name, is got by many actions, and lost by one. — FRANCIS JEFFREY.

Gore.

Gore like the tusks of a boar. — ANON.

Gorgeous.

Gorgeous as a sultana. — ANON.

Gorgeous as are a rivulet's banks in June. — WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Gorgeous as the heavens. — DE QUINCEY.

Gorgeous as the sun at midsummer. — SHAKESPEARE.

Gossip.

A gossip in a village is like a viper in a bed. — ANON.

Gossip, like ennui, is born of idleness. — NINON DE LENCLOS.

Gossipin' about like a cracked bell-clapper. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Gossip must often have been likened to the winged insects bearing pollen to the flowers; it fertilizes many a vacuous reverie. — IBID.

Govern.

Govern the lips as they were palace doors, the King within. — EDWIN ARNOLD.

Government.

A government tumbling and drifting on the whirlpool and mud-deluges, floating atop in a conspicuous manner, no whither, like the carcass of a drowned ass. — CARLYLE.

But when a government is grown in strength,

Like some old oak, rough with its armed bark,

It yields not to the tug, but only nods, And turns to sullen state.

— DRYDEN.

Government, like dress, is the badge of lost innocence. — THOMAS PAINE.

Graceful.

Graceful as an Alpine sapling. — ANON.

Graceful as a bird on the wing. — IBID.

Graceful as a fawn. — IBID.

Graceful as the arch of a rainbow. — IBID.

Graceful — continued.

Graceful as a black frigate with snow white sails. — BALZAC.

Graceful as a springborn fairy. — PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE.

Graceful as Mars. — HOMER (POPE).

Graceful as a snake of the paradise of Asia. — DAVID DE LA GAMME.

Graceful as the willow-bough o'er the streamlet weeping. — LOVER.

As warm and graceful as May. — EDWARD LOVIBOND.

She is graceful as the greenly waving boughs in summer wind. — GERALD MASSEY.

Graceful as a Naiad. — GEORGE MOORE.

Graceful as a faun. — SAMUEL ROGERS.

Graceful as an ivy bough born to cling and lean. — C. G. ROSSETTI.

Graceful as a bow just bent. — RUSKIN.

Graceful and free
As honeysuckles and the lilies be.
— D. B. W. SLADEN.

Graceful as a couchant goddess. — ANTHONY TROLLOPE.

Graceful as the sapphirine tide. — JOSEPH TURNLEY.

Graceful as the shawl-designs
Of Delhi or Umritsir.

— WHITTIER.

Gracefully.

Flit about as gracefully as a pickax in a sack. — IBID.

Gracious.

All gracious and good as when God made the living creatures, and none was afraid. — BLISS CARMAN.

Gracious as a mediæval queen. — THOMAS HEYWOOD.

As gracious as the morn. — HUGO.

Gracious as the golden maiden morn
When darkness craves her blessing.
— SWINBURNE.

Gracious as a duchess. — THACKERAY.

Grand.

Grand like Barbarossa's beard. — ANON.

Grand as a victory. — IBID.

As grand as the world. — JOSEPH A. DE GOBINEAU.

Grand as floor-walkers. — O. HENRY.

Grand as the frigate on the wind. — JEAN INGELow.

Grand as the passion felt but never spoken. — TRACY ROBINSON.

Grand,
As though a distant singing sea broke on a tuneful strand.

— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Grand
As any stone that decks a monarch's hand.

— D. B. W. SLADEN.

Grand as doomsday and as grave.
— TENNYSON.

Grasp.

Grasps, like death. — EBENEZER ELIOTT.

Grasp as firm
As his whose arm is nerved by glory's zeal. — GERALD GRIFFIN.

Grasp like a scourge. — T. BUCHANAN READ.

Grasps as in water, the more she grasped the less she held. — SIR PHILIP SIDNEY.

Grate.

Grate like a sawblade under the file. — HENRIK IBSEN.

Grating like arsenic. — JOHN WOLCOTT.

Grateful.

Thou touchest me gratefully, like Nature's wholesome breath. — NIC-COLO TOMMASEO (D. G. ROSSETTI).

Gratis.

Gratis, as yesternight. — CARLYLE.

Gratitude.

Gratitude is like the good faith of traders, it maintains commerce; and we often pay, not because it is just to discharge our debts, but that we may more readily find people to trust us. — ROCHEFOUCAULD.

Grave.

Grave as an old gate-post. — ANON.

Grave as Pascal. — IBID.

Grave, as the manner of noble men is. — E. B. BROWNING.

Grave as an organ. — DICKENS.

Grave and thoughtful as rich mourners. — DIOGENES.

Grave as actors do in Lent. — PIERCE EGAN.

Grave as a mourning hearse. — IBID.

Grave as Libanius, slumbering o'er the laws. — ELIJAH FENTON.

Grave as a judge. — "POOR ROBIN'S ALMANACK."

Grave

As the unwilling herald of the king. — ARTHUR SYMONS.

Grave as from a funeral. — TENNYSON.

Gravity.

Gravity in a woman is like to a gray beard upon a breaching boise chinne, which a good scholemaister would cause to be clipt, and the wise husband to be avoyded. — LYL-LY.

Gray.

Gray as grannun's cat. — ANON.

Gray as the inside of a pewter dish. — IBID.

Gray hairs are like the light of a soft moon, silvering over the evening of life. — IBID.

Grey as a badger. — R. H. BARHAM.

Gray as shallow sea. — CUCHULAIN.

Grey as a hoary monolith. — G. K. CHESTERTON.

Misty gray, like a cow's breath on a frosty morning. — IRVIN S. COBB.

Grey as the morn. — J. A. SYMONDS.

Her eyes are grey like morning dew. — W. B. YEATS.

Great.

Great as a lord. — FRANCES FAWKES.

It is with great men as with high mountains. They oppress us with awe when we stand under them: they disappoint our insatiable imaginations when we are nigh, but not quite close to them: and then, the further we recede from them, the more astonishing they appear; until . . . they at one moment seem miraculously lifted above earth, and the next strike our fancies as let down from heaven.

— J. C. HARE.

I think myself as great
As Cæsar riding in the Roman street,
With captive kings at his triumphant car. — MARLOWE.

Greed.

Greedy as a hog. — ANON.

Greedy was like a slip-knot drawn more and more tightly about his heart, till reason at length was stifled.
— BALZAC.

As greedy as ten cocks scraping in a dunghill for æ barley pickle. — SCOT-TISH PROVERB.

Greedy as a cormorant. — JOHN SKELTON.

Greedy as hell's mouth. — LEONARD WRIGHT.

Green as the forest's night. —
SHELLEY.

Green as summer. — SWINBURNE.

Green as the salt-sea billows. —
WORDSWORTH.

Greetings.

Christmas greetings are like pots of ore;

The hollower they are they sing the more. — AMBROSE BIERCE.

Grew.

Grew like the summer grass. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Grew,
Like a pale flower by some sad maiden cherished. — SHELLEY.

Grey.

(See Gray.)

Grief.

Woman's grief is like a summer storm, short as it is violent. — JOANNA BAILLIE.

Genuine grief is like penitence, not clamorous, but subdued. — JOSH BIL-LINGS.

Grief — continued.

Grief and passion are like floods raised in little brooks by a sudden rain. — DRYDEN.

Grief, like wine, the tongue will render free. — J. M. LEGARE.

Grief, like night, is salutary. It cools down the soul by the putting out its fevered fires; and if it oppresses her, it also compresses her energies. The load once gone, she will go forth with greater buoyancy to new pleasures. — JOHN PULSFORD.

Grief
Was as a last year's leaf
Blown dead far down the wind's way.
— SWINBURNE.

Grieve.

Grieve like the stranger-tended child,
Which seeks its mother's arms, and sees and feels them not.
— CELIA THAXTER.

Grim.

Grim as a judge. — ANON.

Grim as Cerberus. — IBID.

Grim as death. — IBID.

Grip like some kind of sinning. — ROBERT W. SERVICE.

Gripe.

Gripe as hard Cassibelan. — SHAKESPEARE

Gripe like a convulsion. — COLERIDGE.

Groan.

Groaned
Like some sad prophet, that foresaw the doom
Of those whom best he loved, and could not save. — DRYDEN.

Groans like a cannon-ball. — RICHARD LOVELACE.

Groaneth, like a door on rusty hinges. — TUPPER.

Groaning like a dying horse. — WILLIAM WARD.

Grog.

Grog, like grief, is fatal stuff for any man to sup;
For when it fails to pull him down, it's sure to blow him up.

— JOHN G. SAXE.

Grooved.

Grooved like the sunken spaces between the fingers. — JOHN BURTON Grope.

Groping blindly as in a dream. — HUGO.

Groped like a blind man finding his way. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Gross.

Grosse as a hog. — MIDDLETON.

Gross as a mountain. — SHAKESPEARE.

Gross as ignorance made drunk. — IBID.

Ground.

Ground,
Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody flight. — SHAKESPEARE.

Groundless.

Groundless as the dreams of philosophy. — LAURENCE STERNE.

Group.

As the moths around a taper,
As the bees around a rose,
As the gnats around a vapour,
So the spirits group and close Round about a holy childhood as if drinking its repose.
— E. B. BROWNING.

Grovel.

Grovel like swine. — ANON.

Grow.

Grow like a cow's tail, downwards.
— ANON.

Grows like Jimson weed in a pile of compost. — IBID.

We do not make our thoughts;
they grow in us like grain in a wood.
— P. J. BAILEY.

Growing like smoke. — FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT.

Grow like grass in May. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Like some fair plant beneath my careful hand

He grew, he flourish'd and he grac'd
the land. — HOMER (POPE).

That grows with gazing on, like lover's beauty. — GERALD MASSEY.

Grew like the summer grass. —

bass. — LOVER.

He growls like a bear that has burnt his paw. — OSMANLI PROVERB.

Grunt.

Grunt like a bear when he is a-moaning. — ULPAN FULWELL.

Grunting like some pounded animal
— MAURICE HEWLETT.

Grunted like a pig under a tub. — LYLY.

Grunts like a hog. — MARLOWE.

Guarded.

As well guarded as a prince in his castle. — JAMES OTIS.

Guest.

A guest, like a fish, has an unpleasant odor after three days. — GUIDO CAVALCANTI.

Guileless.

Guileless and simple as a six-year-old child that has never left its mother.
— BALZAC.

Guileless as a candidate. — RICHARD
LE GALLIENNE.

Guileless as infancy. — T. N. TAL-FOURD.

Gulp.

Gulped as . . . , swallowing sobs. —
JOSEPH CONRAD.

Gulped it down fast as a Neapolitan beggar a plateful of pure scalding-hot macaroni. — H. T. FINCH.

Gulp — continued.

Gulped down pleasures as a dog does his dinner. — IBID.

Gurgled.

Gurgled like the cry of a drowning man. — W. C. RUSSELL.

Gush.

Gush like a fountain at its source.
— DONALD G. MITCHELL.

Gushes like nectar from Hebe's Olympian bottle. — W. H. VENABLES.

His heart
Gush'd like a river-fountain of the hills,
Ceaseless and lavish, at a kindly smile,
A word of welcome, or a tone of love.
— WHITTIER.

Gusts.

His speech came in gusts, like linnets in the pauses of the wind. —
WILLIAM DE MORGAN.

HHabit.

Habit may be likened to a cable;
every day we weave a thread, and soon we cannot break it. — ANON.

Habits are like the wrinkles on a man's brow; if you will smooth out the one, I will smooth out the other.
— JOSH BILLINGS.

Bad habits are as infectious by example as the plague itself by contact.
— FIELDING.

Hack.

Hacked like a hand-saw. — SHAKE-

Haggard as the face of night. —
IBID.

Hair.

Her hair was like the threads of gold. — SCOTTISH BALLAD.

Her hair is like the curling mist
That shades the mountain-side at e'en. — BURNS.

Her dusky hair, like silver night elbowing the gloom of twilight. —
DARREL FIGGIS.

Hair like weed. — MAURICE HEW-LETT.

His blond hair like gold from the furnace. — CHARLES NODIER.

Hair like the mist of the hill, soft and curling in the day of the sun. —
OSSIAN.

Her hair is like the golden corn
A low wind breathes upon:
Or like the golden harvest-moon
When all the mists are gone:
Or like a stream with golden sands
On which the sun has shone
Day after day in summertime
Ere autumn leaves are wan.

— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath. — SHAKESPEARE.

Hairless.

Hairless as an egg. — ROBERT HER-

Harsh as blame on ear unused to aught save Angels' tongues. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Harsh as . . . a grating wheel. — JOHN DAVIES.

Harsh as truth. — WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON.

Harsh as the bitterness of death. — SWINBURNE.

Like a jagged shell's lips, harsh. — IBID.

Of harsher import than the curfew-knell That spoke the Norman Conqueror's stern behest. — WORDSWORTH.

Haste.

Hastened like homing pigeons, which do not look behind. — HAMLIN GARLAND.

Haste . . . like flaming tapers brightening as they wasted. — JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Haste — continued.

Hastes . . . like as war horse to the fray. — WULFFER.

Hasty.

As hasty as Hopkins, that came to jail over night and was hanged the next morning. — ENGLISH PROVERB.

Hasty as fire. — SHAKESPEARE.

Hasty, like a Scotch jig. — IBID.

Hate (Noun).

Hate is like fire; it makes even light rubbish deadly. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Hazy, like an oil-lamp full of fungus. — R. D. BLACKMORE.

Head.

Head as hairy as Faunus. — E. B. BROWNING.

Many heads t' obstruct intrigues,
As slowest Insects have most Legs.

— SAMUEL BUTLER.

Head — continued.

The head of a woman is like a weather cock on the top of a house, which turns with the slightest wind. — MOLIÈRE.

The head, like the stomach, is most easily infected with poison when it is empty. — RICHTER.

His head is like a stomach and intestines which let the food pass through them undigested. — SCHOPENHAUER.

I hang the head
As flowers with frost, or grasses beat down with storms. — SHAKESPEARE.

Headstrong.

Headstrong as an allegory on the banks of the Nile. — R. B. SHERIDAN.

Headway.

Making headway like birds afflying. — ANON.

Makes such head as a fire does in a raging wind. — DICKENS.

Heal.

Healing as a Sabbath psalm. — ALICE W. BROTHERTON.

Health.

A man too busy to take care of his health is like a mechanic too busy to look after his tools. — ANON.

Health is like munny, we never hav a true idea ov its value until we lose it. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Health and good humor are to the human body like sunshine to vegetation. — MASSILLON.

All in a heap, like a slaughtered lamb. — SHAKESPEARE.

Heap (Verb).

Heaped like Pelion on Ossa. — ANON.

Heaped like a host in battle overthrown. — WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Heart.

A heart is like a fan, and why? —
'Twill flutter when a beau is nigh:
Oft times with gentle words he'll take it;
Play with it for a while, then break it.
— ANON.

The heart of a man is like a delicate weed,
That requires to be trampled on boldly indeed. — IBID.

A flinty heart within a snowy breast
Is like base mold lock'd in a golden chest. — FRANCIS BEAUMONT.

The human heart is like Indian rubber: a little swells it, but a great deal will not burst it. If "little more than nothing will disturb it, little less than all things will suffice" to break it. — ANNE BRONTË.

The heart is like the sky, a part of heaven;
But changes, night and day, too, like the sky;
Now o'er it clouds and thunder must be driven,
And darkness and destruction as on high;
But when it hath been scorch'd and pierc'd and riven,
Its storms expire in water-drops; the eye
Pours forth, at last, the heart's blood turn'd to tears. — BYRON.

A maiden's heart is as champagne, ever struggling upward. — C. S. CALVERLEY.

The heart is like the tree that gives balm for the wounds of man, only when the iron has wounded it. — CHATEAUBRIAND.

Heart — continued.

My heart is like the fair sea-shell,
There's music ever in it.

— ELIZA COOK.

A woman's heart is as intricate as a ravelled skein of silk. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Some hearts are like a melting peach, but with a larger, coarser, harder stone.
— J. C. HARE.

Hearts, like apples, are hard and sour,
Till crushed by Pain's resistless power.
— J. C. HOLLAND.

The heart of a man has been compared to flowers; but unlike them, it does not wait for the blowing of the wind to be scattered abroad. It is so fleeting and changeful. — YOHIDA KENKŌ.

His heart was like a bookful of girls'
song. — FRANCIS LEDWIDGE.

Her heart, like the lake, was as pure and as calm,
Till love o'er it came, like a breeze
o'er the sea,
And made the heart heave of sweet
Mary machree. — LOVER.

The human heart is like a millstone in a mill; when you put wheat under it, it turns and grinds, and bruises the wheat into flour; if you put no wheat in it, it still grinds on; but then it is itself it grinds, and slowly wears away. — MARTIN LUTHER.

My heart is like a hearth where Cupid is making a fire . . . methinks Venus and Nature stand with each of them a pair of bellows, the one cooling my low birth, the other kindling my lofty affections. — LYLY.

The heart is like an instrument whose strings steal nobler music from life's many frets. — GERALD MAS-SEY.

A wise man's heart is like a broad hearth that keeps the coales [his passions] from burning the house. — SIR
THOMAS OVERBURY.

A heart is like a new house — the ones that dry the plastering are not the true tenants. — ÉDUARD PAIL-LERON.

His heart is like a mountain of iron. — PENTAUR.

The hearts of pretty women, like New Year's bonbons, are wrapped in enigmas. — J. PETIT-SENN.

A woman's heart, like the moon, is always changing, but there is always a man in it. — PUNCH.

Heavy hearts, like heavy clouds in the sky, are best relieved by the letting of water. — RIVAROL.

My heart is like a singing bird

Whose nest is in a watered shoot;
My heart is like an apple-tree

Whose boughs are bent with thickset fruit;

My heart is like a rainbow shell

That paddles in a halcyon sea;
My heart is gladder than all these Because my love is come to me.

— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Her heart is like an ordered house
Good fairies harbour in. — IBID.

A noble heart, like the sun, showeth its greatest countenance in its lowest estate. — SIR PHILIP SIDNEY.

Burning lips and a wicked heart are like a potsherd covered with silver dross. — OLD TESTAMENT.

A woman's heart is just like a lithographer's stone, — what is once written upon it cannot be rubbed out.
— THACKERAY.

My heart is like fire in a close vessel:
I am ready to burst for want of vent.
— JOHN WESLEY.

Her heart is like an outbound ship
That at its anchor swings.

— WHITTIER.

Heart as calm as lakes that sleep,
In frosty moonlight glistening.

— WORDSWORTH

Hearty.

Hearty as a buck. — ANON.

Hearty as an O.K. — IBID.

Hearty as an oak. — SAMUEL FOOTE.

Hearty . . . like a trombone thoroughly impregnated with cheerful views of life. — CHARLES READE.

Heat.

Heats like the hammered anvil. — O. W. HOLMES.

Heave.

Heaved and sighed like the dying gasp of a syphon bottle. — ANON.

Heaves . . .

Like a mighty ship in pain,

Facing the tempest with struggle and strain. — E. B. BROWNING.

Heaves like a water-weed that opens to the wave. — IBID.

Heaves like a long-swept wave about to break. — BYRON.

Heaved like the surface of the sea. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Heaved as in his breast the waves of life kept heaving to and fro. — HOOD.

Heaving . . . like the sea in the background of a marine piece at the theatre. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Heaved like ridgy waves. — OSSIAN.

Heart heaved as a man's death-smitten with a dart

That smites him sleeping, warm and full of life. — SWINBURNE.

Heaven.

Heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field. — NEW TESTAMENT.

Heavily.

Laboring heavily — like a tramp freighter in a heavy sea. — E. D. PRICE.

Heavily, as sorrow-laden. — HAWTHORNE.

Heavy.

Heavy as a boarding-house dumping. — ANON.

Heavy as death. — MATTHEW ARNOLD

Heavy as a panegyric. — CONGREVE.

Heavy as the hand of death. — DICKENS.

Head as heavy as alderman's. — FIELDING.

Hung heavy as an opiate. — THOMAS HARDY.

Heavy and lumpish . . . like a defunct nightmare, which had perished in the midst of its wickedness, and left its flabby corpse on the breast of the tormented one, to be gotten rid of as it might. — HAWTHORNE.

Heavy, like a spade that digs in clay. — R. H. HORNE.

Heavy as remembered sin
That will not suffer sleep or thought to ease. — KIPLING.

Lies heavy . . . like murder on a guilty soul. — SCHILLER.

Heavy as lead. — SKELTON.

Heavier than the sands of the sea. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Heavy as a Dutchman. — MRS. HENRY WOOD.

Heavy as frost. — WORDSWORTH.

Heeds.Heeds

As the seven Seas should a pebble cast.
— EDWARD FITZGERALD.

Held.

Held on like a summer cold. — GEORGE ADE.

Held back like a hearse horse. — ANON.

Held on like grim death. — IBID.

Held — continued.

Held on to him like a life-belt. —
LLOYD OSBOURNE.

Held you . . .
As flesh holds flesh, and the soul the soul. — SWINBURNE.

Help.

As far from help as limbo is from bliss. — SHAKESPEARE.

Helpless.

Helpless as a babe. — ANON.

Helpless, as a cat in a trap. — IBID.

Helpless as a corpse. — IBID.

Helpless as Balaam. — IBID.

Helpless as a king of England. —
EMERSON.

Helpless as an infant caterpillar in a nest of hungry ants. — JAMES MONTGOMERY FLAGG.

Helpless as the dead. — W. S. GIL-BERT.

Helpless as a turtle on its back. —
O. HENRY.

Helpless as a lame beggar. — OUIDA.

Helpless and flurried as a fish landed on a grassy bank with a barbed hook through its gills. — IBID.

Helpless as a ship in stays. —
ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

Helpless, like doves driven headlong down by a murky tempest. — VIRGIL.

Helpless as a sailor cast on desert rock. — WORDSWORTH.

Helpless . . . as the blind. — IBID.

Helter-Skelter.

Helter-skelter . . . like a crowd of frightened porpoises a shoal of sharks pursue. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Heresy.

Heresies perish not with their authors, but, like the river Arethusa, though they lose their currents in one place, they rise up again in another.

— SIR THOMAS BROWNE.

Hero.

Like the young lion wounded by the dart,

Whose fury kindled at the galling
smart ;

The hero rouses with redoubled rage, Flies on the foe, and foams upon the stage. — PAUL WHITEHEAD.

Heroic.

Heroic as martyrdom. — OUIDA.

Heroism.

Heroism, like Plotinus, is almost ashamed of its body. — EMERSON.

Hesitate.

Hesitating like stag at bay. — JOHN CLARE.

Hesitating, fluttering, like the bird with young wing, weak and dubious.
— GEORGE ELIOT.

Hesitating like a bather about to make his plunge. — THOMAS HARDY.

Hesitate, like the submissive voice of an inferior. — SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Hew.

Hew'd away, like doctors of theology
When they dispute with sceptics.
— BYRON.

Hewn as if with stroke of swords in tempest steeled. — SWINBURNE.

Hide.

Hid, like a thought of God, un-uttered. — P. J. BAILEY.

Closely hid as Rameses in the pyramid. — JULIA C. R. DORR.

Hide ourself as Adam at the voice of the Lord God in the garden. —
EMERSON.

Hidden . . . like the works of a watch beneath the hands. — H. A.
JONES.

Hide — continued.

Hide like gentle nuns from human eyes. — SIDNEY LANIER.

Hid like incense in a flower's heart. — GERALD MASSEY.

Hid like a buried star. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Hid, as in a grave. — ROWE.

Hid
Safe from the glare of the day like an eye under its lid.

— FRANK D. SHERMAN.

Hidden . . . like a dark well, whose unseen brink is overgrown with waving grass. — VALMIKI.

Hideous.

Hideous as midnight. — ANON.

Hideous as evil. — HUGO.

Hideous as the witch of Endor. — HENRY MACKENZIE.

Hideous like a savage at his altar. — NIETZSCHE.

Hideous as a skeleton. — ANTON TCHEKHOV.

High.

High as a kite. — ANON.

High as summer-surge swells. — IBID.

Higher than Gilroy's kite. — IBID.

High as the herald-star. — EDWIN ARNOLD.

High as man's desires. — BEACONSFIELD.

High . . . as the stars were above the clouds. — A. C. BENSON.

Higher than the price of gold. — JOSH BILLINGS.

High as the stars. — CARLYLE.

High as the head of Fame. — CONGREVE.

High as the spheres. — IBID.

Piled high as the skies. — FREDERICK THE GREAT.

High as the berries of a wild ash tree. — KEATS.

High as Joye's roof. — SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE.

High as that peak in Heaven where Milton kneels. — EDWIN MARKHAM.

High as most fantastic woman's wits could reach. — OTWAY.

As high as Gilderoy. — SCOTTISH PROVERB.

High as heaven itself. — SHAKESPEARE.

High as the sunniest heights of kindest thought. — SWINBURNE.

As high as heaven. — OLD TESTAMENT.

High as manhood's noon. — WORDSWORTH.

Hilarious.

Hilarious as a sailor ashore. — ANON.

Hinders.

Hinders . . . like water, that by force of its own pressing violence and abundance cannot find a ready issue through the neck of a bottle, or of a narrow sluice. — MONTAIGNE.

Hiss.

Hiss like a steam kettle. — ANON.

Hiss . . . like shot from guns. — E. B. BROWNING.

The sea hissed like twenty thousand kettles! — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Hissed like a forked serpent. — AUBREY DE VERE.

Hiss like vipers. — SIGMUND KRASININ.

Hissed like a rocket. — CAMILLE LEMONNIER.

Hisses like red-hot iron. — W. C. RUSSELL.

Hiss — continued.

Hisses and roars, as when fire is with water commixed and contending. — SCHILLER.

Hiss as of a rushing wind. — SHELLEY.

Hisses as with mouths of snakes and wolves at bay. — SWINBURNE.

Hiss like bottle(d) ale. — JOHN TAYLOR.

History.

History is like sacred music, because truth is essential to it. — CERVANTES.

History, like religion, unites all learning and power. — RICHTER.

Hoarse.

Hoarse as the rustling of autumnal breeze. — HENRY BROOKE.

Hoarse as a raven. — CHARLES READE.

Hoarse as warning prophets in an evil age. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Hoarse
As when a hawker hawks his wares.
— TENNYSON.

Hoary.

Hoary as the glacier's head
Faced to the moon.

— GEORGE MEREDITH.

Hoary as ashes that show not a gleam. — SWINBURNE.

Hoar as the hawthorn blossom in spring. — IBID.

Hoary as weeds cast up from the hoary sea. — IBID.

Hobble.

Hobbles as a goose. — JOHN SKELTON.

Hold.

Hold on like grim death. — ANON.

Hold him, like an eagle that has seized an eaglet in his talons. — BALZAC.

Hold together like burrs. — WILLIAM CAMDEN'S "REMAINS CONCERNING BRITAIN."

Holds as tight as a horse-leech. — DICKENS.

Holds him fast
As a night-flag round the mast.
— GEORGE MEREDITH.

Her arms the master hold,
As on wounds the scarf winds tight.
— IBID.

Hold like colors of a shell. — TENNYSON.

Taken hold upon me, as the pangs of a woman that travaileth. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Holds . . . together as the shell does the egg. — JOHN C. VAN DYKE.

Holler.

Holler like a loon. — ANON.

Holler . . . like a calf for its mammy. — BOOTH TARKINGTON.

Hollow.

Hollow as a gun. — ANON.

Hollow as the soul of an echo. — IBID.

Hollow as the murmur of the midnight sea after the tempest nursed itself to rest. — IBID.

As hollow as an egg shell. — P. J. BAILEY.

Hollow and wasteful as a whirlwind. — IBID.

Hollow as is the armour of a ghost. — T. L. BEDDOES.

Hollow as an actor's laugh. — GELETT BURGESS.

Hollow like a niche in a column. — FEDOR DOSTOEVSKY.

Hollow and dead as the empty shell of last year's nut. — VIOLET FANE.

As hollow as any trumpet in Europe. — FIELDING.

Hollow — continued.

Hollower than an echo fallen Across some clear abyss.

— JEAN INGELOW.

Hollow as the unbowell'd winds. —
H. H. MILMAN.

Hollow, as a sepulchre. — M. D.
POST.

Hollow as a drum. — CHARLES
READE.

Hollow like a breathing shell. —
D. G. ROSSETTI.

Hollow as a ghost. — SHAKESPEARE.

Hollow as the hopes and fears of men. — TENNYSON.

Holy.

As holy, as the symbol that we lay on the still bosom of our white-robed dead. — O. W. HOLMES.

Holy as heaven a mother's tender love. — MRS. NORTON.

Holy as the watch of an invisible spirit. — POE.

Holy as bowers where angels have flow'd. — A. J. RYAN.

Holy as a choir of nuns. — R. D.
WILLIAMS.

Holy as a spire rear'd o'er the house of God. — JOHN WILSON.

Holy as one from an angel clime.
— WILLIAM WINTER.

Home.

As much at home . . . as a fish in water. — BALZAC.

Homeless.

Homeless as the dogs in the Constantinople streets. — PIERRE DE COULE-VAIN.

Homely.

Homely as a hedge-fence. — ANON.

Homely as the queen of spades. —
IBID.

Homely as a stump fence. — AR-TEMUS WARD.

Homer.

In the Odyssey, Homer may be likened to the setting sun, whose grandeur still remains, though his beams have lost their meridian heat.
— LONGINUS.

Honest.

Honest a man as ever brake bread.
— ANON.

Honest a man as ever trod on shoe leather. — IBID.

Honest as a cat when the meat is out of reach. — IBID.

Honest as a mirror. — IBID.

Honest as the day is long. — IBID.

Honest as the sun. — IBID.

Honest as the skin between his brows.
— "GAMMER GURTON'S NEEDLE."

Honest as a tar. — JAMES GRAHAME.

Honest a man as ever lived by bread.
— THOMAS HEYWOOD.

Bluffly honest as a northwest wind.
— LOWELL.

Honest a man as any in the cards, when all the Kings are out. — BRIAN MELBANCKE.

Honest as the skin between his brows.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Honest as the nature of man first made, ere fraud and vice were fashions.
— OTWAY.

Honesty.

Honesty iz like a 7 per cent. interest ; it will beat all kind of speckerlashuns in the long run. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Honesty
Is like a stock of money laid to sleep,
Which, ne'er so little broke, does never keep.

— CYRIL TOURNEUR.

Honeyed.

Honeyed as the damask rose. — NORA HOPPER.

Honor.

Honor that is gained and broken upon another hath the quickest reflection, like diamonds cut with facets ; and therefore let a man contend to excel any competitors of his in honor, in outshooting them, if he can, in their own bow. — BACON.

Honour is like the eye, which cannot suffer the least injury without damage ; it is a precious stone, the price of which is lessened by the least flaw. — BOSSUET.

Honor is like a widow, won
With brisk attempt and putting on ;
With entering manfully, and urging,
Not slow approaches, like a virgin.
— SAMUEL BUTLER.

Honour is like that glossy bubble
That finds philosophers such trouble,
Whose least part crack'd, the whole does fly
And wits are crack'd to find out why.
— IBID.

Woman's honour is nice as ermine ;
'twill not bear a soil. — DRYDEN.

Honour doth appeare to statesmen like a vision in the night,
And jugler-like workes o' th' deluded
sight.
— WILLIAM HARBINGTON.

Honor and he agree as well together as a satin suit and woolen stockings.
— JOHN MARSTON.

Honor . . . like power, disdains being questioned. — NICHOLAS ROWE.

Honor, like life, when once lost, never returns. — PUBLIUS SYRUS.

As snow in summer, and as rain in harvest, so honour is not seemly for a fool. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Hooded.

Hooded like a hawk. — CONGREVE.

Hoot.

Hooted at like an old tale. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Hop.

Hop as light as bird from brier. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Hope.

Our hopes, like towering falcons, aim at objects in an airy height :

The little pleasure of the game is afar off to view the flight. — ANON.

It is equally precarious to moor a ship by an insufficient anchor, and to ground hope on a capricious temper.
— DEMOPHILUS.

A woman's hopes are woven as sunbeams ; a shadow annihilates them.
— GEORGE ELIOT.

Hope, like the glimmering taper's light
Adorns and cheers the way ;
And still, as darker grows the night,
Emits a brighter ray.
— GOLDSMITH.

Our hopes, like withered leaves, fall fast. — LONGFELLOW.

As froth on the face of the deep,
As foam on the crest of the sea,
As dreams at the waking of sleep,
As gourd of a day and a night,
As harvest that no man shall reap,
As vintage that never shall be,
Is hope if it cling not aright,
O my God unto Thee.

— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Hope is like a harebell trembling from its birth. — IBID.

Who builds his hope in air of your fair looks,
Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast ;
Ready, with every nod, to tumble down
Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Hope is like the sun, which, as we journey towards it, casts the shadow of our burden behind us. — SAMUEL SMILES.

Hope — continued.

Hope has left you like a painted dream. — JOSEPH STANSBURY.

As some adventurous flower, on savage
craig-side grown,
Seems nourished hour by hour from its wild self alone,
So lives inveterate Hope, on her own hardihood.

— WILLIAM WATSON.

Hopeful.

Hopeful as the break of day. —
T. B. ALDRICH.

Hopeful as Prometheus. — GEORGE MACDONALD.

Hopeless.

Hopeless and as full of fear
As are the blasted banks of Erebus.
— MARLOWE.

Hopeless as telling Belshazzar his dream. — T. N. PAGE.

As hopeless as for the musician to pour his notes into the ear of a deaf man. — J. MCNEILL WHISTLER.

Horned.

Horned like the crescent moon. —
SHELLEY.

Horny.

Horny as a camel's knee. — ANATOLE FRANCE.

Horny as a briar rose. — HUGO.

Horrible.

Horrible as viper-bitten bodies. —
GEORGE MEREDITH.

Horrible, like the shrieks of witches.
— MUNCHAUSEN.

Horrid.

Horrid as a murderer's dream. —
DR. JOHNSON.

Horrid as the witches in Macbeth.
— BONNELL THORNTON.

Horse.

A white horse and a beautiful woman are akin, and two troublesome things to manage : the first is difficult to be kept clean ; and the second, honest. —
SAMUEL FOOTE.

Hospitable.

Hospitable as an old Siracusan. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Hostile.

By nature as hostile to mystery as the sunshine to a dark corner. — HAW-THORNE.

Hostility.

Hostility between two people is like fire, and the evil-fated backbiter supplies fuel. Afterwards, when they are reconciled together, the backbiter is hated and despised by both parties.
— ANON.

Hot.

Hot as a black pudding. — ANON.

Hot as a coal. — IBID.

Hot as a pone cake. — IBID.

IBID.

Hot as pepper. — IBID.

Hot as ten thousand suns in one. —
IBID.

Hot as the hinges of hell. — IBID.

Hot as Tophet. — IBID.

Hot as a volcano. — IBID.

Hot as the devil's kitchen. — J. R.
BARTLETT'S "DICTIONARY OF AMERI-CANISMS."

Hot as the fire of the Lord out of heaven could make it. — BUNYAN.

Hot as a basted turkey. — WILL CARLETON.

Hot as hell-fire. — DRYDEN.

Hot — continued.

Agonies as hot as flames of sulphur.
— JOHN FORD.

Hot as hate. — HAMLIN GARLAND.

Love is as hot as pepper'd brandy.
— WILLIAM KING.

Hot as a toast. — LYLY.

Hot as hay harvest. — BRIAN MEL-BANCKE.

Hot as flame. — OUIDA.

Hot as coals of glowing fire. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Hot as gunpowder. — IBID.

Hot as molten lead. — IBID.

Hot as monkeys. — IBID.

Hot as Perseus. — IBID.

Hot as hell. — SWINBURNE.

Hot like Mars. — IBID.

Hot and close as fire. — IBID.

Hot as an oven. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Hot as a swinked gypsy. — FRANCIS
THOMPSON.

Hot as Indian curry. — ISRAEL
ZANGWILL.

House.

A house without woman or firelight is like a body without soul or spirit.
— FRANKLIN.

Houses are like friendship ; there is hardly one in a thousand worth a long lease. — OUIDA.

bow round a fountain. — P. J. BAILEY.

Hovering like the summer sky. —
M. A. BROWNE.

Hover — like a moth intoxicated with light. — JOHN GALSWORTHY.

Hovering near,
Like some base vulture in the battle's
rear. — REGINALD HEBER.

Hovered, like a spectre, in the background of all her imaginations.
— KINGSLEY.

Strives and hovers
As a bird above the brood her bosom covers. — SWINBURNE.

Hovers as birds that impend on the sea. — IBID.

Howl.

Howl like a dervish. — ANON.

Howl like a vagabond for bread. —
IBID.

Howled like a just-lugged bear. —
ROBERT BROWNING.

Howling, like a wolf, flies the famished northern blast. — WILLIAM CUL-LEN BRYANT.

Howl'd for help as wolves do for a meal. — BYRON.

Howl like a wolf. — DICKENS.

Howls like a thousand demons. —
GEORGE ELIOT.

Howling like a pig in a gate. —
KINGSLEY.

Howl like a wild beast. — KIPLING.

Humming, like bees that are swarming. — HEINRICH HEINE.

Humming like a hornet. — LONGFELLOW.

Humming . . . like a hive of bees. — JOAQUIN MILLER.

Human.

Human as a kiss. — VANCE THOMPSON.

Humble.

Humble as a grateful almsman. — ANON.

Humble as a worm. — IBID.

Humble as Uriah Heep. — IBID.

Humble as is a lamb. — ALEXANDER BARCLAY.

Humble as a Jesuit to his superior. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

As humble as the grass. — BLISS CARMAN.

As humble as the child of one that sweats, to eat the dear-earn'd bread of honest thrift. — JOHN FORD.

Humbly, like a praying nun. — O. W. HOLMES.

Humble as a stone. — HOOD.

Humble as a worm. — IBID.

Humbly as they used to creep
To holy altars.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Humility.

Humility like darkness reveals the heavenly lights. — HENRY D. THOREAU.

Humor.

A sense of humor is to a lonely citizen of the world what is to a shipwrecked sailor on a desert the knife with which he hews the logs to make his hut, and cuts the fruit by which he lives. — BETTINA VON HUTTEN.

Humorous.

Humorous as April. — ANON.

Humorous as wind. — JOHN DRYDEN.

Humorous as winter. — SHAKESPEARE.

Hunger.

Hungering hard as frost that feeds on flowers. — SWINBURNE.

And can digest as much.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Hungry as a hawk. — JOHN TAYLOR.

Hungry as the winter. — ANTON TCHEKOV.

Hungry as the grave. — JAMES THOMSON.

Hunted.

Hunted like a stag. — ANON.

A man [Voltaire] hunted by the little devils that dwell unchained within him; like Pentheus by the Mænads, like Actæon by his own Dogs. — CARLYLE.

Hurled.

Hurled as a stone from out of a catapult. — TENNYSON.

Hurry.

Hurried, like one distraught. — T. B. ALDRICH.

Hurried like a torrent through a strait. — JOHN DAVIDSON.

Hurried like moon-ray flashes through the drifting snow. — MILES O'REILLY.

Hurry . . . like the leaf in a roaring whirlwind. — TENNYSON.

Hurt.

Hurts one like the day
Let suddenly on sick eyes.
— E. B. BROWNING.

Husband.

Husbands are like apples, they shouldn't be picked till they are ripe. — ANON.

Husbands, like spectacles, to fit every age, from fifteen to fourscore. — GOLDSMITH.

Hushed.

Hushed, as in waiting for a bird to sing. — RICHARD HOVEY.

Lies hushed, like a seer in a vision. W. D. HOWELLS.

Hushed like an infant on its mother's breast. — GERALD MASSEY.

Hushed, as if nature were retired. — OTWAY.

Hush as death. — SHAKESPEARE.

Hushed as midnight. — IBID.

Hushed soft as the leaves and the grasses
Are hushed if the storm's foot draws near. — SWINBURNE.

Hush'd . . . as a sick man's room when he taketh repose. — TENNYSON.

Hushed as the warm Numidian heaven. — WHITTIER.

Hushed as night. — WORDSWORTH.

Hushed
As the unbreathing air, when not a leaf
Stirs in the mighty woods. — IBID.

Hustle.

Hustle like fiery-eyed dragons. —
HENRIK IBSEN.

Hustle about me like pent-up air.
— D. G. ROSSETTI.

How close-packed the mob is, they hustle like a herd of swine. — THEO-CRITUS.

Hypocrite.

An hypocrite is like unto an apple, that is very faire and beautiful without, but within is corrupted and rotten.

— ANTHONIE FLETCHER'S "CERTAIN VERY PROPER AND PROFITABLE SIM-ILES," 1595.

Hypocrites ! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness. — NEW TESTAMENT.

Hysterical.

Hysterical as a tree full of chickens.
— IRVIN S. COBB.

IIdeas.

Our ideas, like orange-plants, spread out in proportion to the size of the box which imprisons the roots. —
BULWER-LYTTON.

Ideas are for the most part like bad sixpences and we spend our lives in trying to pass them off on one another.
— SAMUEL BUTLER (1835-1902).

Ideas are like shadows — substantial enough until we try to grasp them. —
IBID.

An idea, like a ghost (according to the common notion of ghosts), must be spoken to a little before it will explain itself. — DICKENS.

A fixed idea is like a gimlet ; every year gives it another turn. To pull it out the first year is like plucking out the hair by the roots ; in the second year, like tearing the skin ; in the third, like breaking the bones ; and in the fourth, like removing the very brain itself. — HUGO.

An idea is like a meteor ; at the critical moment, the confused meditations which have preceded it open a way, and a spark flashes forth. . . .
These flashes are generated in the conscience in its states of cloud and darkness. — IBID.

Our ideas, like pictures, are made up of lights and shadows. — JOUBERT.

A fixed idea is like the iron rod which sculptors put in their statues. It im-pales and sustains. — TAINE.

Ideas are like beards ; men do not have them until they grow up. — VOL-TAIRE.

Idle.

Idle as digging in the bottom of the river for the stars we see reflected on the surface. — ANON.

Idle as railing at a deaf man. — IBID.

Idle as to aim at inscrutable things beyond the moon. — IBID.

Idle as a lazzarone. — J. ASHBY-STERRY.

As idle as a dial when the sun
Sulks in the clouds.

— ALFRED AUSTIN.

Idle as the stroke of a cane on the hide of rhinoceros. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Idle as air. — ALICE CARY.

As idle as a painted ship upon a painted ocean. — COLERIDGE.

Idle — continued.

Idle, as the dreams of maids. —
WALTER HARTE.

Idle as a summer noon. — OMAR KHAYYAM.

Looks idle, perhaps, and foolish, like a hat on its block in the store. —
JOYCE KILMER.

Idle, and mean as a collier's whelp.
— KIPLING.

Idleness.

Idleness feeds on the empty day
As a chameleon on the air.

— RICHARD HOVEY.

Idly.

As idly as a babe that sees the painted pictures of a book. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Ignorance.

He makes his ignorance pass for reserve, and, like a hunting-nag, leaps over what he cannot get through. —
SAMUEL BUTLER.

Ignorant.

Ignorant as a pig is of the side pocket of a pool table. — ANON.

Ignorant as a bookseller. — COLE-RIDGE.

As invincibly ignorant as a town-fop judging of a new play. — DRYDEN.

Ignorant as a Tripoline ambassador, or an envoy from Mujac. — GOLD-SMITH.

Ignorant as a raw kitchen wench.
— GEORGE MEREDITH.

The ignorant person is like a cock out of season, which crows at midnight.
— OSMANLI PROVERB.

Ignorant as dirt. — SHAKESPEARE.

Ignorant as a child. — THOREAU.

Illimitable.

Illimitable as the boundless sea. —
ANON.

Illiterate.

Illiterate as the lowliest hedger and ditcher. — EUGENE FIELD.

Ill-Natured.

Ill-natured as an old maid. — CON-GREVE.

Illuminated.

Illuminated him as the burning taper lights up consecrated plate. —
GEORGE MEREDITH.

Illusion.

Illusion like the tints of pearl,
Or changing colors of the sky,
Or ribbons of a dancing girl
That mend her beauty to the eye.
— EMERSON.

Illusive.

Illusive, like a dream. — JULIA C. R.
DORR.

Immaculate.

Immaculate as an angel. — ANON.

Immaculate as Tanit. — FLAUBERT.

Immortal as air or as fire is. — SWINBURNE.

Immortal as art and as love. — IBID.

Immortal as the sun. — ARTHUR SYMONS.

Poetry is the first and last of all knowledge: it is immortal as the heart of man. — WORDSWORTH.

Immovable.

Immovable as the figure of Mercury. — ANON.

Grenadiers . . . stood their ground immovable, like rocks, steadily spouting fire-torrents. — CARLYLE.

Immovable as a pump or a lamp-post. — DICKENS.

Immovable as a leopard crouching in the jungle. — FLAUBERT.

Immovable as a picture. — IBID.

Immovable, as if it were painted on the wall. — HAWTHORNE.

Immovable as a setter at the scent of quail. — O. HENRY.

Immovable, like the owner's names, cut in brass, and nailed to their doors. — THOMAS HOLCROFT.

Immovable in the flow of the rout as rocks in running water. — HUGO.

Immovable as a man of iron. — KINGSLEY.

Immovable as the sun. — THEOGNIS.

Immovably.

As immovably as the pillars that prop the universe. — FISHER AMES.

Immutable.

Immutable as the laws of the Medes and Persians. — ANON.

Impenetrable as a hedgehog. — ANON.

Impenetrable to the view as the deep blue of a glacier. — D'ANNUNZIO.

Impenetrable as granite. — OUIDA.

Impenetrable as rhinoceri. — IBID.

Impenitent.

Impenitent as a stone. — ANON.

Imperceptible.

Imperceptible as the spots on the sun or the shadows on a sunlit seat. — SWINBURNE.

Imperceptibly.

Imperceptibly as old age comes on. — W. S. GILBERT.

Imperfect.

Imperfect as discourses in a dream. — GEORGE GRANVILLE.

Imperfection.

Our inborn human imperfection is part of the order of things, like the constant deformation of the petal in the plant. — TAINE.

Imperishable.

Imperishable as eternity. — P. J. BAILEY.

Impersonal.

Impersonal as Shakespeare. — CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

Impersonal as the justice of God. — HUGO.

Impertinent.

Impertinent as puns. — G. K. CHESTERTON.

Imperturbable.

Imperturbable as diplomatists. — BALZAC.

Impervious.

Impervious as a statue to all sight and sound. — OUIDA.

Incessant streams supplies
Like the red star that fires th' autumnal skies. — HOMER (POPE).

Incessant . . . as the sound of the sea. — MARY JOHNSTON.

Like a broker's mouth, he speaks incessantly. — OSMANLI PROVERB.

Incessant as the squeaking cry of a monkey. — IVAN TURGENEV.

Incomes.

Our incomes, like our shoes, if too small, will gall and pinch us, but if too large, will cause us to stumble and to trip. — C. C. COLTON.

Incomprehensible.

Incomprehensible as a man starting a long journey without a good book. — LAMARTINE.

Incongruous.

As incongruous as a blacksmith with a white silk apron. — ANON.

Incongruous as a joke on a gravestone or a ledger. — IBID.

Incongruous as Matthew Arnold jumping rope. — IBID.

Incorruptible, unending, free,
Like the moon's golden road upon the sea. — F. W. H. MYERS.

Increase.

Increase like wind and oil on a fatal fire. — ANON.

Increased, like a spreading sore. —
ANDREW LANG.

Increased as fast as the calendar of saints. — THOMAS PAINE.

Increased my fury, as the beating of a drum stimulates the soldier in courage. — POE.

Increased as the chant of the dawn that the choir of the noon outsings.
— SWINBURNE.

Incredible.

Incredible as the fulfilment of an amazing and startling dream in which he could take the world in his arms
— all the suffering world. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Indecorum.

A great indecorum, to use men like old shoes or broken glasses, which are flung to the dunghill. — ROBERT BUR-TON.

Indefinite.

Indefinite, like the quality of the best manners. — S. WEIR MITCHELL.

Indelible.

Indelible as Domesday Book. — EMERSON.

Inflamed like the crimson rose. — PERSIAN.

Inflexible.

Inflexible as a granite block. — ANON.

Inflexible as an oak. — GOLDSMITH.

Influence.

Of as little influence as the letter "p" in pneumonia. — ANON.

Infrequent.

Infrequent as a porterhouse steak in a ten-dollar-a-week boarding-house. — SIMEON FORD.

Inherent.

Inherent as the sheen of a bird's plumage, as the texture of a flower's petal. — JOHN BURROUGHS.

Inherent, like the laws of gravity. — FROUDE.

Injurious.

Injurious as the tainted breath of fame. — THOMAS YALDEN.

Ink.

A small drop of ink, falling like dew, upon a thought, produces that which makes thousands, perhaps millions, think.

— BYRON.

Innocence.

Innocence is like an umbrella: when once we've lost it we must never hope to see it back again. — PUNCH.

Innocence is like a polished armor; it adorns and it defends. — SOUTH.

Like flowers bereft of their sweets by the frost,

Are poor withered things that do but retain

The thorns of the rose, when its fragrance is lost.

— E. F. ANDREWS.

Joy like the joy of a leaf that unfolds in the sun ;

Joy like the joy of a child in the borders of sleep. — RICHARD HOVEY.

For joys are like sunbeams, — more fleeting than they,

And sorrows cast shadows between ;
And friends that in moments of brightness are won,

Like gossamer, only are seen — in the sun. — LOVER.

Joy — continued.

Joy is like restless day ; but peace divine

Like quiet night ;

Lead me, O Lord, — till perfect Day shall shine

Through Peace to Light.

— ADELAIDE ANNE PROCTER.

Joy is like the ague ; one good day between two bad ones. — DANISH
PROVERB.

Joy in this world is like a rainbow, which in the morning only appears in the west, or towards the evening sky ;
but in the latter hours of day casts its triumphal arch over the east, or morning sky. — RICHTER.

As bitter wormwood never doth delicious honey yield,
Nor can the cheerful grape be reap'd from thistles in the field ;
So who, in this uncertain life, deceitful joys pursue,
They fruits do seek upon such trees on which it never grew.

— FLORENCE WILSON.

Life, like the water of the seas, freshens only when it ascends upwards. — IBID.

After all, life is like soda-water. Childhood, effervescence corked down and wired; manhood, some sparkle, more vapidty; old age, empty bottle, cart it away with the rubbish. — T. W. ROBERTSON.

Life is like a beautiful and winding lane, on either side bright flowers, and beautiful butterflies, and tempting fruits, which we scarcely pause to admire and to taste, so eager are we to hasten to an opening which we imagine will be more beautiful still. By degrees as we advance, the trees grow bleak; the flowers and butterflies fail, the fruits disappear, and we find we have arrived — to reach a desert waste. — G. A. SALA.

Our life is like a journey on which, as we advance, the landscape takes a different view from that which it presented at first, and changes again, as we come nearer. — SCHOPENHAUER.

A wise man is never disappointed. Man's life is like a game at tables ; if at any time the cast you most shall need does not come up, let that which comes instead of it be mended by your play. — THOMAS SHADWELL.

Life, like a dome of many-colored glass, Stains the white radiance of eternity.

— SHELLEY.

Love (Noun).

Love is like the rose: so sweet, that one always tries to gather it in spite of the thorns. — ANON.

Love is like the sunbeam that gleams through the shower
And kisses off gently the dew from the flower;
That cheers up the blossoms and bids
them be gay,
And lends the fragrance that perfumes
the day. — IBID.

Love, like a cough, can't be hidden.
— IBID.

Love, like fire, cannot subsist without continual movement; as soon as it ceases to hope and fear, it ceases to exist. — IBID.

Like threads of silver seen through crystal beads let love through good deeds show. — EDWIN ARNOLD.

Love is like the rose,
And a month it may not see,
Ere it withers where it grows.
— P. J. BAILEY.

In love, a woman is like a lyre that surrenders its secrets only to the hand that knows how to touch its strings. —
BALZAC.

The wrongs of love, like the notes of a solvent debtor, bear interest. — IBID.

Love is like youth, he thirsts,
He scorns to be his mother's page;
But when the proceeding times assuage
The former heate, he will complaine,
And wish those pleasant houres againe.
— FRANCIS BEAUMONT.

Luv is like the measles, one kant alwus tell when one ketched it and ain't ap tew hav it severe but onst, and then it ain't kounted much unless it strikes inly. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Love — continued.

Love is like the wild rose-briar ;
 Friendship like the holly-tree.
 The holly is dark when the rose-briar blooms,

But which will bloom most constantly ?
 The wild rose-briar is sweet in spring,
 Its summer blossoms scent the air ;
 Yet wait till winter comes again,
 And who will call the wild-briar fair ?
 Then, scorn the silly rose-wreath now,
 And deck thee with the holly's sheen,
 That, when December blights thy brow
 He still may leave thy garland green.

— EMILY BRONTË.

Women's love, like lichens on a rock, will still grow where even charity can find no soil to nurture itself. — C. N. BOVÉE.

Love, like death, levels all ranks and lays the shepherd's crook beside the sceptre. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Love's very much like bathing. At first we go souse to the bottom, if we're not drowned, then we gather pluck, grow calm, strike out gently, and make a deal pleasanter thing of it afore we're done. — IBID.

Oh, my luve is like a red, red rose
 That's newly sprung in June ;
 Oh, my luve is like the melodie
 That's sweetly play'd in tune.

— BURNS.

Love is increased by injuries, as the Sunbeams are more gracious after a cloud. — ROBERT BURTON.

As the Sun is in the Firmament, so is Love in the world. — IBID.

Love is a fire that burns and sparkles
 In men as naturally as in charcoals.

— SAMUEL BUTLER.

All love at first, like generous wine,
 Ferments and frets, until 'tis fine ;
 But when 'tis settled on the lye,
 And from the impurer matter free,
 Becomes the richer still, the older,
 And proves the pleasanter, the colder.

— IBID.

Love-passions are like parables, by which men still mean something else.

— SAMUEL BUTLER.

Love in your heart as idly burns
 As fire in antique Roman urns.

— IBID.

Love, like the cold bath, is never negative, it seldom leaves us where it finds us ; if once we plunge into it, it will either heighten our virtues or inflame our vices. — C. C. COLTON.

Love, like death, a universal leveller of mankind. — CONGREVE.

Love, like a greedy hawk, if we give way,
 Does over-gorge himself with his own prey. — ABRAHAM COWLEY.

Love, like a scene, at distance should appear,

But marriage views the gross daubed landscape near. — DRYDEN.

Love, like fire, when once kindled, is soon blown into a flame. — FIELDING.

Look as it is with some true April day, Whose various weather stores the world with flowers ;

The sun his glorious beams doth fair
 display,

Then rains and shines again, and straight it lowers,

And twenty changes in one hour doth prove ;

So, and more changing is a woman's love. — PHINEAS FLETCHER.

Love is most like an owl that cannot fly, though wings he has, and lurks in every hole. Beware of him ; the villain, old in sin, shuns the front door, and by the back comes in. — FOLENGO.

Love like a little bird is made, that hops about from bough to bough :
 Into my bosom it has strayed and at my heart is pecking now.

— GOLDONI.

Love is like a landscape which doth stand,

Smooth at a distance, rough at hand.

— ROBERT HEGGE.

Love — continued.

Love, like the opening of heaven to the saints, shows for a moment, even to the dullest man, the possibilities of the human race. — ARTHUR HELPS.

Love rushed through him as a river in flood. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

O, love, love, love!
Love is like a dizziness;
It winna let a poor body
Gang about his bizziness.

— HOGG.

Love is like a well profound,
From which two souls have right to draw,
And in whose waters will be drowned,
The one who takes the other's law.

— J. G. HOLLAND.

Love is like spring: it laughs through the cold and the snow; it perfumes the night and flourishes under graves. — ARSÈNE HOUSSAYE.

Love is like epidemic diseases, the more one is afraid of it, the more is one exposed to it. — IBID.

Love's like the measles — all the worse when it comes late in life. — DOUGLAS JERROLD.

Love is like medical science — the art of assisting Nature. — LALLEMAND.

Love, like beauty, strong to lure;
Love, like joy, makes man her thrall,
Strong to please and conquer all.

— ERNST LANGE.

Love, like the flower that courts the sun's kind ray,
Will flourish only in the smiles of day.
— JOHN LANGHORNE.

True love, like the eye, can bear no flaw. — LAVATER.

Love, like the lark, while soaring sings;
Wouldst have him spread again his wings?

What careth he for higher skies
Who on the heart of harvest lies,

And finds both sun and firmament
Closed in the round of his content?

— W. J. LINTON.

Love is likened to the Emerald which cracketh rather than consenteth to any disloyaltie, and can there be any greater villany then being secreat not to be constant, or being constant not to be secret. — LYLY.

Love gotten with witchcraft, is as unpleasant as fish taken with medicines unwholesome. — IBID.

Love is like a charming romance which is read with avidity, and often with such impatience that many pages are skipped to reach the dénouement sooner. — THOMAS MARÉCHAL.

Love, like arm'd Death, is strong.
— EDWARD MOORE.

'Tis love, like the sun, that gives light to the year,
The sweetest of blessings that life can give;
Our pleasures it brightens, drives sorrow away,
Gives joy to the night, and enlivens the day.
— IBID.

Ah! love is like a tender flower
Hid in the opening leaves of life,
Which, when the springtide calls, has power,
To scorn the elemental strife.
— LEWIS MORRIS.

Love, like the creeping vine, withers if it has nothing to embrace. — NISUMI.

Love before marriage is like a too short preface before a book without end. — J. PETIT-SENN.

Love, like death, makes all distinction void. — MATTHEW PRIOR.

Love, like men, dies oftener of excess than hunger. — RICHTER.

Love's as cunnin' a little thing as a hummin'-bird upon the wing. — JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Love — continued.

Love is like a red-currant wine — it first tastes sweet, but afterward shuddery. — T. W. ROBERTSON.

True love is like ghosts, which everybody talks about and few have seen. — ROCHEFOUCAULD.

Love, like other little boys,
Cries for hearts, as they for toys.
— EARL OF ROCHESTER.

Love, like flowers, endureth but a spring. — RONSARD.

Love is like a lovely rose the world's delight. — C. G. ROSSETTI.

Love is like the moon : when it does not increase, it decreases. — SÉCUR.

Love is like a child,
That longs for everything that he can come by. — SHAKESPEARE.

Love like a shadow flies, when substance love pursues ;
Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues. — IBID.

Love, that comes too late,
Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried,
To a great sender turns a sour offence,
Crying, that's good that's gone.
— IBID.

Love is like understanding, that grows bright
Gazing on many truths ; 'tis like thy light, Imagination. — SHELLEY.

Love like air is widely given ;
Power nor chance can these restrain ;
Truest, noblest gifts of heaven !
Only purest in the plain.
— WILLIAM SHENSTONE.

Love is an April's doubting day :
Awhile we see the tempest lower ;
Anon the radiant heaven survey,
And quite forget the flitting shower.
— IBID.

Love is like a tune that's played, and life a tale that's told. — W. W. STORY.

True love, like the lightning that flashes, must kindle from eye to eye and strike into the heart. — FRANZ VON SUPPÉ.

Love is awful as immortal death. — IBID.

Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith. — OLD TESTAMENT.

The love of a woman is like a mushroom, — it grows in one night and will serve somewhat pleasantly next morning for breakfast, but afterwards waxes fulsome and unwholesome. — CYRIL TOURNEUR.

Emotional effusions are like licorice-root. When you take your first suck at it, it doesn't seem so bad, but it leaves a very bad taste in your mouth afterward. — TURGENEV.

In love as in war, a fortress that parleys is half taken. — MARGUERITE DE VALOIS.

Love . . . like a pirate, takes you by spreading false colors. — VANBRUGH.

Love, like virtue, is its own reward. — IBID.

Love, like fortune, turns upon a heel, and is very much given to rising and falling. — IBID.

Love, my sweet Lidi ! resembles the fugitive shadows of morning ; shorter and shorter they grow and at length disappear. — MIHÁLY VITKOVICS.

Love's like a torch which, if secur'd from blasts,
Will fainter burn, but then it longer lasts :
Expos'd to storms of jealousy and doubt,
The blaze grows greater, but 'tis sooner out. — WILLIAM WALSH.

Love, like a bird, hath perch'd upon a spray
For thee and me to hearken what he sings.

— WILLIAM WATSON.

Love — continued.

Love . . . as pure as Angel-worship, when the just
 And beautiful of Heaven are bow'd in prayer! — WHITTIER.

Love as strong as that which binds the peopled Universe. — IBID.

Love is a lamp unseen, burning to waste, or, if its light is found, nursed for our idle hour, then idly broken. —
 N. P. WILLIS.

Love, like ambition, dies as 'tis enjoyed. — THOMAS YALDEN.

Lust.

Lust, like a lawless headlong flood,
Impregnated with ooze and mud,
Descending fast on every side,
Once mingles with the sacred tide,
Farewell the soul-enlivening scene!
The banks that wore a smiling green,
With rank defilement overspread,
Bewail their flow'ry beauties dead.

— COWPER.

Base lust,
With all her powders, paintings, and best pride,

Is but a fair house built by a ditch side. — THOMAS MIDDLETON.

Lusts are like agues; the fit is not always on, and yet the man is not rid of the disease; and some men's lusts, like some agues, have not such returns

Luxury, like wine, both stimulates and weakens. — ALPHONSE KARR.

MMachine.

The Ford machine is like a bathtub. Everybody wants one, but nobody wants to be seen in it. — CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

Mad.

Mad as a hatter. — ANON.

Mad as an adder. — IBID.

Mad as a rat in a trap. — IBID.

Mad as a wet cat. — IBID.

Mad as blazes. — IBID.

Mad as tigers. — IBID.

Mad as all wrath. — J. R. BARTLETT'S "DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS."

Mad as a bull among bumble bees. — IBID.

Mad as May butter. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

As Staring madde like March Hares. — ANDREW BORDE (1490-1549.)

As mad as Orlando for his Angelica, or Hercules for his Hylas. — ROBERT BURTON.

He is as mad as a March hare. — CERVANTES.

Mad . . . like the warrior in the fight. — BARRY CORNWALL.

Mad as a drunken squaw. — ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

Mad as the delirious dream
Of one who, on an Indian stream
Floating in a Morphean bark,
Feeds on the charmed lotus leaf.

— T. BUCHANAN READ.

Mad as Ajax. — SHAKESPEARE.

More mad
Than Telamon for his shield.
— IBID.

Mad as the vexed sea. — IBID.

Maddening.

Lived maddeningly, like a man who has a drumming in his ear. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

Magnanimous.

Magnanimous as Agamemnon. — SHAKESPEARE.

Magnificent.

Magnificent as Mrs. Siddons as Lady Macbeth. — THACKERAY.

Maid.

The spotless maid is like the blooming rose

Which on its native stem unsullied grows. — ARIOSTO.

Maidens, like moths, are ever caught by glare,

And Mammon wins his way where seraphs might despair.

— BYRON.

Maids are like contentment in this life,
Which all the world have sought, but none enjoy'd.

— SIR JOHN DAVIES.

A maiden is like a half-blown damask rose, fair as a dream and full of the sweet fragrance of the purity of dawning womanhood. — ANNIE E. LAN-CASTER.

Majestic.

Majestic as a statue. — ANON.

Majestic as Cæsar. — IBID.

Majestic as Juno. — IBID.

Like Jove, majestic. — GEORGE
GRANVILLE.

Majestic as the sun at noon. —
ORIENTAL.

Port as Majestic as Astley's horse dances. — ANTHONY PASQUIN.

Majestic in its movement as a sonnet of Milton. — ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

Majorities.

Decision by majorities is as much an expedient as lighting by gas. — GLAD-STONE.

Malicious.

Malicious as a satyr. — ANON.

Malicious as Saul to David. — IBID.

Maliciously like poison. — SHAKE-
SPEARE.

Malicious as Satan. — THACKERAY.

Man.

Man is a social creature, and we are made to be helpful to each other; we are like the wheels of a watch, that none of them can do their work alone, without the concurrence of the rest. —

ANON.

Some men are like a brook, noisy but shallow. — IBID.

Man is like a razor, the sharper for being stropped. — IBID.

Some men, like wagons, rattle most when there's nothing in them. —
IBID.

Tall men, like tall houses, are usually ill furnished in the upper story. —
BACON.

The majority of men are like animals — they take fright and are reassured
by trifles. — BALZAC.

A Man is like unto a fort in a strange land, easy to capture, but hard to hold;
but a woman of virtue is like an eel in a bathtub, not easily to be acquired, but difficult to lose. — GELETT BURGESS.

Men but like visions are, Time all doth claime,
He lives, who dies to winne a lasting name. — WILLIAM DRUMMOND.

Men, like musical instruments, seem made to be played upon. —
C. N. BOVÉE.

An honest man is like a plain coat, which without welt [fold] or guard, keepeth the body from wind and weather, and being well made fits him best that wears it; and where the stuff is more regarded than the fashion, there is not much ado in the putting of it on. So, the mind of an honest man, without tricks or compliments, keeps the credit of a good conscience from the scandal of the world and the worm of Iniquity; which being wrought by the Workman of Heaven, fits him best that wears it to His service; and where Virtue is more esteemed than Vanity, it is put on and worn with that ease that shows excellency of the Workman. — NICHOLAS BRETON.

Man — continued.

Men are like old ships, easy towed, but hard to steer. — ROBERT BRIDGES (American).

! Man is like a book . . . the commonality only look to his binding. — BÜLWER-LYTTON.

A young man is like a fair new house, the carpenter leaves it well built, in good repair, a solid stuff ; but a bad tenant lets it rain in, and for want of reparation fall to decay, etc. Our Parents, Tutors, Friends, spare no cost to bring us up in our youth in all manner of virtuous education ; but when we are left to ourselves idleness as a tempest drives all virtuous notions out of our minds, etc., and nihilismus, on a sudden, by sloth and such bad ways, we come to naught. — ROBERT BURTON.

Man is like a napkin, the more neatly the housewife doubles him, the more carefully she lays him on the shelf. — IBID.

We are like billiard balls in a game played by unskillful players, continually being nearly sent into a pocket, but hardly ever getting right into one, except by a fluke. — SAMUEL BUTLER (1835-1902).

In fact, man ain't constructed for a heavy strain of bliss.

Human beings are like boilers, and the same rules, it would seem,

Have an equal application to affection and steam. — WM. ALLEN BUTLER.

A young man of high talent, and high though still temper, like a young mettled colt, 'breaks-off his neck-halter', and bounds forth, from his peculiar manger, into the wide world ; which, alas, he finds all rigorously fenced-in. Richest clover-fields tempt his eye ; but to him they are forbidden pasture : either pining in progressive starvation, he must rush ; or, in mad exasperation, must stand to and fro, leaping against sheer stone-walls, which he cannot leap over, which only lacerate and lame him ; till at last, after thousand attempts and endurances, he, as if by miracle, clears his way : not indeed into luxuriant and luxurious clover, yet into a certain bosky wilderness where existence is still possible, and Freedom, though waited on by Scarcity, is not without sweetness. — CARLYLE.

Some men are like musical glasses, — to produce their finest tone, you must keep them wet. — COLERIDGE.

Great men, like great cities, have many crooked arts and dark alleys in their hearts, whereby he that knows them may save himself much time and trouble. — C. C. COLTON.

Great men, like comets, are eccentric in their courses, and formed to do extensive good, by modes unintelligible to vulgar minds. — IBID.

A good man, like a well trained wrestler, ought to struggle against adversity with the whole energy of his faculties. — DEMOPHILUS.

Why do you make such haste to have done loving me ? You men are like watches, wound up for striking twelve immediately ; but after you are satisfied, the very next that follows, is the solitary sound of a single one. — DRYDEN.

Men are like Geneva watches with crystal faces which expose the whole movement. — EMERSON.

Men are like wine, — not good before the lees of clownishness be settled. — FELTHAM.

Such men grew wiser as well as better, the farther they departed from home, and seemed like rivers, whose streams are not only increased, but refined, as they traveled from their source. — GOLDSMITH.

Wise men, like wine, are best when old ; pretty women, like bread, are best when young. — SAM SLICK.

Man — continued.

As no two pots will boil alike, so with men ; they seethe in trouble with a difference. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

A bad man is like an earthen vessel, easy to break, and hard to mend. A good man is like a golden vessel, — hard to break, and easy to mend. — HITOPADESA.

Men, like peaches and pears, grow sweet a little while before they begin to decay. — O. W. HOLMES.

As is the race of leaves, such is that of men ; some leaves the wind scatters upon the ground, and others the budding wood produces, for they come again in the season of Spring. So is the race of men, one springs up and the other dies. — HOMER.

A man whose great qualities want the ornament of superficial attractions, is like a naked mountain with mines of gold, which will be frequented only till the treasure is exhausted. — DR. JOHNSON.

Good men, like the sea, should still maintain

Their noble tastes in midst of all fresh humours,

That flow about them, to corrupt their streams,

Bearing no season, much less salt of goodness. — BEN JONSON.

Like to the falling of a star,

Or as the flights of eagles are ;

Or like the fresh spring's gaudy hue,

Or silver drops of morning dew ;

Or like a wind that chafes the flood,

Or bubbles which on water stood :

Ev'n such is man, whose borrow'd light

Is straight call'd in, and paid to-night.

The wind blows out, the bubble dies ;

The spring entom'd in autumn lies ;

The dew dries up, the star is shot ;

The flight is past — and man forgot.

— HENRY KING.

Wise men are like moorlands — ride as far as you will on the sound ground, you are sure to come upon a soft place at last. — KINGSLEY.

Man is like a tree which is shaken that its fruit may drop to the ground.

— LAMARTINE.

Great men stand like solitary towers !

— LONGFELLOW.

Great men are like meteors : they glitter and are consumed to enlighten the world. — NAPOLEON.

Men are like money : we must take them for their value, whatever may be the effigy. — MADAME NECKER.

A man, like a watch, is to be valued for his manner of going. — WILLIAM PENN.

Man, like the generous vine, supported lives ;

The strength he gains is from the embrace he gives. — POPE.

Men like bullets, go farthest when they are smoothest. — J. P. RICHTER.

Man is like horse-radish : the more it is grated the more it bites. — IBID.

Men are weathercocks, which are never constant or fixed, but when they are, they are worn out or rusty. — ROUSSEAU.

Most men are like plants : they possess properties which chance discovers. — SAINT-RÉAL.

At ten, Mercury is in the ascendant ; and at that age, a man, like this planet, is characterized by extreme mobility within a narrow sphere where trifles have a great effect upon him ; but under the guidance of so crafty and eloquent a god, he easily makes great progress. Venus begins her sway during his twentieth year, and then a man is wholly given up to the love of women. At thirty, Mars comes to the front, and he is now all energy and strength — daring, pugnacious, and arrogant. — SCHOPENHAUER.

Man — continued.

Men, like butterflies,
Shew not their mealy wings but to the summer ;
And not a man, for being simply man,
Hath any honour. — SHAKESPEARE.

Man, like this sublunary world, is born the sport of two cross planets, love and scorn. — SIR EDWARD SHERBURNE.

If you were to say that man was like a time glass — that both must run out, and both render up their dust, I should listen to you with more attention, because I should feel something like surprise at the sudden relation you had struck out between two such apparently dissimilar ideas as a man and a time glass. — SYDNEY SMITH.

It is in men as in soils, where sometimes there is a vein of gold which the owner knows not of. — SWIFT.

Man, like everything else that lives, changes with the air that sustains him.
— TAINÉ.

A man, like a book, must have an index ; he is divided into chapters, sections, pages, prefaces, and appendix ; in size, quarto, octavo, or duodecimo, and bound in cloth, morocco, antique, or half calf ; the dress, the gait, the behavior, are an index to the contents of this strange book, and give you the number of the page. — T.
DEWITT TALMAGE.

Man is like to vanity : his days are as a shadow that passeth away. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Great men are like oaks, under the branches of which men are happy in finding a refuge in the time of storm and rain ; but when they have to pass a sunny day under them, they take pleasure in cutting the bark and breaking the branches. — THEMISTOCLES.

Great men are like great bells ;
every sound they utter strikes our ears with the noise of thunder. — J.
PENFORD THOMAS.

Man, like to Cassia, is proved best being bruised. — JOHN WEBSTER.

Every man is like the apostle Peter in one respect, that his tongue betrays him. — R. G. WHITE.

Man's like the earth, his hair like grasse is grown,
His veins the rivers are, his heart the stone.

— "WITS RECREATIONS," 1640.

Man-Worship.

This thing of man-worship I am a stranger to ; I don't like it ; it taints every action of life ; it is like a skunk getting into a house — long after he has cleared out, you smell him in every room and closet, from the cellar to the garret. — DAVID CROCKETT.

Manageable.

Manageable as chess-pieces. —
GEORGE MEREDITH.

Manful.

Manful as the man of stone. — A. E.
HOUSMAN.

Manfully.

Manfully, like one who speaks the honest truth. — SOUTHEY.

Manifest.

As clear and as manifest as the nose in a man's face. — ROBERT BURTON.

Manifest as day. — "WARNING FOR FAIRE WOMEN," 1599.

Manifold.

Manifold
As are the passions of uncertain man.
— SAMUEL DANIEL.

Mankind.

The world is like a vast sea ; mankind like a vessel sailing on its tempestuous bosom. Our prudence is its sails, the sciences serve us for oars, good or bad fortune are the favourable or contrary winds, and judgment is the rudder : without this last, the vessel is tossed by every billow, and will find shipwreck in every breeze. — GOLDSMITH.

Manners.

Fine manners are like personal beauty, — a letter of credit everywhere. — C. A. BARTOL.

Manners . . . Like a great rough diamond, it may do very well in a closet by way of curiosity, and also for its intrinsic value. — CHESTER-FIELD.

Manners, like fashions, still from courts descend,
And what the great begin, the vulgar end. — PAUL WHITEHEAD.

Mantle.

Mantle like a flame of fire. — LONG-FELLOW.

Cream and mantle, like a standing pond. — SHAKESPEARE.

Many.

As many lives as a cat. — BUNYAN.

As feele (many) as of leves ben on trees in somer. — CHAUCER.

As many as the phases of the mind's emotion. — HAYDEN SANDS.

March.

March like a rough tumbling storm.
— BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

March like an endless rhyme. — KIPLING.

Marriage.

Marriage is like to casting dice. If chance bring you a virtuous and good-tempered wife, your lot is happy. If you gain instead a gadding, gossiping, and thriftless quean, no wife is yours, but everlasting plague in woman's garb; the habitable globe holds not so dire a torment anywhere. — EPICHARMUS.

Like a dog with a bottle fast tied to his tail,

Like vermin in a trap or a thief in a jail,
Like a Tory in a bog

Or an ape with a clog:

Such is the man who, when he might go free,

Does his liberty lose

For a matrimony noose,

And sells himself into captivity.

— THOMAS FLATMAN.

Marriage is not like the hill of Olympus, wholly clear, without clouds. — THOMAS FULLER.

Marriage to maids is like a war to men; the battle causes fear, but the sweet hope of winning at the last still draws them on. — NATHANIEL LEE.

It is a signe that nothing will assuage your love but marriage: for such is the tying of two in wedlocks, as is the tuning of two lutes in one key, for striking the strings of one, strawes will stirre upon the strings of the other, and in two mindes linked in love, one cannot be delighted, but the other rejoiceth. — LYLX.

You know some of our Grub Street wits compared marriage to a country dance, which scheme I extremely approved, but when I read it I thought it should have been set to the tune of "Love forever"; but they say it never did go to that tune, nor ever would. — ELIZABETH R. MONTAGU.

Marriage is like a flaming candle-light
Placed in the window on a summer's night,

Inviting all the insects of the air
To come and singe their pretty wing-lets there. — ENGLISH SONG.

Married.

Married people, for being so closely united, are but the apter to part: as knots, the harder they are pulled, break the sooner. — POPE.

Marry.

Every man who marries is like the Doge who weds the Adriatic sea: he knows not what he may find therein, — treasures, pearls, monsters, unknown storms. — HEINRICH HEINE.

Marrying.

Marrying . . . 'tis like going a long voyage to sea, where after a while even the calms are distasteful, and the storms dangerous : one seldom sees a new object, 'tis still a deal of sea, sea ; husband, husband, every day, — till one's quite cloy'd with it. — APHRA BEHN.

Marrying a widow is an easy business, like leaping the hedge where another has gone over before. — VAN-BRUGH.

Marrying to increase love is like gaming to become rich. — WYCHERLEY.

Mars.

Mars like the curse on a woman's lips. — EDWARD PEELE.

Masculine.

Masculine as a fox chase. — HENRY MACKENZIE.

Masterful.

Masterful as the blind instinct that compels the migration of schools of fish. — HENRY A. CLAPP.

Masterful as fate. — SWINBURNE.

Masterless.

Masterless as will-o'-the-wisps. — AGNES REPPLIER.

Match.

As evenly matched as two cubes of the same size. — ANON.

Mature.

Matured like flowers by the light of the sun. — ANON.

Maxim.

A maxim is like the seed of a plant, which the soul it is thrown into must expand into leaves and flowers and fruit. — MADAME DE SARTORY.

Maxims . . . have the same use with the burning-glass ; to collect the diffused rays of wit and learning in authors, and make them point with warmth and quickness upon the reader's imagination. — SWIFT.

Meagre.

Meagre as death itself. — JOHN BYROM.

Mean.

Mean as a miser. — ANON.

Mean as an earth-worm. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Mean as falsehood. — MISS MULLOCK.

Mean as dust, and dead as dreams. — WILLIAM WATSON.

Meander.

Meandered . . . like a lazy brook among water-meadows. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

Meandering . . . like a silver scarf outblown

On the fluttering of the gale.

— FRANK WATERS.

Meaningless.

Meaningless as shredded hay. — FRANKLIN P. ADAMS.

Meaningless as an imprint on a wornout coin. — ANON.

Meaningless, like the head of a corpse. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Meaningless as the boom of waves in a drowning head. — EDITH WHARTON.

Meditate.

Meditate deeply, like a warning whisper from Providence. — HUGO.

Meditative.

Meditative, like a girl trying to decide which dress to wear to the party. — O. HENRY.

Meek.

Meek as a Madonna. — ANON.

Meek as a mouse. — IBID.

Meek as mustard. — IBID.

Meek — continued.

Meek as a violet. — ANON.

Meek as Moses. — IBID.

Meek as a matron in mantle gray.
— JOANNA BAILLIE.

Meek as the turtle-dove. — ROBERT BLAIR.

Meek as the man Moses. — COWPER.

Meeke as is a mayde. — CHAUCER.

As meke as ever was any lamb. —
IBID.

As a lamb she sitteth meke and stille, as leef on lynde [Linden tree]. —
IBID.

Meek as any baby. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

As Hester meke. — JOHN LYDGATE.

Meek as a dove. — GEORGE MERE-DITH.

Meek as gruel. — IBID.

Meek as the gentlest of those who in life's sunny valley lie sheltered and warm. — THOMAS MOORE.

Meek as a saint. — POPE.

Meek as May. — IBID.

More meek than lambs. — THE-OCRITUS.

Meek, like to a bankrupt beggar. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Shee meeker, kinder than

The turtle-dove or pelican.

— GEORGE WITHER.

Leans meekly, like a flower
By the still river tempted from its stem

And on its bosom floating.

— N. P. WILLIS.

Meek and patient as a sheathèd sword. — WORDSWORTH.

Meet.

As meet as a rope for a thief. —
JOHN HEYWOOD.

Melancholy.

Melancholy as a graveyard on a rainy day. — ANON.

Melancholy as a hearse-plume. —
IBID.

Melancholy as a mourning-coach in a snowstorm. — IBID.

Melancholy as a squeezed lemon. —
IBID.

Melancholy as a tailor. — IBID.

Melancholy as the moon at full. —
P. J. BAILEY.

Melancholy as a Quaker meetinghouse by moonlight. — J. R. BARTLETT'S
"DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS."

Melancholy . . . like a gamester that has lost his money. — BEAUMONT
AND FLETCHER.

Melancholy as a cow. — GEORGE H.
BOKER.

Melancholy as Monks and Hermits.
— ROBERT BURTON.

Melancholy as Irish melodies. —
BLISS CARMAN.

Melancholy as an unbraced drum.
— MRS. CENTLIVRE.

Melancholy sound . . . like the weeping of a solitary, deserted human heart. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Melancholy as a slighted damsel.
— GOETHE.

Melancholy, like the voice of a child that was spending its infancy without playfulness. — HAWTHORNE.

Melancholic as midnight. — BEN
JONSON.

Melancholy as a cat. — LYLY.

A melancholy strain,
Like the low moaning of the distant sea. — POE.

Melancholy as a gib cat. — SHAKE-
SPEARE.

Melancholy as a lodge in a warren.
— IBID.

Mellow.

Mellow as the far-off lute. — ANON.

Mellow, like a plum which has hung in the sun. — IBID.

Mellow as the anger of waters in caves of the sea-shore. — JOHN W. DE FOREST.

Mellow like the sunlight. — MARY JOHNSTON.

Mellow, like a peach that is ready to drop in your lap. — LOVER.

Mellow as a lamp in a lighted room. — ALICE DUER MILLER.

Melodious.

Melodious as the strain that floats on high,
To soothe the sleep of blameless infancy. — JOHN LEYDEN.

Wild wordless melodies of love like murmur of dreaming brooks in Paradise. — THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON.

Melt

Melts like the fitful vapor. — GRANT ALLEN.

Melted away like an image of snow. — ANON.

Melts like a passing smoke, a nightly dream. — MATTHEW ARNOLD.

Melt as in a dream. — THOMAS BOYD.

Melted as a star might do,
Still smiling as she melted slow.
— E. B. BROWNING.

Melts in the furnace of desire,
Like glass, that's but the ice of fire.
— SAMUEL BUTLER.

Melt, like man, to Time. — BYRON.

Melted like a phantasm. — CALDERON.

Melt like two hungry torrents. — GEORGE CHAPMAN.

Melting, like ghosts before the rising sun. — CHARLES CHURCHILL.

Melt like stragglng snow that falls on fire. — AARON HILL.

Melted like an image of snow. — O. W. HOLMES.

Melting as a lover's prayer. — JOHN HUGHES.

Melt away into the darkness like a snowflake in the water. — HUGO.

Melt like gold refined. — JEAN INGELOW.

Melts in, like the smile that sinks in the face of the dreamer. — EBENEZER JONES.

Sweet Pleasure melteth,
Like the bubbles when rain pelteth,
— KEATS.

Melted, as the rose
Blendeth its odour with the violet.
— IBID.

Melts like a pearl in pot of vinegar. — J. H. MCCARTHY.

Melting, like mist, away. — THOMAS MOORE.

Melted like vapor in the sun. — GEORGE P. MORRIS.

Fond duties melt away like April snows. — MISS MULOCK.

Like frost work in the morning ray,
The fancied fabric melts away.
— SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Melt away,
Like dissolving spray.
— SHELLEY.

Melt, like cloud to cloud. — IBID.

Melts away Like moonlight in the heaven of spreading day. — IBID.

Melted, as in a crucible. — WILLIAM W. STORY.

He melted like a cloud in the silent summer heaven. — TENNYSON.

Melt like mist. — IBID.

Melt away as waters which run continual. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Melt — continued.

Melted like wax. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Melt as an iceberg in the tropics.
— TUPPER.

Melt . . . like the sun from the day. — JOHN WILSON.

Memorable.

Memorable 'as the grave. — DE QUINCEY.

Memory.

Like to a coin, passing from hand to hand,

Are common memories, and day by day

The sharpness of their impress wears away. — ARLO BATES.

Then Memory disclosed her face divine, that like the calm nocturnal lights doth shine within the soul. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Memory is like a purse, if it be overfull that it cannot shut, all will drop out of it. — THOMAS FULLER.

His memory was like a miser's pocket, from which you cannot entice a quarter of a kopek. — NIKOLAI V. GOGOL.

Sweet is the memory of departed friends. Like the mellow rays of the declining sun, it falls tenderly, yet sadly, on the heart. — WASHINGTON IRVING.

Memory is like moonlight, the reflection of brighter rays from an object no longer seen. — G. P. R. JAMES.

Our memory is like a sieve, the holes of which in time get larger and larger ; the older we get, the quicker anything intrusted to it slips from the memory, whereas what was fixed fast in it in early days is there still. — SCHOPENHAUER.

Memory like books that remain a long time shut up in the dust needs to be opened from time to time ; it is necessary, so to speak, to open the leaves, that it may be ready in time of need. — SENECA.

Menace.

Swell menacingly like the first whisper of a rising wind. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Mend.

Mend as sour ale in summer. — HEYWOOD'S "PROVERBS."

Mend.

(See Man.)

Mendacity.

We believe that mendacity, like marriage, is essentially a human convention and that in Heaven there is neither lying nor giving the lie. — NEW YORK SUN.

Merciless.

Merciless as a male tiger. — ANON.

Merciless as Cæsar. — IBID.

Merciless as the grave. — IBID.

Merciless . . . as that of trying to read the Universal Riddle. — LAF-CADIO HEARN.

Merciless as ambition. — JOUBERT.

Merciless as Othello. — OUIDA.

Merciless as waste desire. — JOHN PAYNE.

Mercy.

As freely as the firmament embraces the world, so mercy must encircle friend and foe. — SCHILLER.

The quality of mercy is not strained. It droppeth, as the gentle rain from heaven

Upon the place beneath : it is twice blessed ;

It blesseth him that gives, and him that takes. — SHAKESPEARE.

Mercy is like a rainbow, we must never look for it after dark. — SAMUEL SQUIRE.

Merit.

True merit is like a river ; the deeper it is the less noise it makes. — HALIFAX.

Merit is like musk, which although remaining concealed through the diffusion of its perfume, the nostrils are apprised thereof. — PILPAY.

True merit, like the pearl inside the oyster, is content to remain quiet until it finds an opening. — PUNCH.

True merit, like the light of a glow-worm, shines conspicuous to all except the object which emits it. — ELIZABETH RICORD.

Merit, like the show inside the circus, is of comparatively little use as drawing card ; it is the bluff and buncombe, the hanging drum and megaphone of the barker, which is the successful magnet. — LESLIE DE VAUX.

Merry.

Merry as a haystack sleeper. — ANON.

Merry as a two-year-old. — IBID.

Merry as cap and can. — IBID.

Merry as crickets in an oven. — IBID.

Merry as flowers in May. — IBID.

Merry as mice in malt. — IBID.

Merry as spring. — IBID.

Merry as the maids. — BUNYAN.

Merry as a kitten. — BURNS.

Merry as a marriage bell. — BYRON.

As merry as a fiddler. — "THE CHRISTMAS PRINCE."

Merry as the month of May. — BARRY CORNWALL.

Merry as popinjay. — MICHAEL DRAYTON.

Merry as birds on the bough. — FREDERICK THE GREAT.

As merry as a pie. — "KING'S HALF-PENNY-WORTH OF WIT IN A PENNY-WORTH OF PAPER."

Merry as larks. — W. S. LANDOR.

Merry as spring groves full of birds. — GERALD MASSEY.

Merry as it were June. — MISS MULOCK.

Merry as singing birds. — C. E. NORTON.

Merry as three beans in a blue bladder. — "POOR ROBIN'S ALMANACK."

As merry as a grig. — ENGLISH PROVERB.

As merry as the maltman. — SCOT-TISH PROVERB.

Merry as the day is long. — SHAKE-SPEARE.

As merry, as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burned to bedward.
— IBID.

Merry as crickets. — IBID.

Merry as an ape. — SWIFT.

Meshed.

The red
Is meshed in the brown,
Like a rubied sun in a Venice sail.
— FRANCIS THOMPSON.

Method.

Method is like packing things in a box ; a good packer will get in half as much again as a bad one. — SIR RICHARD CECIL.

Middle.

Standing exactly in the middle of his face like the white in the centre of a target. — ANON.

Mighty.

Mighty as an ivy-suffocated tower against a field of johnny-jump-ups. — AMY LESLIE.

Mild.

Mild and peaceful as Socrates. —
ANON.

Mild as the ev'ning's humid ray. —
THOMAS BLACKLOCK.

Mild as an English summer lingering on the brink of autumn. — BUL-WER-LYTTON.

Mild,
As a mother with her child.
— COLERIDGE.

Mild as an emulsion. — GEORGE
COLMAN, THE YOUNGER.

Mild as any lamb that ever pastured in the fields. — DICKENS.

Mild as any maid. — MICHAEL DRAYTON.

Mild as the gentlest season of the year. — FRANCIS FAWKES.

Mild as the dove ey'd morn awakes
the May. — ELIJAH FENTON.

As mild and humble in her thoughts,
As was Aspasia unto Cyprus.
— ROBERT GREENE.

Mild as the voice of comfort to despair. — WALTER HARTE.

Mild as summer's mildest shower.
— REGINALD HEBER.

Mild as sighing saints. — AARON HILL.

Mild as moonbeams crazed with murderous hates. — O. W. HOLMES.

Mild,
Like the soft snoring of a child. — HOOD.

Mild as a star in water. — KEATS.

Mild
As grazing ox unworried in the meads.
— IBID.

Mild eye like the dawn. — C. J.
KICKHAM.

Mild, as the never wrathful dove.
— JOHN LANGHORNE.

Mild as a saint whose errors are forgiven. — WILLIAM LIVINGSTON.

Mild as the zephyr, like zephyr that throws

Its sweets on the sweet-breathing May.
— EDWARD LOVIBOND.

Mild as the call of spring to buried flowers. — GEORGE MAC-HENRY.

Mild as milk. — JAMES C. MANGAN.

Mild as an evening heaven around
Hesper bright. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Mild as the April eve. — WILLIAM
J. MICKLE.

Mild, as when Zephyrus or Flora breathes. — MILTON.

Mild, like the hour of the setting
sun. — OSSIAN.

Mild as the moon's light. — JOHN PAYNE.

Mild as the lamb. — AMBROSE
PHILIPS.

Mild as the moon. — J. R. PLANCHÉ.

Woe. — MRS. MARY ROBINSON.

Mild as a dove. — SHAKESPEARE.

Mild as the opening morn of May.
— WILLIAM SHENSTONE.

As Juno mild. — SIR PHILIP SIDNEY.

Mild as the murmuring of Hymettian bees

And honied as their harvest.

— SWINBURNE.

Mild as very sleep. — IBID.

All mild and gentle as the silver moon
Sitting heaven's blue aboon.

— ESAIAS TEGNER.

Mild as the kisses of connubial love.
— HENRY KIRKE WHITE.

Mild — continued.

Mild as the murmurs of the moon-light wave. — IBID.

Mild as the opening morn's serenest ray. — WILLIAM WHITEHEAD.

Mild as the close of summer's softest day. — IBID.

Mild as Mr. Tupper's precepts. — WILLIAM WINTER.

Mince.

Mince like a maiden bride. — NICHOLAS BRETON.

Minc'd like a nestling's food. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Mind.

Old minds are like old horses ; you must exercise them if you wish to keep them in working order. — JOHN ADAMS.

Little minds, like weak liquors, are soonest soured. — ANON.

The mind is like a sheet of white paper in this, that the impressions it receives the oftenest, and retains the longest, are black ones. — EDWIN ARNOLD.

The mind's action is like that of an engineer who works under water. He goes down in a diving-bell, and is hidden. The work progresses, and the structure rises, but it does not show above water at all. It is there, but it is deep-seated and concealed. — HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Successful minds work like a gimlet, to a single point. — C. N. BOVÉE.

Our minds are like certain vehicles, — when they have little to carry they make much noise about it, but when heavily loaded they run quietly. — ELIHU BURRITT.

A wise man's mind, as Seneca holds, is like the state of the world above the Moon, ever serene. — ROBERT BURTON.

The mind, that broods o'er guilty woes,
Is like the Scorpion girt by fire,
In circle narrowing as it glows,
The flames around their captive close.

So writhes the mind Remorse hath riven,

Unfit for earth, undoom'd for heaven,
Darkness above, despair beneath,
Around it flame, within it death.

— BYRON.

A weak mind is like a microscope, which magnifies trifling things, but cannot receive great ones. — CHESTERFIELD.

The mind, when imbued with the lessons of wisdom, is like a charioteer ; for it restrains the desires implanted in us, and brings us back to virtue. — DEMOPHILUS.

His mind was like a bottle, extended with the delectable liquor of observation. — DRYDEN.

The mind is like a trunk. If well packed, it holds almost everything ; if ill packed, next to nothing. — JULIUS C. HARE.

Minds like fine pictures are by distance proved,
And objects proper, only as removed.
— WALTER HART.

Sick minds are like sick men that burn with fevers,
Who when they drink, please but a present taste,
And after bear a more impatient fit.
— BEN JONSON.

The mind of man is like the sea, which is neither agreeable to the beholder nor the voyager, in a calm or in a storm, but is so to both when a little agitated by gentle gales ; and so the mind, when moved by soft and easy passions or affections. — CHARLES LAMB.

For as the precious stone Autharitis beeing throwne into the fyre looketh blacke and halfe dead, but being cast into the water glistreth like the Sunne beames : so the precious minde of man once put into the flame of loue, is as it were vglye, and loseth his vertue, but sprinckled with the water of wisdom, and detestation of such fond delightes, it shineth like the golden rayes of Phœbus. — LYL. Y.

The mind is like the eye, for, though it may see all other objects, it cannot see itself, and therefore cannot judge of itself. — PHILO.

As land is improved by sowing it with various seeds, so is the mind by exercising it with different studies. — PLINY.

To the mind's eye things will appear,
At distance through an artful glass,
But bring the flattering objects near,
They're all a senseless gloomy mass.
— MATTHEW PRIOR.

Our minds are like our stomachs ; they are whetted by the change of their food, variety supplies both with fresh appetite. — QUINTILIAN.

Thy mind is like a mirror swung in space,
And whirling on a thread. Now it reflecteth
The heavens, and now the earth.
Now doth the lightning
Write hieroglyphs upon it, and anon
Some deep-sea monster glooms it with his bulk. — AMELIE RIVES.

As the soil, however rich it may be, cannot be productive without culture, so the mind without cultivation can never produce good fruit. — SENECA.

For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich ;
And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
So honor peereth in the meanest habit.
What, is the jay more precious than the lark,
Because his feathers are more beautiful.
— SHAKESPEARE.

The chaste mind, like a polished plane, may admit foul thoughts, without receiving their tincture. — STERNE.

Mindless.

Mindless as the beasts that browse.
— VIOLET FANE.

Mingle.

Mingled . . . like the fragments of a couple of broken lantern slides swept up together. — R. C. BATES.

Our two spirits mingled like scents from varying roses that remain one sweetness, nor can ever more be singled. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Mingled in these vulgar controversies like a knight of romance among caitiff brawlers. — HENRY HALLAM.

Mingle into one,
Like blended streams that make one music as they run. — HOOD.

They had mingled their hearts together as they grew up, as two saplings planted near, mingle their branches as they become trees. — HUGO.

Mingle . . . like sunshine and rain.
— WILLIAM KNOX.

Mingling foes,
Like billows dash'd in conflict.
— JAMES MONTGOMERY.

My soul is commingled with thine,
As water is mingled with wine.
— ORIENTAL.

Meet and mingle like human fear and hope. — A. J. RYAN.

Mirth.

Mirth is like a flash of lightning that breaks through a gloom of clouds and glitters for a moment ; cheerfulness keeps up a daylight in the mind and fills it with a steady and perpetual serenity. — ADDISON.

Mirth, like light, will all too often take its birth mid darkness and decay. — MISS LONDON.

Mirthful.

Mirthful as an undertaker's mute.
— BALZAC.

Mischievous.

Mischievous as a kitten. — ANON.

Mischievous as a monkey. — BALZAC.

Mischievous as a marmoset. — OUIDA.

Miser.

The wealth of misers, like the evening sun sinking below the horizon, contributes nothing to the enjoyment of mankind. — DEMOPHILUS.

The miser swimming in gold seems to me like a thirsty fish. — J. PETT-SENN.

Miserable.

Miserable as a frost-bitten apple. — ANON.

Miserable as the fifth act of a tragedy. — IBID.

Misfortune.

Misfortunes are like the creations of Cadmus, they destroy one another. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Mishap.

Mishaps are like knives, that either serve us or cut us, as we grasp them by the blade or the handle. — LOWELL.

Mistress.

Mistresses, like friends, are lost by letting 'em handle your money. — VANBRUGH.

Mistresses are like books. If you pore upon them too much, they doze you, and make you unfit for company; but if used discreetly you are the fitter for conversation by 'em. — WILLIAM WYCHERLEY.

Misty.

Misty as a shape in a dream. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Mix.

Mix, like bards, the useful with the sweet. — JOEL BARLOW.

Mix as mists do. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Mixed together like jackstraws. — IRVIN S. COBB.

Are mixed as the mist of some devilish dream. — KIPLING.

Mix them up
Like self-destroying poisons in one cup. — SHELLEY.

Moans like a dying hound. — HENRY H. BROWNELL.

Moans . . . like wind through ill-shut casements. — E. B. BROWNING.

Moan like nightbirds. — CARLYLE.

Moan, like the voice of one who crieth in the wilderness alone.

— LONGFELLOW.

Moaned like some stricken thing . . . strangled with its own despair. — DON MARQUIS.

Moaning, like the voices of spirits departing in pain. — OWEN MEREDITH.

A wild and desolate moan,
As a sea heart-broken on the hard brown stone.

— JOAQUIN MILLER.

Moans like a tender infant in its cradle,
Whose nurse had left it.

— OTWAY.

Moan, like me who hath lost the last and best. — T. BUCHANAN READ.

Moan—continued.

As running rivers moan
On their course alone,
So I moan
Left alone. — C. G. ROSSETTI.

Moan like the waves at set of autumn days. — ELIZA SCUDDER.

The forest moans and vibrates like a vast Æolian harp. — JOHN C. VAN DYKE.

Moaned . . . like a dirge. — FRANK WATERS.

Mob.

The mob, like the ocean, is very seldom agitated without some cause superior and exterior to itself; but . . . both are capable of doing the greatest mischief after the cause which first set them in motion has ceased to act. — C. C. COLTON.

Mobile.

Mobile as humanity. — DOMAS, FILZ.

Mock.

Mocks as whom the fen-fire leads
By the creed-wrought faith of faithless souls that mock their doubts with creeds. — SWINBURNE.

Modern.

Modern as an arc light. — AMY LESLIE.

Modest.

Modest as a squash. — ANON.

Modest and shy as a nun. — WIL-LIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

SWINBURNE.

Molten.

Molten as lead. — SWINBURNE.

Momentary.

Momentary as a sound. — SHAKES-PEARE.

Monarchy.

Monarchy is like a work of nature, well composed both to grow and continue. — BACON.

A monarchy is like a man-of-war — bad shots between wind and water hurt it exceedingly; there is danger of capsizing. But democracy is a raft. You cannot easily upturn it.
It is a wet place, but it is a pretty safe one. — JOSEPH COOK.

Money.

Public money is like holy water:
every one helps himself to it. — ANON.

Money is like manure; of very little use unless it be spread. — BACON.

Munny is like promises, easier maid than kept. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Money is like the manna of the wilderness: sweet and wholesome if it is gathered and used by faith each day: breeding worms if hoarded by doubt. — HUGH O. PENTICOST.

Money is like whiskey: a certain quantity of it improves the condition, but too much brings about bestiality.
— CHANNING POLLOCK.

A man without money is like a ship without sails. — DUTCH PROVERB.

Money — continued.

His money comes from him like drops of blood. — JOHN RAY'S "HAND-BOOK OF PROVERBS."

A man without money is like a bird without wings; if he soars he falls to the ground and dies. — ROUMANIAN PROVERB.

Like natural sculpture in cathedral cavern. — KEATS.

Stood motionless . . . like some exquisite chrys-elephantine statue, all ivory and gold. — CHARLES KINGSLEY.

Motionless as a spectre. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Motionless as the distant purple hills
On which the shadows of the white clouds rest.

— R. K. MUNKITTRICK.

As motionless as death. — THOMAS L. PEACOCK.

Motionless, like a bereaved creature. — CHARLES READE.

Motionless, as if she were seeking in her mind the explanation of some mystery or the key of some riddle. — JOSÉ SELGAS.

Like a living thing distressed.

— WHITTIER.

Mournful.

Mournful as the grave. — ANON.

Mournful as the rhythm of the seas. — IBID.

A voice as mournful as the dying light in the west — for a vague reminder of Death is divinely set in the heavens, and the sun above gives the same warning that is given here on earth by the flowers and the bright insects of the day. — BALZAC.

Mournful — but mournful of another's crime,

She look'd as if she sat by Eden's door, And grieved for those who could return no more. — BYRON.

Mournful as . . . Memnon's harp. — KEATS.

Mournful as the dancing of dead leaves. — GERALD MASSEY.

Mournful as the dead below. — R. M. MILNES.

MURGER.

Muffled.

Muffled and dumb like barefoot dervishes. — EMERSON.

Multiply.

Multiply in swarms, like vermin. —
HUGO.

Their forms and features multiplied,
As the reflection of a light
Between two burnished mirrors gleams,
Or lamps upon a bridge at night
Stretch on and on before the sight,
Till the long vista endless seems.
— LONGFELLOW.

Multiply in seed like Abraham. —
RABELAIS.

Naked as my nail. — MASSINGER.

The country is naked as the sea. — JULES SANDEAU.

Naked as the vulgar air. — SHAKESPEARE.

As naked as their mothers bore them. — SWIFT.

Naked as apes. — VOLTAIRE.

Naked as a Tower. — WORDSWORTH.

Name.

Women's good name, O my lady, is like curded milk, the least dust fouleth it; and like glass, which, if it be cracked, may not be mended. — ARABIAN NIGHTS.

A good name is like a precious ointment; it filleth all around about, and will not easily away; for the odors of ointments are more durable than those of flowers. — BACON.

Names like jewels flashing the night of time. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

A man's name is not like a mantle, which merely hangs about him, and which one perchance may safely twitch and pull, but a perfectly fitting garment, which like the skin has grown over and over him, at which one cannot rake and scrape without injuring the man himself. — GOETHE.

A great name without merit is like an epitaph on a coffin. — MADAME DE PUISIEUX.

A good name is better than precious ointment; and the day of death than the day of one's birth. — OLD TESTAMENT.

A good name is like sweet-smelling ointment. — IBID.

Nameless.

Nameless as God. — HUGO.

Narrow.

The nations narrow and expand,
As tides that ebb, or tides that flow.
— LORD DE TABLEY.

Nasty.

Nasty as the opaque whiteness of boiled veal. — ANON.

Nation.

Nations, like individuals, are powerful in the degree that they command the sympathies of their neighbors. — C. N. BOVÉE.

I have seen some nations like overloaded asses, Kick off their burdens, meaning the higher classes. — BYRON.

Every nation seems to me like a plant, of which the lower class is the root, the middle class the stem, and the upper class the flower. — PIERRE DE COULEVAIN.

Nations, like individuals, live and die; but civilization cannot die. — GIUSEPPE MAZZINI.

Nation — continued.

A warring nation, like an orator, should know when to stop. — NEW REPUBLIC.

Like men, nations are purified and strengthened by trials. — SAMUEL SMILES.

Natural.

Natural as the breeze
That stirs amongst the forest trees.
— SARAH F. ADAMS.

Natural as for ivy to climb a tree.
— ANON.

Natural as life. — IBID.

Natural as milk to a calf. — IBID.

Natural as nature. — IBID.

As natural as that a genius should wear queer clothes. — IBID.

Natural as the Marseillaise to a French riot. — IBID.

Natural as whooping to owls. — IBID.

'Tis as natural for women to pride themselves in fine clothes as 'tis for a peacock to spread his tail. — IBID.

Natural to die as to be born. — BACON.

Natural as grinning to a hyena. — J. R. BARTLETT'S "DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS."

Natural as the bee to the flower.
— JOSH BILLINGS.

Natural as dancing bears to a bag-piper. — TOM BROWN.

Natural as to eat, sleep, and wear a nightcap. — JOHN FORD.

Natural as the love of life in the merest dumb thing that knows nothing of ideas, of Country, realms, and policies, nothing of war. — JOHN GALSWORTHY.

Natural as bird-notes. — HAWTHORNE.

Natural as daylight. — IBID.

Natural as primping at a looking-glass. — O. W. HOLMES.

Natural as dunghill steam. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Natural as sunlight on the sea. — OSCAR WILDE.

Natural as light. — N. P. WILLIS.

Natural as dreams to feverish sleep.
— WORDSWORTH.

Naturally.

Naturally as a bird warbles in May.
— ANON.

As naturally as a chestnut bursts its pod, and a chicken its shell. — IBID.

Naturally as fungus grows out of a dying tree. — IBID.

Naturally as pigs squeak. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

As naturally as the descendant from a line of suicides thinks of killing himself. — HAWTHORNE.

Naturally as the bleating of a sheep.
— WILLIAM HAZLITT.

Naturally as needles turn to the loadstone. — FRANCES LITTLE.

As naturally as bees swarm and follow their queen. — HENRY D. THOREAU.

Nature.

Nature, like man, sometimes weeps for gladness. — BEACONSFIELD.

Fine natures are like fine poems, — a glance at the first two lines suffices, for a guess into the beauty that waits you if you read on. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Our nature is like the sea, which gains by the flow of the tide in one place what it has lost by the ebb in another. — SIR RICHARD CECIL.

Nature, like liberty, is but restrained
By the same laws which first herself ordained. — POPE.

Nature — continued.

Nature, like oil, will rise uppermost.
— JAMES RALPH.

Nature, like a loving mother, is ever trying to keep land and sea, mountain and valley, each in its place, to hush the angry winds and waves, balance the extremes of heat and cold, of rain and drought, that peace, harmony, and heart may reign supreme. — ELIZABETH CADY STANTON.

The finest qualities of our nature, like the bloom on fruits, can be preserved only by the most delicate handling. — HENRY D. THOREAU.

Naughty.

Naughty as Gautick, where the devil struck for shorter hours. — ANON.

Near.

Near as two ha'pennies for a penny.
— ANON.

Near as one second is to another.
— IBID.

Near as the bark to [the] tree. — WILLIAM CAMDEN'S "REMAINS."

As neere is Fancie to Beautie, as the pricke to the rose, as the stalke to the rynde, as the earth to the roote.
— LYLX.

More near and near,
Like doves about a dovecote, wheeling round. — TENNYSON.

Nearsighted.

Near-sighted as a mole. — ANON.

Neat.

Neat as a nail. — ANON.

Neat as a new pin. — IBID.

Neat as ninepence. — IBID.

Neat as wax. — IBID.

Neat as fresh spring herbs. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Neat as wax-work. — HENRY J. FINN.

Neat as a postman's knock. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Necessary.

As necessary as breathing is to live.
— ANON.

Necessary as for the butterfly to escape from the worm to become a butterfly. — IBID.

As necessary as skin to the apple. — IBID.

As necessary as Churches. — ROBERT BURTON.

Necessary . . . as friction in mechanics. — C. C. COLTON.

Necessary as one's digestion. — THOMAS HEYWOOD.

Necessary . . . as rakehells in an army. — JOHN WEBSTER.

Necessary . . . as the gargoyle on the spire and the high altar are necessary parts of a Gothic cathedral. — H. G. WELLS.

Neck.

Her neck is like the neck of doe. — ARABIAN NIGHTS.

A neck like an ingot of silver. — IBID.

A neck as white as whale's bone,
Compared with a lace of stone.
— ROBERT GREENE.

Her neck like a stately tower,
Where love himself imprisoned lies,
To watch for glances, every hour,
From her divine and sacred eyes.
— THOMAS LODGE.

Thy neck is like the swan, and fair
as the pearl. — LOVER.

Her snowie neck lyke to a marble towre. — SPENSER.

Thy neck is as a tower of ivory.
— OLD TESTAMENT.

Thy neck is like the tower of David builded for an armoury, whereon there hang a thousand bucklers, all shields of mighty men. — IBID.

Need.

Need . . . as pansies need the dew.
— ANON.

Need a wife as much as a dog does a side-pocket. — GROSE'S "DICTIONARY OF THE VULGAR TONGUE."

Needful.

Needful as the sun. — GRANT ALLEN.

As needful to the forest-tree as sun and gentle shower. — TUPPER.

Neglected.

Neglected, as the moon by day. —
SWIFT.

Negligence.

Wanton negligence is like a net,
Which for unwary feet the powers have set. — ANON.

Nervous.

Nervous as a cat that hears a mouse in the wall. — ANON.

Nervous as a witch. — IBID.

Nervous as a watch. — F. MARION
CRAWFORD.

Nervous as a mouse. — G. B.
SHAW.

New.

New as day. — BEN JONSON.

New as sight. — FRANCIS THOMPSON.

Newspaper.

A newspaper, like a theatre, must mainly owe its continuance in life to the fact that it pleases many persons ; and in order to please many persons it will, unconsciously perhaps, respond to their several tastes, reflect their various qualities, and reproduce their views. — WILLIAM WINTER.

Nice.

Nice as Marie Antoinette playing milkmaid. — ANON.

As nice as ninepence. — IBID.

Nyse as a nonne's henne. — SIR
THOMAS WILSON.

Nimble.

Nimble as a bee on a tar-barrel. —
ANON.

Nimble as a cow in a cage. — IBID.

Nimble as a lizard. — IBID.

Nimble as an eel. — IBID.

As nimble as a wireless spark, that hurdles the ether, pole-vaults the oceans and circles the ends of the earth in a flash. — IBID.

Nimble as ninepence. — IBID.

Nimble as roes. — CARLYLE.

Nimble as thought. — CERVANTES.

Nimble as quicksilver. — GEORGE
COLMAN, THE YOUNGER.

Nimble, like a shadow. — JOHN
FLETCHER.

Nimble as a hare. — SWIFT.

Nimble-fingered as a harper. — JOHN TAYLOR.

Nimble as quarrel from a crossbow shot. — FRANÇOIS VILLON.

Nimbley.

Nimbley as juggler's balls from cup to cup. — JAMES PUCKLE.

Nod.

Nodded like a plume. — DICKENS.

Nodded in bright array, like hollyhocks heavy with blossoms. — LONG-FELLOW.

Nodded her head like a mandarin. —
CHARLES READE.

Nodded at each other like a congregation of Anabaptists. — SMOLLETT.

Noise.

To catch a squirrel make a noise like a nut. — ANON.

As much fuss and noise as a one-legged man falling down stairs. — IBID.

Make noises like a drunken Zulu trying to sing a Swedish folk song. —
IRVIN S. COBB.

Noise — continued.

Make a noise like an assessment. —
O. HENRY.

The noise was in the beast's belly like unto the questyng of thirty couple hounds. — THOMAS MALORY.

Noiseless.

Noiseless as a shadow. — ANON.

Noiseless as a lapwing. — IBID.

Noiseless as the circulation of the blood. — IBID.

Noiseless as the gathering storm before the tempest. — IBID.

Noiseless as the sunlight. — THOMAS
ASHE.

Noiseless as a bright mist rolls down a hill. — CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

As noiseless as the trail of the swift snake and pilgrim snail. — T. G.
HAKE.

Noiseless as night's soft shade. —
AARON HILL.

Noiseless as fear in a wide wilderness. — KEATS.

Noiseless as the passing mountain rain. — IBID.

Noiseless as a black shadow. —
KIPLING.

Noiseless . . . as the falling dew
— GEORGE MAC-HENRY.

Noiseless as sleep. — T. BUCHANAN
READ.

Noiseless as the years descend. —
IBID.

Noiseless as the owlet's wing. — IBID.

Noiseless as if velvet-shod. — WHIT-TIER.

Noiselessly.

Noiselessly as the daylight comes back when night is done,

And the crimson streak on an ocean's cheek grows into the great sun.

— MRS. C. F. ALEXANDER.

Noiselessly as the springtime her crown of verdure weaves,
And all the trees on all the hills open their thousand leaves. — IBID.

As noiselessly as fairies' feet that press
The dewdropt grass.

— JOHN PAYNE.

Glide noiselessly as spirits of the night. — MICHAEL SCOTT.

Noisy.

Noisy as a boiler-shop. — ANON.

Noisy as a menagerie. — IBID.

Noisy as a creditors' meeting. — IBID.

Noisy as a flock of crow-blackbirds in the migration season. — IBID.

Noisy as a cookstove falling down stairs. — IBID.

Noisy as burial-howlers at full cry.
— IBID.

Noisy as a living skeleton having a fit on a hardwood floor. — IBID.

Noisy as a dozen drums. — "FOUND-LING HOSPITAL FOR WIT."

Noisy as a kettle-drum. — O. W.
HOLMES.

Noisy as at a fair. — GEORGE
MEREDITH.

Noisy as women bathing in a river.
— OSMANLI PROVERB.

As noisy as a hen with one chicken.
— CHARLES READE.

Nonsense.

Nonsense : like to the thundering tone of unspoke speeches . . . like the fiery tombstone of a cabbage. —
RICHARD CORBET.

Nonsense — like swimming on a carpet. — CHARLES READE.

Low nonsense is like that in the Barrel, which is altogether flat, tasteless and insipid. High nonsense is like that in the Bottle, which has in Reality no mere Strength and Spirit than the other, but frets, and flies, and bounces, and by the help of a little Wind that is got in it, imitates the Passions of much nobler liquor. — SIR RICHARD STEELE.

Nose.

Flabby nose like a brinjall, or egg-plant. — ARABIAN NIGHTS.

Nose like a promontory. — ROBERT BURTON.

Sharp nose like a sharp autumn evening, inclined to be frosty towards the end. — DICKENS.

With angry bottle nose,
Like a red cabbage rose.

— HORACE SMITH.

Notch.

Notched him like a carbonado. — SHAKESPEARE.

Novel.

A novel, like a bundle of wood, the more fagots it contains the greater its value. — BULWER-LYTTON.

A novel is typically as far removed from a play as a bird is from a fish . . . any attempt to transform one into the other is apt to result in a sort of flying-fish, a betwixt-and-between-thing. — BLISS PERRY.

A novel is the world's truth with a beautiful woman walking through it. — DAVID SWING.

Nude.

As nude as a raw oyster. — IRVIN S. COBB.

Numb.

Growing numb from the feet up,
Like one stepping deeper and deeper into a stream of ice.

— EDGAR LEE MASTERS.

Numberless.

Numberless as are the dead. — P. J. BAILEY.

As numberless as they that at last will throng into the valley of Jehoshaphat. — SIGMUND KRASINSKI.

Numberless as the gay motes that people the sunbeams. — MILTON.

Numerous.

Numerous as grains of silver in the bowels of the Rockies. — ANON.

Numerous as hailstones. — IBID.

Numerous as insects on the banks of the Nile. — IBID.

Numerous as maggots in a Cheshire cheese. — IBID.

Numerous as the breaths a patriarch has breathed. — IBID.

Numerous as the heads of Briareus. — IBID.

Numerous as the holes in the mantle of Diogenes. — IBID.

Numerous as the leaves of the forest. — IBID.

Numerous as the mouths of the Ganges. — IBID.

Numerous as the mouths of the Nile. — IBID.

Numerous as the pearls of morning-dew, which hang on herbs and flowers. — IBID.

As numerous as the stars of heaven
Are the fond hopes to mortals given.
— RICHARD DABNEY.

Numerous as sands upon the ocean shore. — PHILIP FRENEAU.

Numerous as unsold shares in an over-capitalized mining company. — F. C. GRIFFITH.

Num'rous as birds that o'er the forest play. — WALTER HARTE.

Numerous as the fish that sail the wide sea over. — ITALIAN LOVE SONG.

Numerous as shadows haunting fairily
The brain. — KEATS.

Numerous as a night of stars. — GERALD MASSEY.

Numerous as leaves that strew the autumnal gale. — SHELLEY.

Numerous as the hairs of his head. — PAUL WIGGINS.

Numerous as the writings of Ibid. — IBID.

O

Oaths.

Lovers' oaths are like mariners' prayers, uttered in extremity; but when the tempest is o'er, and that the vessel leaves tumbling, they fall from protesting to cursing. — JOHN WEBSTER.

Lovers' oaths are like fetters made of glass, that glisten fair, but couple no restraint. — ZENO.

Obdurate.

Obdurate as the grave. — WELSH BALLAD.

Obdurate as a bailiff where his dues are concerned. — BALZAC.

Obedience.

Passive obedience, like jumping off a castle-roof at the word of a czar. — EMERSON.

Obedient.

Obedient as the needle to the pole. — ANON.

Obedient as the yew to the tender's will. — IBID.

Obedient as a puppet. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Obedient as the scabbard. — SHAKESPEARE.

Obediently.

Obediently bent as a willow wand. — OUIDA.

Obey.

Obeeyed, as the she-wolf obeys her mate, with a growl. — HUGO.

Obey,
Like children under wise paternal sway.
— SOUTHEY.

Obligation.

Like an Irishman's obligation, all on one side. — G. F. NORTHALL.

Obnoxious.

Obnoxious as an alligator. — TOM TAYLOR.

Obscure (Adjective).

Obscure as Mallarmé. — ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

Obscure (Verb).

Obscured as with a veil. — ANON.

Obscurely.

Moves obscurely like the hand of fate. — AARON HILL.

Observations.

His observations are like a sieve, that lets the finer flour pass, and retains only the bran of things. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

Obsolete.

Obsolete as a Congress shoe. — ANON.

Obsolete as the coalscuttle bonnet and the hoopskirt. — IBID.

Obsolete as the Minotaur of Crete. — ANDREW LANG.

Obstinate.

Obstinate as a discharged school-director. — ANON.

Obstinate as a mule. — IBID.

Obstinate as death. — DRYDEN.

Obstinate as a pig, will neither lead nor drive. — THOMAS FULLER.

Obstinate . . . like the corpse in the fable, threatening the driver of the hearse with vengeance dire at every gate of fatal charnel-house. — SIGMUND KRASINSKI.

Obstinate as sin. — STRINDBERG.

Obtrusive.

Obtrusive as violent colors in a sober woof. — ANON.

Obvious.

Obvious as circus parade. — ANON.

Obvious as noonday sun. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Obvious — continued.

Obvious as stars on a clear night. —
ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

Obvious as the midnight stars. —
WILLIAM J. MICKLE.

Obvious as the gloss upon a new silk hat. — H. G. WELLS.

Occupation.

As the Oxe is most apt for the plough, the Horse for the carte, and the hound for hunting: So ought men to chuse that occupation, and Trade of life, wherunto by nature they are most apt.
As he which hath no house of his owne, wandereth here and there: So he which followeth no certaine Trade of life, must foolishly assay many sorts and chaunces. — ROBERT CAWDRAY'S "A TREASURIE OR STORE-HOUSE OF SIMILES," 1600.

Odd.

Odd as the gesticulations and antic motions of the Satyrs. — BACON.

Odorous.

Odorous as an angel's fresh-culled crown. — P. J. BAILEY.

Odorous as a bouquet. — HUGO.

Odorous as incense gathered in the skies. — RICHARD SAVAGE.

Off.

Off like a snip. — ANON.

Off, like chimera, glinting, flitting, gay and light and free. — IBID.

Off like the lid of a pumpkin pie. —
IBID.

Off like a shot. — R. H. BARHAM.

Gang off like a squib or a cracker on a rejoicing night, in a noise and a stink, and are never heard of after. —
CHARLES MACKLIN.

Offensive.

Offensive as the sun to weak eyes.
— ANON.

Offensive . . . as a smell of cooking in the drawing room — EDITH WHAR-TON.

Office.

High office is like a pyramid: only two kinds of animals reach the summit,
— reptiles and eagles. — D'ALEMBERT.

Ogle.

Ogle like a provincial tenor. —
DUMAS, FILS.

Oily.

Oily as the King's constable's lamp.
— DR. JOHNSON.

Old.

Old as a serpent. — ANON.

Old as Charing-Cross. — IBID.

Old as circus jokes. — IBID.

Old as creation. — IBID.

Old as Eve. — IBID.

Old as grey eternity. — IBID.

Old as Hercules. — IBID.

Old as Jericho. — IBID.

Old as man. — IBID.

Old as Methuselah. — IBID.

Old as Nestor. — IBID.

Old as poverty. — IBID.

Old as Solomon. — IBID.

Old as the age of stone. — IBID.

Old as the hills. — IBID.

Old as the Prophet Ezekiel. — IBID.

Old as the rebuilding of Samaria. —
IBID.

Old as Trilobites. — IBID.

Old as Zoroaster. — IBID.

Old as Paradise. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Old as my little finger. — JOHN DAY.

As old as Fate. — LORD DE TABLEY.

Old as Time. — AUSTIN DOBSON.

Old — continued.

Ever old and ever new as love. —
GEORGE DU MAURIER.

Old as thought. — ELBERT HUBBARD.

Old as Priam. — LONGFELLOW.

As old as human nature. — W. H.
MALLOCK.

As old as heartache. — MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

As old as the itch. — SPANISH PROV-ENI.

Old as the shepherds. — G. B.
SHAW.

Old as the earth is old. — ARTHUR
SYMONS.

Wax old like a garment. — NEW TESTAMENT.

Old as hope. — FRANCIS THOMPSON.

One.

In one,
As all the stars found utterance through the sun. — SWINBURNE.

Oozing.

The damp oozed up through the thick brick floor like water through the sides of a Moorish jar. — BALZAC.

Oozing like a leg of mutton on the spit. — T. F. MEAGHER.

Opaque.

Opaque as the sky. — ANON.

Open (Adjective).

Open as a smile. — E. B. BROWN-ING.

Open as shore to the sea. — ROSE T.
COOKE.

Open as the mid-day. — R. DAVEN-PORT.

Open as the inn gates to receive guests. — GEORGE GASCOIGNE.

Wide open like the church portals when the bride and bridgroom enter.
— O. W. HOLMES.

Open as a plate. — GEORGE MERE-DITH.

Minds open as a well-read book. —
CHARLES SANGSTER.

Open as day for melting charity. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Open (Verb).

Opened inertly like the hands of the dead. — HUGO.

To lay oneself open like an oyster. —
“A KNACK TO KNOWE A KNAVE.”

The dreadful truth was opened like a gulf. — JAMES S. KNOWLES.

Open-mouthed.

Open-mouthed, like a crow at a walnut. — BALZAC.

Open-mouthed as a young child
Wondering with a mind at fault.

— GEORGE MEREDITH.

Opera.

Old operas are like old bonnets:
they ought to be remodelled, re-trimmed from time to time. — A. E.
HOUSMAN.

An opera, like a pillory, may be said,
To nail our ears down and expose our head. — YOUNG.

Opinion.

Opinions, like showers, are generated in high places. — C. C. COLTON.

Social opinion is like a sharp knife.
There are foolish people who regard it only with terror, and dare not touch or meddle with it; there are more foolish people, who, in rashness or defiance, seize it by the blade, and get cut and mangled for their pains; and there are wise people, who grasp it discreetly by the handle, and use it to carve out their own purposes. — MRS.
JAMESON.

Opinions! — they are like the clothes we wear, which warm us, not with their heat, but with ours. — WALTER PATER.

Opinion — continued.

Opinion is like a pendulum and obeys the same law. If it goes past the center of gravity on one side, it must go a like distance on the other; and it is only after a certain time that it finds the true point at which it can remain at rest. — SCHOPENHAUER.

Opinions, like fashions, always descend from those of quality to the middle sort; and thence to the vulgar, where they are dropped and vanish. — SWIFT.

Opportunity.

Lost opportunities are like precious jewels locked in the casket of regret, whose key is held in the unchanging past. — ANON.

Opportunitays, like eggs, don't kum but one at a time. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Opposed.

Opposed as the two poles. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Opposite.

Opposite as black and white. — ANON.

Opposite as fire and water. — IBID.

Opposite as oil and vinegar. — IBID.

Opposite as the poles. — IBID.

Opposite as day and darkness. — THOMAS DEKKER.

Opposition to a man in love is like oil to fire. — OUIDA.

Oppress.

Oppressed like foul air. — DICKENS.

Oppresses like a crown of gold. — ALEXANDER SMITH.

Oppression.

Ideal oppression . . . something like a fly serving spiders. — HUGO.

Oratory.

Oratory, like the drama, abhors lengthiness; like the drama, it must keep doing. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Order.

Ordered as the morning light. — TUPPER.

Orderliness.

Painful orderliness, like a city procession under the conduct of the police. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Orderly.

Orderly, like fresh veiled nuns. — BALZAC.

Oriental.

~~Oriental~~ as a rug. — ANON.

Original.

~~Original~~ as original sin. — ANON.

Ornamental.

Ornamental as a band-wagon. — ANON.

Ornamental as the signs of old London. — IBID.

Orthodoxy.

Orthodoxy combined with brilliancy is like glycerine combined with vaccine — it enables a little to go a very long way. — H. D. TRAILL.

Oscillated.

The earth . . . oscillated like a thin crust beneath our feet. — CHARLES R. DARWIN.

Out.

In and out like a needle through cloth. — ANON.

Out — continued.

Go out, like an untended lamp. —
SCHILLER.

Outpoured.

Abundance is outpoured
Like worship at a shrine adored.
— BAYARD TAYLOR.

Outrageous.

Outrageous as the sea, dark, wasteful, wild. — MILTON.

Outspoken.

Outspoken as a north-wester. —
ANON.

Overcast.

Overcast,
Like a snow-covered pine in the vast Dim forests of Orkadale.
— LONGFELLOW.

Overcome.

Overcome us like a summer's cloud.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Overflow.

Overflowing like a crock of salt-rising dough in a warm kitchen. — IRVIN S.
COBB.

My being overflowed,
Wert like a golden chalice to bright wine
Which else had sunk into the thirsty dust. — SHELLEY.

Overtake.

Overtake . . . like sea waves. —
T. EDGAR PEMBERTON.

Overturned.

Idols are overturned like new-mown grass. — SIGMUND KRASINSKI.

Overwhelm.

Overwhelmed, like the miner upon whom a roof has just fallen. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

As when a torrent, swell'd with wintry rains,

Pours from the mountains o'er the delug'd plains,

And pines and oaks, from their foundations torn,

A country's ruins! to the seas are borne :

Fierce Ajax thus o'erwhelms the yielding throng. — HOMER (POPE).

O'erwhelming his fair sight,
Like misty vapors when they blot the sky. — SHAKESPEARE.

P

Packed.

Packed like Norfolk biffins. — ANON.

Packed like the leaves in a closed book. — O. W. HOLMES.

Pagan.

Pagan as the Muses. — ANON.

Pain (Noun).

Pain . . . like the bitterness of dissolution. — THOMAS HARDY.

Pain and pleasure, like light and darkness, succeed each other. —
STERNE.

They shall be in pain as a woman that travaileth. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Pain (Verb).

Pains like a horrible vulgarism. —
LAFCADIO HEARN.

Painful.

Painful, as a visit to the dentist. —
GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Painted.

Painted like the leaves of Autumn.
— LONGFELLOW.

Painted like the sky of morning. —
IBID.

Painting.

As is painting, so is poetry : some pieces will strike you more if you stand near, and some, if you are at a greater distance : one loves the dark ; another, which is not afraid of the critic's subtle judgment, chooses to be seen in the light ; the one has pleased once, the other will give pleasure if ten times repeated. — HORACE.

Pale

Pale as an Angel of the Grave. — ANON.

Pale as Banquo's ghost. — IBID.

Pale as linen. — IBID.

Pale as parchment. — IBID.

Pale as the gleam of a glow-worm. — IBID.

Pale as the haggard features of despair. — IBID.

Pale as the rose-leaves withered in the northern gale. — IBID.

Pale as turnips were his cheeks. — IBID.

Pale as with the sickness that promised death. — IBID.

Grew pale, like a flower that is cut off. — ASSYRIAN.

tossed out to eternity with thrills of time upon it. — E. B. BROWNING.

Palpitating at the least emotion like the nostrils of an amorous tigress. — GAUTIER.

Like the birch-leaf palpitated. —
LONGFELLOW.

Palpitant as men's pulses palpitate
Between the flowing and ebbing tides of fate

That wash their lifelong waifs of weal and woe

Through night and light and twilight to and fro. — SWINBURNE.

Pamper.

Pampering of their paunches, like a monk that maketh his jubilee. — HUGH LATIMER.

Pang.

As hot as death's is chill with fierce convulse. — KEATS.

Panting, and swept as by the sense of death. — SWINBURNE.

Panted like a sick man's fitful breath. — IBID.

Panted hard,
Like one that feels a nightmare on his bed. — TENNYSON.

As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Parch.

Mouth parched like a shade that comes to salute friends of former days. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Parch'd like the fallow destitute of corn. — FRANCIS FAWKES.

Parch to the peppered palate like a pea. — HOOD.

Pardon.

God pardons like a mother who kisses away the repentant tears of her child. — HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Paris.

Paris — like a pretty woman, has mysterious fits of ugliness or beauty. — BALZAC.

Parted.

Parted like a scattered flock before a lion. — SYDNEY DOBELL.

Parted like a stone from a sling. — CHARLES READE.

Parted thence,
As pearls from diamonds dropped.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Parting.

Partings are like postscripts to a letter — indiscreet utterances that do as much mischief to the speaker as to those who overhear them. — BALZAC.

Pass.

Our memory passes like a ripple in the water, or a breeze in the air. — AMIEL.

Passes like a mode. — ANON.

Passed like an uncurbed cavalry. — IBID.

Time passes like the wind. — IBID.

Pass like a rolled syllable of midnight thunder from the coming day. — P. J. BAILEY.

One solitary and foreseeing thought, passed, like a planet's transit o'er the sun. — IBID.

Passed, like the foam of the wave — JANE BARLOW.

As shadows cast by cloud and sun
flit o'er the summer grass,
So, in thy sight, Almighty One!
earth's generations pass.
— WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Pass — continued.

Passed away as fairies vanish at the break of day. — HARTLEY COLERIDGE.

Thy grace must pass
As unremembered things.

— LORD DE TABLEY.

Time passed away as a tale which is told. — DICKENS.

Passed out as quickly as a sunbeam.

New generations pass,
Like shadows on the grass.

— JULIA C. R. DORR.

Passed like a meteor. — DUMAS,
PÈRE.

Pass away as in vision. — FREDERIC HARRISON.

The generations pass, like autumn's fruits,

Garnered, consumed, and springing fresh to life.

— JAMES A. HILLHOUSE.

Passed away like waves. — HUGO.

Pass away —
As flowers that bloom at morn, at eve decay. — FRANCIS SCOTT KEY.

Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?

Like a swift-fleeting meteor, a fast flying cloud,

A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave,

Man passes from life to his rest in the grave. — WILLIAM KNOX.

Little troubles pass like little ripples in a sunny river. — W. S. LANDOR.

Passed like the mournful cry of sunward sailing cranes. — LONG-
FELLOW.

When she had passed, it seemed like the ceasing of exquisite music. — IBID.

Passed like a dream away. —
MACAULAY.

They pass like a shade away. —
JAMES MACPHERSON.

They pass
Like a breath from the face of a glass. — DON MARQUIS.

Pass away, like a thin cloud that melts across the moon. — JAMES MONT-GOMERY.

Passed
Like autumn foliage withering in the blast. — IBID.

Passed like a day-dream. — THOMAS
MOORE.

All gently pass away,
Like mists that flee
From a summer sea. — IBID.

All my days
Passed like an empty vision.
— LEWIS MORRIS.

Pass'd, like swift clouds across a windy sky. — A. J. MUNBY.

Passed along the waves like the chariot of Neptune. — MUNCHAUSEN.

Passed away, like shadows of the moon. — ADELAIDE A. PROCTER.

Passed away,
Like the remembrance of a guest that tarrieth but a day.
— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Pass'd by me
As misers do by beggars.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Passed, like a cloud on the blast. —
SHELLEY.

Must pass, as grains of sand must fall,
Beneath the infinite calm sea
Of ages and eternity.

— HARRY B. SMITH.

Passed away like summer clouds. —
SOUTHEY.

And pass as love and sorrow pass,
As shadows flashing down a glass,
As dew-flowers blowing in flowerless grass. — SWINBURNE.

Passes as the grey dew from the morning mountain grasses. — IBID.

Pass as the flight of a year. — IBID.

Pass — continued.

Passed, like a sudden squall that tears
the sea,

Yet leaves a sun to smile the billows down. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Pass like a light. — TENNYSON.

Passeth away as a cloud. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Pass through thy hand as a river.
— IBID.

Passed, like a sweet but transient dream. — FRANK WATERS.

As a cloud of the sunset, slow melting in heaven,

As a star that is lost when the daylight is given,

As a glad dream of slumber, which wakens in bliss,

She hath pass'd to the world of the holy from this. — WHITTIER.

Pass,

Like shadows through a twilight land. — OSCAR WILDE.

Passed like a fancy that is swept away. — WORDSWORTH.

Passion.

Passions are like fire and water, good servants, but bad masters. —
ANON.

The passions are like fire, useful in a thousand ways and dangerous only in one, through their excess. — C. N.
BOVÉE.

A man without a passion is like a vessel waiting for wind and not budging. — ARSÈNE HOUSSAYE.

Passions are like roses, the more you cut them, the more they grow. — IBID.

Passions are cheap things, common as nuts, and just as often rotten. —
GEORGE W. LOVELL.

Passions, among pure thoughts hid,
Like serpents under flowerets sleeping.
— THOMAS MOORE.

Passion, like the sun at noon,

That burns o'er all he sees,

Awhile as warm, will set as soon—

Then, call it none of these. — IBID.

Our passions are like convulsive fits, which, though they make us stronger for the time, leave us weaker ever after. — POPE.

Passions are likened best to floods and streams; the shallow murmur, but the deep are dumb. — SIR WALTER RALEIGH.

Passions are like storms which, full of the present mischief, serve to purify the atmosphere. — SIR GEORGE RAMSAY.

Our passions, like the seasons turn;
And now we laugh, and now we mourn.

— NICHOLAS ROWE.

Passionate.

Passionate as young love. — ANON.

Passionate men, like fleet hounds, are apt to overrun the scent. —
IBID.

Passionate as the Hun. — J. H.
NEWMAN.

A passionate man is like a weak spring, that cannot stand long locked.
— WILLIAM PENN.

The passionate are like men standing on their heads; they see all things the wrong way. — PLATO.

Passionate as an April day. — WIL-LIAM ROWLEY.

Passive.

Passive as a monument. — ANON.

Passive as a tabby-cat. — IBID.

Passive—like dead bodies, with open, fixed eyes. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Past.

The Past is like a funeral gone by.
The Future comes like an unwelcome guest. — EDMUND GOSSE.

Pat.

Truths, as pat as paving stones in cities. — N. P. WILLIS.

Pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy. — SHAKESPEARE.

Pathetic.

Pathetic as an autumn leaf. — GEORGE MOORE.

Pathetic as the violets that bloom on a grave. — OSCAR WILDE.

Patience.

Patience under misfortunes is like opiates in a fever; tossing and tumbling only irritate the distemper. — ANON.

Patience is so like fortitude, that she seems either her sister or her daughter. — ARISTOTLE.

Grisilde-like in patience. — JOHN LYDGATE.

Patient.

Patient as rocks. — ANON.

A poor man without patience is like a lamp without oil. — ARABIAN PROVERB.

Patient, like a marble man. — E. B. BROWNING.

Patient as a stone. — CHARLES G. DUFFY.

Patient as a god. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Patient as death. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

As patient under injury as any Christian saint of old. — J. G. HOLLAND.

Patient as destiny. — ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Patient as an ant. — KEATS.

Patient as a hen-bird. — IBID.

Gazing patient at the sky;
Like some marble carven nun,
With folded hands when work is done,
Who mute upon her tomb doth pray,
Till resurrection day. — KINGSLEY.

Patient as sheep. — MACAULAY.

Patient as earth. — RAMAYANA.

Patient as a gentle stream. — SHAKESPEARE.

Patient as the female dove. — IBID.

As pacient and as still.

And as ful of good wil.

As fayre Isiphill. — SKELTON.

Patient as the hours. — SWINBURNE.

Patient as the lamb is she. — GEORGE WITHER.

Patiently.

Patiently as an old worn horse. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Patiently as the spider weaves the broken web. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Patterings.

Patterings like an April's rain. — O. W. HOLMES.

Pause.

A felicitous pause
A pause as of a thoughtful reasoner.
— BULWER-LYTTON.

Paused.

Paused, like some slow ship with sail unfurled waiting, in seas by scarce a wavelet curled. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Peace.

Like the rainbow,
Peace rests upon the earth, but its arch is lost in heaven.
— BULWER-LYTTON.

Peaceful.

Peaceful as sleep. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Peaceful as the advance of summer.
— M. D. CONWAY.

Peaceful as stars at twilight. — HUGO.

Peaceful as two pups in a basket. — ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

Peaceful — continued.

Peaceful as two six-shooters on the same belt. — IBID.

Peaceful . . . as a virgin lake. — LOWELL.

Peaceful as summer woods. — GEORGE MACDONALD.

Ran the sweet strain peacefully like a river in its flow. — ELLA M. MOORE.

Peaked.

Peaked as a pen. — ANON.

Peal.

Peals

Like the eternal thunders of the deep. — BYRON.

Pearls.

Pearls are like girls, they require quite as much attention. — BEACONSFIELD.

Pedantry.

Pedantry in learning is like hypocrisy in religion, — a form of knowledge without the power of it. — ADDISON.

Pedantry and taste are as inconsistent as gayety and melancholy. — J. C. LAVATER.

Peel.

Peel, like slippery elms in spring. — EUGENE FITCH WARE.

Peep.

Peep like Venus rising from her shell. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Countless eyes,

Peeping like stars through the blue ev'ning skies.

— THOMAS MOORE.

Peep, like moss-grown rocks, half-seen, Half hidden in the copse.

— SIR WALTER SCOT.

Peeps like a star o'er ocean's western edge. — SHELLEY.

Peeping like modest virgins from secluded bowers. — FANNY FORESTER.

Peeping and peering like an excited parrot. — KINGSLEY.

Peevish.

Peevish as a sick monkey. — JAMES PUCKLE.

Pellucid.

Pellucid as a pearl. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Pendant.

Pendant like berries on the branches. — MUNCHAUSEN.

Penetrating as fear. — ANON.

Penetrating as the east wind. — IBID.

Penetrates like a vapor. — HUGO.

Penetrated him like a gimlet. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Pensive.

Pensive as a sailor in a couch. — BALZAC.

Pensiv as a wel fed kitten. — JOSH BILLINGS.

People.

The people in mass are like metal in the ore; and, as all the iron that ever came from a Swedish mine would never hew a block or divide a plank until it was fashioned into the shape of a hatchet or a saw, so the strength of a people can never perhaps be made capable of producing much effect in war, till it is extracted partially and moulded into that factitious and highly polished instrument called an army. — SIR ARCHIBALD ALISON.

Impatient people, according to Bacon, are like the bees, and kill themselves in stinging others. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Peoples, like planets, possess the right to an eclipse. And all is well, provided that the light returns and that the eclipse does not degenerate into night. Dawn and resurrection are synonymous. — HUGO.

It is with narrow soul'd people as with narrow necked bottles, the less they have in them the more noise they make in pouring it out. — POPE.

Perceive.

If a fool be associated with a man all his life he will perceive the truth as little as a spoon perceives the taste of soup. — BUDDHA.

Perfect.

Perfect as an astronomical chart. — ANON.

Perfect as the dew-bead. — GEORGE ELIOT.

A poem round and perfect as a star. — ALEXANDER SMITH.

Perfect as a flame

That springs and spreads, till each glad limb became

A note of rapture in the tune of life. — SWINBURNE.

Perfection.

Complete in perfection as a great line in poetry, as the flight of a bird, as the curve of a falling wave. — RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

Perforate.

Perforated like a civil war battle flag. — ANON.

Perforate, like a honeycomb. — THOMAS WADE.

Perfumed.

Perfumed like a milliner. — SHAKESPEARE.

Perilous.

The crisis was perilous, but not without its charm : such as an Indian, perhaps, feels when he slips over the rapid in his canoe. — HUGO.

Perish.

Perish . . . like a microbe in hot water. — ANON.

Perish, through their over-confidence, like Icarus. — BACON.

Perish, as the quickening breath of God . . . is withdrawn. — BRYANT.

They perish as a robe outworn,
As faded leaves they float away.
— LORD DE TABLEY.

Perish like leaves. — EMERSON.

Perish as the summer fly. — H. A. JONES.

Perisheth, and is past by, like the Pearle in the Fable. — BEN JONSON.

Perished with him like a rocket which falls

And quenches its light in earth.

— EDGAR LEE MASTERS.

Perishing,
As though they were but things of dust and ashes. — MONTGOMERY.

Perished like the pageant of a dream. — T. L. PEACOCK.

Perished like some gift of earth. — SCHILLER.

Perish, as haze in sunrise on the red sea-line. — SWINBURNE.

Perish as the snow built up of sleep. — IBID.

Perish forever like his own dung. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Permanent.

Permanent as marble. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Perpendicular.

Perpendicular like poplars. —
BYRON.

Perplexing.

Perplexing as the question : "Do angels ever come back and pay their debts?" — ANON.

Persistence.

Persistence . . . like the obstinacy of a rancid odour clinging to the hair.
— HUGO.

Persistent.

Persistent as a mosquito. — ANON.

Persons.

Vain and frivolous persons, like empty vessels, are easily laid hold of and borne along by the ears. —
DEMOPHILUS.

Persuasive.

Persuasive as the tongue of seraphs.
— THOMAS BLACKLOCK.

Pert.

Pert as a school-girl well can be. —
W. S. GILBERT.

Peart as 'a circus pony. — JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS.

Pervade.

Pervading his frame like a raging fever. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Perverse.

Perverse as a camel, which can neither be stopped when he is going nor moved when he is resting. —
ANON.

Perverse as a hog. — SMOLLETT.

Phantasmagoric.

Phantasmagoric, like a mirage beyond the horizon. — RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

Philosophy.

As swallows give us intimation of fair weather, so the lessons of philosophy point out to us the way to attain tranquility of mind. — DE-MOPHILUS.

Physician.

One prompt physician, like a sculler
plies,
And all his art, and all his skill applies ;
But two physicians, like a pair of oars,
Convey you soonest to the Stygian shores. — ANON.

Physicians, like beer, are best when they are old ; and lawyers, like bread, when they are young and new. —
THOMAS FULLER.

Pick.

Picked out like a kernel from a nut.
— R. C. BATES.

Pick as clean as a bone. — SAMUEL WESLEY.

Picturesque.

Picturesque as the "frolic architecture of the snow." — ANON.

As picturesque,
As the figures we see in an arabesque.
— R. H. BARHAM.

Pierce.

Pierced like pard by hunters' steel.
— BYRON.

Pierce as the lightning flashes. —
ELIZA COOK.

Pierced like lightning. — THOMAS NASH.

He pierces like a lady's needle. —
OSMANLI PROVERB.

It shall as level to your judgment pierce
As day does to your eye.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Piercing.

Piercing as light. — ANON.

Piercing . . . as the air. — FRANCIS FAWKES.

Piercing as the mid-day sun. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Piercing — continued.

Piercing, like the morn, now it has darted

Its lustre on all hidden things.

—SHELLEY.

Piled.

Piled . . . like sacks of wheat in a granary. — LONGFELLOW.

Pinch.

Pinches like a trap that shuts. —
SWINBURNE.

Pine.

Pines she like to the hyacinth out on the path of the hill-top ; shepherds tread it aside, and its purples lie lost on the herbage. — SAPPHO.

Like an eagle caged I pine

On this dull unchanging shore.

—EPES SARGENT.

Pink.

Pink as the lip of the sea-shell. —
ANON.

Pink as the rose in Galatea's cheek.
—ALFRED AUSTIN.

Pink as the cheeks of sweet-and-twenty. — TEMPLE BAILEY.

Pink as a rose leaf is pink. — FRANK D. SHERMAN.

Pinned.

Pinned to the mire of the murky, the charnel river

Like fair fresh flowers on the filthy breast of a hag. — AGNES LEE.

Pious.

Pious as a broken-kneed post-horse.
—WILLIAM B. BERNARD.

Pious as a virgin enclosed. — MAU-RICE HEWLETT.

Pious as a Pope. — HOOD.

Pipe.

A pipe is like a Christian in many ways ; sure it's made o' clay like a Christian, and has the spark o' life in it, and while the breath is in it the spark is alive ; but when the breath is out of it, the spark dies, and then it grows cowl'd like a Christian ; and isn't it a pleasant companion like a Christian ? — LOVER.

Piquant.

Piquant as the waters of the Scheldt.
—GEORGES EEKHOU.

Pirouette.

Pirouetted like a bit of fantoccini. —
OUIDA.

Piteous.

Piteous as a spirit wailing in a world of tears. — GERALD MASSEY.

Pitiable.

Pitiable, like every ignorant man who wins a triumph. — HUGO.

Pitiful.

Pitiful as he that's hired for death
And loves the slaying yet better than the hire. — SWINBURNE.

Pitifully.

Pitifully as a poor girl of the pavement will pretend to be a clergyman's daughter. — G. B. SHAW.

Pitiless.

Pitiless as a Maxim gun. — ANON.

Pitiless as northern night. — J. W.
BARBER.

Pitiless as night. — AMBROSE BIERCE.

Pitiless as the grave. — GERALD
MASSEY.

Pitiless as driving sleet. — JOHN C.
NEIHARDT.

As pitiless to them as the Hyrcanian tiger to a lamb chop in the original wool. — NEW YORK SUN.

Pitiless as the strokes of an iron hammer. — OUIDA.

Pitiless as hail from heaven. — C.
C. FRASER-TYTLER.

Pity.

As much pity is to be taken of a woman weeping, as of a goose going barefoot. — ROBERT BURTON.

And pity, like a naked, new-born babe, Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubin, hors'd

Upon the sightless couriers of the air, Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,

That tears shall drown the wind.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Place.

Out of place as a faro layout in a Sunday school. — ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

Placeless.

Placeless, as spirits. — COLERIDGE.

Placid.

Placid as a duck pond. — ANON.

Placid as a mill-pond. — IBID.

Placid as a scarecrow in a field of scoundrels. — IBID.

Placid as a soft-shell crab in a plate of parsley. — IBID.

Placid as Socrates. — IBID.

Placid as Paradise. — EDWIN ARNOLD.

Placid as a hearthstone. — EUGENE FIELD.

Placid as a stone. — HUGO.

Placidly . . . as waiting to be sheeted home. — JEAN INGELow.

As plain as noon-day. — GEORGE H. BOKER.

She dresses as plain as the lily that modestly grows in the valley. — PATRICK BRONTË.

Plain as truth. — CHAPMAN.

Plain as a demonstration in Euclid. — GEORGE COLMAN, THE YOUNGER.

Her dress was as plain as an umbrella cover. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Plain as plainness. — JOHN DAVIES.

As plain to everybody as the sun. — DICKENS.

As plain as water's water. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Plain as a pikestaff. — SAMUEL FOOTE.

Plain as a dropped egg on a plate of hash. — SEWELL FORD.

Plain as the way to market. — FRANKLIN.

Plain as the sunlight. — FROUDE.

As plain as the moral law. — BRET HARTE.

Plain as the man with lantern. — HOOD.

Plain as whisper in the ear. — IBID.

Plain as the record on the prophet's scroll. — O. W. HOLMES.

As plain as a hole in a grindstone. — IBID.

As plain as the round shield of the sun blazing on high. — JAMES HUNCKER.

Plain as print. — LOVER.

Plaine . . . as the high way. — LYLX.

Plain — continued.

Plain as the sun in heaven. — MACAULAY.

Plain . . . as a rudimentary sum in arithmetic. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Plain as the light in the sun or as the man in the moon. — OTWAY.

Plain as a nose in a man's face. — RABELAIS.

Plain as the plain bald pate of Father Time himself. — SHAKESPEARE.

Plain as way to parish church. — IBID.

Plain and smooth like a Quaker's meeting. — JAMES SMITH.

Plain as the sun at noonday. — STERNE.

Plain as the glistening planets shine when winds have cleared the skies. — ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

Plain as a weed. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Plainly.

Plainly as heaven sees earth and earth sees heaven. — SHAKESPEARE.

Plainly as shoulder-straps mark a soldier. — ANON.

Plastic.

Plastic as potter's clay. — ANON.

Play.

A bad play is like a cabbage, — all leaves. — ANON.

A play is like a cigar, it requires judicious puffing. — IBID.

Most plays are like pills; if you swallow them whole they are sweet; but, if they are chewed, like a pill, you will, like the critic, find them bitter. — IBID.

A play is like a cigar; if it is a failure no amount of puffing will make it draw, but if it is a success, everybody wants a box. — HENRY J. BYRON.

Like hungry guests, a sitting audience looks :

Plays are like suppers; poets are the cooks.

The founder's you : the table is this place :

The carvers we : the prologue is the grace.

Each act a course; each scene, a different dish,

Though we're in Lent, I doubt you're still for flesh.

Satire's the sauce, high-seasoned, sharp, and rough.

Kind masks and beaux, I hope you're pepper-proof?

Wit is the wine; but 'tis so scarce the true

Poets, like vintners, balderdash and brew.

Your surly scenes, where rant and bloodshed join,

Are butcher's meat, a battle's a sirloin.

Your scenes of love, so flowing, soft and chaste,

Are water-gruel without salt or taste.

— FARQUHAR.

A play, like a bill, is of no value till it is accepted; nor indeed when it is, very often. — FIELDING.

A play is like a picture: the actors are the colors, and they must blend with one another if a perfect work is to be produced. — JOSEPH JEFFERSON.

Plays are exactly like Portraits Drawn in the Garb and Fashion of the time when Painted. You see one Habit in the time of King Charles I.; another quite different from that, both for Men and Woman, in Queen Elizabeth's time; another under Henry the Eighth different from both; and so backward all various. — JAMES WRIGHT'S "HISTORIA HISTRIONICA."

For plays, like women, by the world are thought,

When you speak kindly of 'em, very naught.

— WYCHERLEY.

Playful.

Playful as a frolic boy. — ANON.

Playful as a rabbit. — GEORGE P. MORRIS.

Playwright.

A wise playwright should act like the man who gives a magnificent feast : he should seek to delight the spectators, that each on departing may feel he has eaten and drunk just the things he would chiefly have chosen himself : not set but one dish for all palates, one writing for all sorts of tastes. — ASTYDAMUS, JUNIOR.

Plead.

Plead like angels, trumpet-tongued. — SHAKESPEARE.

Pleading like a frightened child. — ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

Pleasant.

Pleasant as youth with all its blossoms crown'd. — COWPER.

Pleasant as a wave. — LORD DE TABLEY.

Pleasant as health. — GERALD GRIF-FIN.

As pleasant about the house as a gleam of sunshine, falling on the floor through a shadow of twinkling leaves, or as a ray of firelight that dances on the wall, while evening is drawing nigh. — HAWTHORNE.

Pleasant as the shower which falls on the sunny field. — JAMES MACPHERSON.

Pleasant as the thunder of heaven, before the showers of spring. — IBID.

Pleasant as the gale of spring, that sighs on the hunter's ear. — OSSIAN.

Pleasant as budding tree. — C. G. ROSSETTI.

Pleasant as a scented mouth to kiss. — SWINBURNE.

Pleasant as roses in the thickets blown. — WORDSWORTH.

Pleased.

Pleased as Punch. — ANON.

Pleased, as infants are with sleep. — SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT.

Pleasure.

But pleasures are like poppies spread,
You seize the flower, its bloom is shed ;
Or like the snow falls in the river,
A moment white — then melts for ever ;
Or like the borealis race,
That flit ere you can point their place ;
Or like the rainbow's lovely form,
Evanishing amid the storm.

— BURNS.

Pleasure, like an over-fed lamp, is extinguished by the excess of its own aliment. — HANNAH MORE.

Pleasures like the flow'r,
Frail and fleeting ever ;
Now decks the bow'r,
Now 'tis gonè for ever.

— FREDERICK REYNOLDS.

Pleasures are like liqueurs : They must be drunk but in small glasses. — ROUMAINVILLE.

Plentiful.

Plentiful as bacteria in bad butter. — ANON.

Plentiful as sage brush in the desert. — IBID.

Plentiful as shingles on the shore. — IBID.

Plentiful as wells in the Old Testament. — IBID.

Plentiful as plebeians in Oxford Street. — SAMUEL WARREN.

Plentitude.

Spiritual sweets to plentitude,
As bees gorge full their cells.

— KEATS.

Plenty.

Plenty as the grass. — ANON.

As plenty as blackberries. — SHAKESPEARE.

Pliant.

Pliant as a glove. — BALZAC.

Pliant as a reed. — CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

Pliant as the torrent flows. — JOHN G. COOPER.

Pliant as a wand of willow. — LONG-FELLOW.

Pliable as wax. — JAMES SHIRLEY.

Pliant as the air. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Plod.

Plods on like a steed in a mill. — ELIZA COOK.

Pluck.

Plucked like a berry from a bush. — R. C. BATES.

Plumed.

Plumed like a hearse. — ANON.

Plumed like a storm-portending cloud. — P. J. BAILEY.

Plump.

Plump as an orange. — ANON.

Plump as plenty. — IBID.

Plump as a peach. — DICKENS.

Plump as ripe clusters. — RICHARD DUKE.

Plump as a pudding. — HAWTHORNE.

Plump as a cherry. — ROBERT HER-RICK.

Plump as a partridge. — LOVER.

Plump as a melon under a glass. —
GEORGE MEREDITH.

Plump as mastiffs. — PLAUTUS.

As plump as a miller's sparrow. —
SCOTTISH PROVERB.

Plump, like tiny skins of wine. —
JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

As plump as plump can be. — C. G.
ROSSETTI.

Plump as stall'd theology. — YOUNG.

Plunge.

Plunged like a mad horse. — ANON.

He was plunged in rushing water like a diver holding on to a stake planted in the bed of a swollen river. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Plunging like the sea. — J. G.
HOLLAND.

Pockets.

Pockets . . . looked like a pool table's after a fifteen-ball run. — O.
HENRY.

Poems.

Poems, like rivers, convey to their destination what must without their appliances be unhandled: these to ports and arsenals, this to the human heart. — W. S. LANDOR.

Poetry.

Poetry, good sir, in my opinion, is like a tender virgin, very young and extremely beautiful, whom divers other virgins — namely, all other sciences — make it their business to enrich, polish, and adorn. — CERVANTES.

There is as much difference between good poetry and fine verses, as between the smell of a flower garden, and a perfumer's shop. — JULIUS C. HARE.

Wisdom and poetry are like fruit for children, unwholesome if too fresh. —
W. S. LANDOR.

Poetry is to philosophy what the Sabbath is to the rest of the week. —
W. B. YEATS.

Poets.

Poets are like birds: the least thing makes them sing. — CHATEAUBRIAND.

For party poets are like wasps, who dart

Death to themselves, and to their foes
but smart. — GEORGE CRABBE.

Poets, like Lovers, should be bold and dare,

They spoil their business with an over-care. — DRYDEN.

Poets — continued.

Poets, like painters, their machinery claim,
And verse bestows the varnish and the frame. — O. W. HOLMES.

Poets, like candles, are all puffers,
And critics are the candle snuffers.
— ROBERT LLOYD.

Poets, like angels, where they once
appear,
Hallow the place. — JOHN NORRIS.

Fir'd at first sight with what the Muse imparts,

In fearless youth we tempt the height of arts,

While from the bounded level of our mind

Short views we take, nor see the lengths
behind;

But more advanc'd, behold, with strange surprise,

New distant scenes of endless science rise.

So pleas'd at first the tow'ring Alps we try,

Mount o'er the vales, and seem to tread the sky;

Th' eternal snows appear already past,
And the first clouds and mountains seem the last;

But these attain'd, we tremble to survey
The growing labours of the lengthen'd way:

Th' increasing prospect tires our wandering eyes;

Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise. — POPE.¹

Poignant.

Poignant and silent like the terrible questioning of one's conscience. —
JOSEPH CONRAD.

Point.

Points like death's lean lifted finger.
— ROBERT BROWNING.

¹ Dr. Johnson, in his "Lives of the Poets," says that this simile on poets is "perhaps the best the English language affords."

Pointed.

Pointed as a wasp's sting. — ANON.

Pointed as a poniard. — THOMAS NASH.

Poise.

Poise as of humming-birds hanging in air. — F. W. H. MYERS.

Poison.

Poisoned his life, as a rusted nail driven through an oak-tree in its prime corrodes and kills. — OUIDA.

Polished.

Polished as the bosom of a star. — T. B. ALDRICH.

Polite.

Perlite as a dancing master. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Polite as wax. — O. HENRY.

Politeness.

Politeness is like an air cushion;
there's nothing in it, but it eases the joints wonderfully. — W. C. GANNETT.

Political.

Political men, like goats, usually thrive best among equalities. — W. S. LANDOR.

Politicians.

Politicians, like the earth, are flattened at the polls. — ANON.

Pollute.

Polluted as a harlot. — ANON.

Pompous.

Pompous as an undertaker. —
THACKERAY.

Poor.

Poor as a cab-driver in Venice. —
ANON.

Poor as a rat. — IBID.

Poor as skunk's misery. — IBID.

As poor as winter. — IBID.

Poor as wood. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Poor — continued.

Poor as an owlet. — BUNYAN.

As poor as some church mouse. — LORD DE TABLEY.

Poorer than a retired Spanish ensign. — FORTSERRÉ.

Poor as Job's turkey. — MARSTON.

Poor as a sheep new shorn. — GEORGE PEELE.

Poor as virtue and as friendless. — IBID.

Poor as a pauper's pottage. — JOHN G. SAXE.

Poor as truth. — FRANCIS SEAGER.

Poor as Job. — SHAKESPEARE.

Poor as winter. — IBID.

Pop.

Popping about like a parched pea. — ANON.

Popular.

Popular as love. — LAMARTINE.

Popular as a film drama. — G. B. SHAW.

Populous.

Populous as a hive. — ANON.

Populous as an ant-hill. — HUGO.

Positions.

High positions are like the summit of high steep rocks. Eagles and reptiles alone can reach them. — MADAME NECKER.

Positive.

Positive as a Scotchman. — ANON.

Positive as the earth is firm. — SHAKESPEARE.

Posture.

Posturing, for all the world just like the man on the slack rope at our fair. — HANNAH MORE.

Posturing as proudly as a matador. — JULIAN STREET.

Potent.

Potent as Irish whiskey. — ANON.

Potent an evil as Shakespeare's French fiddle. — W. C. BRANN.

Pounce.

Pounced like a kite on a chick. — ANON.

Pounce like a vulture. — IBID.

Pounced . . . like lightning. — WILKIE COLLINS.

Pounced like a falcon. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Pout.

Pout like a disappointed child. — CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

Pouting.

With laughing eyes and dewy lips, pouting like the purple tip that points the rose's bud. — CATULLUS.

Pouting lip like the print upon a pound of butter. — SAMUEL FOOTE.

Poverty.

Poverty is like an upper story, since the poor take precedence of all. — PILPAY.

Power.

Power, like the diamond, dazzles the beholder, and also the wearer; it dignifies meanness; it magnifies littleness; to what is contemptible, it gives authority; to what is low, exaltation. — C. C. COLTON.

Power, like the hasty Vine, climbs up apace to the Supporter, but if not skilfully attended and dress'd, instead of spreading and bearing fruit, grows high and naked, and then, like empty title, being soon useless to others, becomes neglected and unable to support itself. — SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT.

Power, like a desolating pestilence, Pollutes whate'er it touches.

— SHELLEY.

Powerful.

Powerful as the tyranny of fashion.
— J. H. ST. J. DE CRÈVECŒUR.

Powerful as the sacerdotalism of Mediæval Europe. — FROUDE.

Powerful as death. — POPE.

Powerless.

Powerless as an infant. — ANON.

Powerless as grubs. — IBID.

Powerless as stubble exposed to the draught of a furnace. — CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

Powerless . . . as a stone. — E. B.
BROWNING.

Powerless as the wind
That passeth idly by. — SHELLEY.

Praise.

Praise, like gold and diamonds, owes its value only to its scarcity. — DR.
JOHNSON.

Praise to a young wit is like rain to a tender flower. — POPE.

Praise is like ambergris ; a little whiff of it, and by snatches, is very agreeable ; but when a man holds a great lump of it to his nose, it is a stink and strikes down. — SWIFT.

As the fining pot for silver, and the furnace for gold ; so is a man to his praise. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Prance.

Prance like uncurbed cavalry. —
ANON.

Pranced round it like a pair of cannibals about to eat a victim. — BAL-ZAC.

Prancing like a bean-fed horse. —
KIPLING.

Prate.

Prate like a parrot. — ANON.

Prating of the stars

Like an old soldier of his scars.

— P. J. BAILEY.

Prate like one i' the stocks. — SHAKE-SPEARE.

Prattle.

Prattled like a babbling brook. —
C. S. CALVERLEY.

Prattle like a magpie. — CON-
GREVE.

Prattlers, like swallows, destroy the pleasure of conversation by incessant loquacity. — DEMOPHILUS.

Prattles like a child at play.
— COVENTRY PATMORE.

Prayers.

God puts our prayers like rose-leaves between the leaves of his book of remembrance, and when the volume is opened at last, there shall be a precious fragrance springing from them.
— C. H. SPURGEON.

Preach.

A woman preacher is like a dog walking on his hind legs. It is not done well ; but you are surprised to find it done at all. — DR. JOHNSON.

Precept.

Precepts are like seeds ; they are little things which do much good. — SENECA.

Precious.

Precious as the Sibyl's leaves. —
ANON.

Precious as enterprise. — HAFIZ.

Precious as a Grecian vase. —
RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

Precious,
As are the conceal'd comforts of a man,
Lock'd in a woman's love.

— THOMAS LODGE.

More precious
Than the rich-jewell'd coffer of Darius.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Precious as is friend. — "WIT RE-STORED."

Precious — continued.

More precious far
Than that accumulated store of gold And orient gems, which, for a day of need,
The Sultan hides deep in ancestral tombs. — WORDSWORTH.

Prejudice.

Prejudice, like the spider, makes everywhere its home, and lives where there seems nothing to live on. —
THOMAS PAINE.

Prepared.

Prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. — NEW TESTAMENT.

Preposterous.

Preposterous . . . as natural color upon a fashionable cheek. — JOHN BROUGHAM.

Preserved.

She was well preserved by a tranquil existence, like winter fruit in a closed cupboard. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Press.

Pressed it to his heart as holy sinners press the scapular. — E. W. HORNUNG.

Pressed in my heart, like flowers within a book. — LONGFELLOW.

Pressed her like corn that has been crushed in the mill. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Press one as men press a sponge. —
"REPUBLICA: A MERYE ENTERLUDE."

Presumptuous.

Presumptuous as Haman the halt.
— JOHN HEYWOOD.

Pretty.

Pretty as a Pingree potato patch. —
ANON.

Pretty as a red wagon. — IBID.

Pretty as a September peach. — IBID.

Pretty as a picture. — IBID.

She was as pretty as the spring time.
— BALZAC.

Pretty as a peach
Such as school boys always long for when they're hangin' out of reach.
— PHOEBE CARY.

A little girl, pretty as an angel. —
HENDRIK CONSCIENCE.

Pretty as a seraph. — GAUTIER.

Pretty as a rosebud debutante. —
AMY LESLIE.

Pretty as a diamond flush. —
ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

Pretty as Paint. — NORTHALL'S
"FOLK PHRASES."

Pretty, like a toy cowboy with a chamois shirt and a nine-dollar sombrero. — EDGAR W. NYE.

Prey.

Prey . . . like a fox in midst of harvest-time. — MARLOWE.

Prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Prick.

Pricks like thorn. — SHAKESPEARE.

Pride.

'Tis as natural for women to pride themselves in fine clothes as 'tis for a peacock to spread his tail. — ANON.

Pride is like the beautiful acacia, that lifts its head proudly above its neighbor plants — forgetting that it too, like them, has its roots in the dirt.
— C. N. BOVÉE.

Pride, like the magnet, constantly points to one object, — self, — self ;
but, unlike the magnet, it has no attractive pole, but at all points repels. — C. C. COLTON.

Pride, like ambition, is sometimes virtuous and sometimes vicious, according to the character in which it is found, and the object to which it is directed. — FULKE GREVILLE.

Pride — continued.

Pride is like vapour which ascendeth high, and presently vanishes away.—PLUTARCH.

Pride, like laudanum and other poisonous medicines, is beneficial in small, though injurious in large quantities. No man who is not pleased with himself, even in a personal sense, can please others.—FREDERICK SAUNDERS.

Earthly pride is like the passing flower, that springs to fall, and blossoms to die.—H. K. WHITE.

Pride, like anger, builds among the stars; but pleasure, lark like, nests upon the ground.—YOUNG.

Prim.

Prim as a Quaker.—G. P. MORRIS.

Prime.

Prime as a fiddle.—ANON.

Prime as goats.—SHAKESPEARE.

Primitive.

Primitive . . . like the praam and the canoe.—HUGO.

Prince.

Princes are like to heavenly bodies, which cause good or evil times; and which have much veneration, but no rest.—BACON.

Princes, like beauties, from their youth Are strangers to the voice of Truth.

—JOHN GAY.

The name of a Prince is like the sweete deaw, which falleth as well vpon lowe shrubbes, as hygh trees, and resembleth a true glasse, where-in the poore maye see theyr faces with the rych, or a cleare streame where-in all maye drinke that are drye: not they onelye that are wealthy.—LYLY.

Principle.

A good principle was never found solitary in any breast.—JANE PORTER.

Principles, like troops of the line, are undisturbed, and stand fast.—RITCHTER.

Print.

He that commeth in print because he woulde be knowen, is like the foole that commeth into the Market because he would be seene.—LYLY.

Privacy.

No more privacy than a goldfish.—IRVIN S. COBB.

Private.

Love should be as private a sentiment as a toothbrush.—O. HENRY.

Privilege.

Kings will lose their privilege, as stars which have completed their time lose their splendor.—DUMAS, PÈRE.

Prize.

Prized as a stray gift.—THOMAS N. TALFOURD.

Probe.

Probing with a cautious touch, like a treasure-seeker in a dark cavern.—HAWTHORNE.

Prodigal.

Prodigal as winter rain.—FRANCIS LEDWIDGE.

Prodigious.

As prodigious, as that of the Sun's swift motion of Heavens.—ROBERT BURTON.

Prodigious as the pyramid of Cheops.—EUGENE FIELD.

Productive.

Vigorously productive, as those fabulous dragon's teeth.—MILTON.

Productive as the Sun.—POPE.

Profession.

In the long run it is with a profession as with marriage—we come to feel only the annoyances.—BALZAC.

Profitless.

Cease thy counsel,
Which falls into mine ears as profitless
As water in a sieve.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Profound.

Profound as an allegory. — ANON.

Profound as an Arctic night. — IBID.

Profound as a genuflection. — IBID.

Profound as that Serbonian bog. —
MILTON.

Profuse.

As profusely as a raspberry is furnished with seeds. — ANON.

Progress.

A common progress; like vessels on a common tide. — DANIEL WEBSTER.

Progressive.

Progressive as time. — ANON.

Progressive as a stream. — COWPER.

Prologue.

Prologues, like compliments, are loss of time;

'Tis penning bows and making legs in rhyme. — DAVID GARRICK.

Prologues are like a forlorn hope, sent out

Before the play, to skirmish and to scout. — P. A. MOTTEUX.

Prominent.

Prominent as a ten-cent lemon on a fruitstand. — ANON.

Promise.

Promises are like pie-crust, made to be broken. — ANON.

Promises are like Adonis' gardens,
That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next. — SHAKESPEARE.

A large promise without performance is like a false fire to a great piece, which dischargeth a good expectation with a bad report. — ARTHUR WARWICK.

Prompt.

Prompt as powder to the linstock.
— C. G. DUFFY.

Property.

Property is like snow; if it falleth level to-day, it will be blown into drifts to-morrow. — CATHERINE SINCLAIR.

Prophetic.

Prophetic as the palm of Parsifal's hand. — AMY LESLIE.

Proportion.

Proportioned like the columns of the temple. — BYRON.

Prosper.

Prosper as gardener's crops do in the rottenest ground. — MIDDLETON.

Prosperity.

Prosperity destroyeth the fool; it is like poison, like ratsbane. — THOMAS HOOKER.

Prosperous.

Prosperous as the angels are. — E. B. BROWNING.

Protruding.

Protruding, like the clue to a Lilliputian murder mystery. — O. HENRY.

Proud.

Proud as a cock. — ANON.

Proud as any prince. — IBID.

Proud as a Government mule. —
IBID.

Proud as a king. — IBID.

Proud as Lucifer. — IBID.

Proud as a popinjay. — IBID.

Proud as a Spanish Grandee. —
IBID.

Proud as a tiger-lily. — IBID.

Proud as Juno. — IBID.

Proud as Punch. — IBID.

Proud as Sheba's queen. — IBID.

Proud — continued.

Proud as the man who got rich manufacturing soldiers' shoes out of pasteboard instead of leather. — IBID.

Proud as any queen. — GEORGE BARLOW.

Proud as a mulatto in a negro congregation. — J. R. BARTLETT'S "DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS."

Proud as the Pope behind the peacock-fans. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Proud as a freeborn peasant. — BYRON.

Proud as a peacock. — CHAUCER.

Proud as Gascon. — DUMAS, PÈRE.

Proud as all the Guzmans put together. — ANTHONY HAMILTON.

Proud as a peer. — BRET HARTE.

Proud as a young bull. — RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

Proud as a hen with one chicken. — B. LOWSLEY.

Proud as the day is long. — LYLY.

Proud as a lion when passion-stirred. — EDWIN MARKHAM.

Proud as waves that on the beach Lay their war-crests down and die.
— THOMAS MOORE.

Proud as an emperor. — MISS MULLOCK.

Proud as a lord's bastard. — ENGLISH PROVERB.

As proud as a Highlander. — SCOTTISH PROVERB.

Proud as an empress on her marriage-day. — CHARLES SANGSTER.

Proud as a boy with a brand-new top. — JOHN G. SAXE.

Proud as an enjoyer. — SHAKESPEARE.

Proud as a child who will what he would. — ARTHUR SYMONS.

Proud as the Bourbons. — THACKERAY.

Proudly.

Proudly, like a bold swimmer. — HUGO.

Flows . . . as proudly as Tiber by Rome. — EDWARD LOVIBOND.

Proved.

Proved like steel in tempering fire. — BYRON.

Proverb.

Ginowine proverbs ar like good kambrick needles — short, sharp, and shiny. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Proverbs are like arrows ; they fly not only fast but straight. — IBID.

Proverbs, like the sacred books of each nation, are the sanctuary of the Institutions. — EMERSON.

Provocative.

Provocative of tears as an onion. — HAWTHORNE.

Prowl.

Prowl, like stealthy cats. — FREDERICK S. COZZENS.

Public.

The public, like the delicate Greek Narcissus, is sleepily enamoured of itself ; and the name of its only other perfect lover is Echo. — SIR WALTER RALEIGH (1861-).

Puff (Noun).

Puff like a paragraph praising a pill. — O. W. HOLMES.

Puff (Verb).

Puffed himself up like a ship in full sail. — HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN.

Puffing out like canvas in a gale. — ANON.

Puffing like the bellows of a blacksmith. — IBID.

Puffed like a leaky steam pipe. — O. HENRY.

Puffy.

Puffy as a cheesecake. — SIR A. CONAN DOYLE.

Puffy as a bolster. — THACKERAY.

Pull.

Pulled and hauled like a rag baby being contended for by a litter of bull pups. — ANON.

Pun.

People that make puns are like wanton boys that put coppers on the railroad tracks. They amuse themselves and other children but their little trick may upset a freight train of conversation for the sake of a battered witticism. — O. W. HOLMES.

A pun is somewhat like a cherry: though there may be a slight outward indication of partition — of a duplicity of meaning — yet no gentleman need make two bites at it against his own pleasure. — THOMAS HOOD.

A pun is like a stumbling-block, that a man cannot always avoid without hitting his shins against it, but the sooner he clears himself from it the better. — JAMES QUIN.

Pun . . . where a word, like the tongue of a jackdaw, speaks twice as much by being split. — SWIFT.

Punctual.

Punctual as a bride at a wedding. — BALZAC.

Punctual as Springtide. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Punctual — like morning. — JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Punctual as lovers to the moment sworn. — YOUNG.

face with an apparition. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Like an over-charged gun, recoil. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Recoils, and climbs and closes,
As a wave of the sea turned back.
— SWINBURNE.

Recreation.

Recreation is intended to the mind, as whetting is to the scythe; to sharpen the edge of it, which otherwise would grow dull and blunt. He, therefore, that spends his whole time in recreation, is ever whetting, never mowing: his grass may grow, and his steed starve. As, contrarily, he, that always toils and never recreates, is ever mowing, never whetting; labouring much to little purpose: as good no scythe, as no edge. Then only doth the work go forward, when the scythe is so seasonably and moderately whetted, that it may cut; and so cuts, that it may have the help of sharpening. I would also so interchange, that I neither be dull with work, nor idle and wanton with recreation. — JOSEPH HALL.

Red.

Red as any rose in June. — C. F.
ALEXANDER.

Red, like a cardinal. — LEONID

Nature revives, like a dim winking lamp,
That flashes brightly with parting
light,
And straight is dark forever.

— NICHOLAS ROWE.

Sad death, revived with her sweet inspection,

And feeble spirit inly felt reflection ;
As withered weed through cruell winter's tine,

That feels the warmth of sunny beams reflection,

Lifts up his head that did before decline,

And gins to spread his leaf before the faire sunshine. — SPENSER.

still small reach. — IBID.

Soft as the loosening of wound arms in sleep. — IBID.

Soft

As thoughts of beauty sleeping.
— ARTHUR SYMONS.

Soft, as Heaven's angelic messenger might touch the lips of prayer, and make them blest. — BAYARD TAYLOR.

Soft as lonely maiden's thoughts on him she loves. — ESAIAS TEGNER.

There is sweet music here that softer falls
Than petals from blown roses on the grass.
— TENNYSON.

Softer than oil. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Soft as satin. — THACKERAY.

Soft as a sleeping cat. — THEOC-RITUS.

Soft as the nightingale's harmonious woe,

In dewy even-tide, when cowslips drop Their sleepy heads, and languish in the breeze.

— WILLIAM THOMPSON.

Soft as the blowbell. — THOMAS TICKELL.

Soft, like summer night. — MARK TWAIN.

Soft as a peacock steps. — FAZIO
DEGLI UBERTI.

Softly among the pines as a young witch gathering simples. — RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

Softly as full-blown flower Unfolds its heart to welcome in the dawn. — HENRY VAN DYKE.

Softly . . . like low aërial music when some angel hovers near. — LADY WILDE.

Softness.

A softness like the atmosphere of dreams. — MRS. NORTON.

Soil.

Soil'd, like the soil'd tissue of white violets left, freshly gather'd, on their native bank, by children whom their nurses call with haste indoors from the sun's eye. — MATTHEW ARNOLD.

Soilless.

Soilless as pearls. — OUIDA.

Soldier.

Though a soldier in time of peace is like a chimney in summer, yet what wise man would pluck down his chimney because his almanac told him it was the middle of June. — TOM BROWN.

A good soldier, like a good horse, cannot be of a bad color. — O. W.
HOLMES.

Soldiers are like cloaks, — one thinks of us only when it rains. — MARSHAL SAXE.

Solemn.

Solemn as a judge. — ANON.

Solitude, like some unsounded bell. — MARY A. TOWNSEND.

Sombre.

Sombre as sorrow. — ANON.

Sombre as the night. — DANTE.

Sombre as Othello. — IGNATIUS DONNELLY.

Sombre like a cathedral. — HUGO.

Song.

Songs are like painted window-panes !
In darkness wrapped the church remains,

If from the market-place we view it ;
But let us now inside repair,
And greet the holy chapel there !

At once the whole seems clear and bright,

Each ornament is bathed in light,
And fraught with meaning to the sight.

— GOETHE.

Sonorous.

Sonorous as a fountain's notes. — ANON.

Sonorous as the inside of a violin. — OCTAVE MIRBEAU.

Soothe.

Soothes the ear like the echo of distant music. — EDMONDO DE AMICIS.

Soothed like the music of a tom-tom. — O. HENRY.

Soothes like a caress of angels. — DONALD G. MITCHELL.

Soothing.

Soothing as the gospel. — ANON.

Soothing as the breath of spring. — F. W. FABER.

More soothing than the pretty hummer
That stays one moment in an open flower

And buzzes cheerily from bower to bower. — KEATS.

Soothing as the wash of the sea. — KIPLING.

Soothing as the gale of eve. — H. H. MILMAN.

Soothingly.

Soothingly as childhood pressed to bosom. — WHITTIER.

Sophistry.

Sophistry is like a window curtain — it pleases as an ornament, but its true use is to keep out the light. — ANON.

As creeping ivy clings to wood or stone,
And hides the ruin that it feeds upon,
So sophistry cleaves close to and protects

Sin's rotten trunk, concealing its defects. — COWPER.

Sophistry, like poison, is at once detected and nauseated when presented to us in a concentrated form ; but a falsity which, when stated barely in a few sentences, would not deceive a child, may deceive half the world if diluted in a quarto volume. — WHATELY.

Sore.

Sore as a mashed thumb. — IRVIN S. COBB.

Sorrow.

Youth's sorrows, like April showers, are transitory. — ANON.

Sorrow — continued.

Sorrow for a husband is like pain in the elbow, sharp and short. — IBID.

Sorrowful as death. — OUIDA.

Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,
Doth burn the heart to cinders.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes ;

Then little strength rings out the doleful knell. — IBID.

Sorrow, like cloud that flies,
Like a cloud in clearing skies,
Passed away. — SWINBURNE.

Soubrette.

A soubrette is like a bottle of vinegar, — mother is always there. — EDITH M. HUDNALL.

Soul.

The humble soul is like the violet, which grows low, hangs the head downward, and hides itself with its own leaves. — FREDERIKA BREMER.

Souls fly forth, like sparks of light
From clear white fires by whirlwinds fanned. — WILLIAM J. DAWSON.

My soul is like those sieves in which gold-washers of Mexico gather bits of the pure metal in the torrents of the Cordilleras. The sand falls through them, the gold remains. — LAMARTINE.

My soul is like the oar that momentarily Dies in a desperate stress beneath the wave,
Then glitters out again and sweeps the
sea :

Each second I'm new-born from some new grave. — SIDNEY LANIER.

As the waifs cast up by the sea change with the changing season, so the tides of the soul throw up their changing drift on the sand, but the sea beyond is one for ever. — D. G. ROSSETTI.

An evil soul, producing holy witness,
Is like a villain with a smiling cheek ;
A good apple rotten at the heart.
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Body and Soul like peevish man and wife, united jar, and yet are loath to part. — EDWARD YOUNG.

Soulless.

Soulless as the fragments of a broken statue. — ANON.

Soulless as is the brute. — LEWIS MORRIS.

Parliamentary speaking, like playing on the fiddle, requires practice. — BEACONSFIELD.

Speak as if he would jump down your throat. — JOHN SKELTON.

Spake
As who bids dead men wake.
— SWINBURNE.

Speak like a capon that had the cough. — NICHOLAS UDALL.

Speck.

Many a speck,
Like the water-snake's belly and the toad's back.
— SHELLEY.

Speckled.

Speckled like a toad. — SHELLEY.

Speech.

Long and curious speeches are as fit for dispatch as a robe, or mantle, with a long train, is for a race. — BACON.

Considered as the last finish of education, or of human culture, worth and acquirement, the art of speech is noble, and even divine; it is like the kindling of a Heaven's light to show us what a glorious world exists, and has perfected itself, in a man. — CARLYLE.

Speech — continued.

As a vessel is known by the sound, whether it be cracked or not, so men are proved by their speeches whether they be wise or foolish. — DEMOSTHENES.

Her artless speech, like chrystal, shows the thing it would hide, but only covers. — J. S. KNOWLES.

Solon used to say that speech was the image of actions; . . . that laws were like cobwebs, — for that if any trifling or powerless thing fell into them, they held it fast; while if it were something weightier, it broke through them and was off. — DIOGENES LAERTIUS.

A printed speech is like a dried flower: the substance, indeed, is there, but the color is faded and the perfume gone. — PROSPER LORAIN.

Speech is like the cloth of Arras, opened and put abroad, whereby the imagery doth appear in figure, while in thoughts they lie but in packs. — PLUTARCH.

His speech was like a tangled chain; nothing impaired, but all disordered. — SHAKESPEARE.

Swift with speech like fire in fiery lands

To melt the steel's edge in the headsmen's hands. — SWINBURNE.

Speech was like to tapestry; and like it, when it was spread it showed its figures, but when it was folded up, hid and spoiled them. — THEMISTOCLES.

Speechless.

Speechless as a stone. — E. B. BROWNING.

Speechless as a mummy. — HOOD.

Like some sad statue, speechless. — POPE.

Straight as a wall. — IVAN VAZOV.

Straight as a Sioux chief. — BOOKER
T. WASHINGTON.

Straighten.

Straightened himself up like a liberty-pole. — MARK TWAIN.

Straightforward.

As straightforward as a tile falling on your head. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Strain.

A faint strain,
As if some echo, that among
Those minstrel halls had slumber'd long,
Were murmur'ing into life again.

— THOMAS MOORE.

One great strain of joy as the sea breaking. — SWINBURNE.

Strange.

As strange as a wedding without a bridegroom. — ANON.

Strange

As Hindostanee to an Ind-born man Accustomed many years to English speech. — E. B. BROWNING.

Strange as death. — IBID.

Strange to me as dreams of distant spheres. — IBID.

Strange as the stars. — G. K. CHES-TERTON.

Strange as a vision. — AGNES M. F.
DARMESTETER.

Strange as a dream. — LEWIS MOR-RIS.

Strange as a dreamer's mad imag-ings. — SHELLEY.

I feel as new and strange as a free spirit which had shaken off the wrappings of this life. — ALEXANDER SMITH.

Strange as the curlew's song. — R.
H. STODDARD.

Strange . . . like a fine lady swapping her moles for the mange. —
SWIFT.

Strange as are night and morning,
stars and sun. — SWINBURNE.

Strange as chance or doom. — IBID.

Strange as hope's green blossom touched with time's harsh rust. —
IBID.

Strange as life. — IBID.

Strange as light

That cleaves in twain the shadow of night

Before the wide-winged world takes flight

That thunder speaks to depth and height

And quells the quiet hour with sound.
— IBID.

Strange as sleep. — IBID.

Strange as heaven. — IBID.

Strange as fate. — IBID.

Strange as the sea. — IBID.

Strange as a wild flower. — THOREAU.

Strangely.

Strangely there, as would a bower of roses in Siberia. — MRS. TROLLOPE.

Stream.

Streaming like feathers of a shuttlecock. — AMBROSE BIERCE.

Stream — continued.

Branches stream like the dishevelled hair

Of women in the sadness of despair.

— WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Streamed o'er his memory like a forest's flame. — O. W. HOLMES.

Streaming like a flag of battle. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Streamed like curtain-rents
Fluttered by a wind. — IBID.

Her locks streamed like the torch
Borne by a racer at full speed,
Or like the mane of horses in their flight

Or like an angel when she stems the light

Straight towards the sun,
Or like a caged thing freed,
Or like a flying flag when armies run.

— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Stream' like a comet's flashing hair
— SHELLEY.

Stream, like a sunset. — FREDERICK TENNYSON.

Strengthening.

As strengthening to the mind as drinking sweetened wind out of a toy balloon. — W. C. BRANN.

Strengthless.

Strengthless as a noon-belated moon,
Or as the glazing eyes of watery
heaven,
When the sick night sinks into deadly swoon. — FRANCIS THOMPSON.

Strenuously.

Strenuously as ever Cavalier strove for the White Rose. — OUIDA.

Stretch.

Stretch away, like the perspective of a dream. — PAUL BOURGET.

Stretch . . . like a bow-string by the forceful arm of some bold archer strained. — LUCIAN.

Stretched as far as doth the mind of man. — MARLOWE.

Stretching out his hand like the wings of a bird. — RABELAIS.

Laura stretched her gleaming neck
Like a rush-imbedded swan,
Like a lily from the beck,
Like a moonlit poplar branch,
Like a vessel at the launch
When its last restraint is gone.

— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Stretched along, like a wounded
knight. — SHAKESPEARE.

Stretch like imploring arms. —
BAYARD TAYLOR.

SON.

Stupid as the swine. — HANS SACHS.

Stupid as a hog. — TOLSTOY.

Sturdy.

Sturdy as a wild ass colt. — COW-PER.

Style.

Our style should be like a skeine of silke, to be carried and found by the right thred, not ravel'd and perplex'd ; then all is a knot, a heape. — BEN JONSON.

Gibbon's style is too uniform ; he writes in the same flowing and pompous style on every subject. He is like Christie, the auctioneer, who says as much of a ribbon as of a Raphael. — RICHARD PORSON.

Subdued.

Subdued . . . like some strong stream made placid in the fullness of the lake. — ANON.

thorn must blossom in spring and the corn burn to gold at harvest time, and the moon in her ordered wanderings change from shield to sickle, and from sickle to shield. — OSCAR WILDE.

Surge.

Surge, like hope upon a deathbed.
— BYRON.

Surging as a sea. — TUPPER.

Surly.

Surly as a butcher's dog. — ANON.

Surpass.

Surpasses, as a teal does a gander ;
as a coach does a wheelbarrow, or a game-cock a sparrow. — ANON.

Suspense.

Suspense . . . like the irresolution of the sea at turn of tide. — P. J.
BAILEY.

Suspicion.

Suspicious amongst thoughts are like bats amongst birds, they ever fly by twilight. — BACON.

Suspicion, like the fabled upas, blights
All healthy life.

Swarming after, as a tail follows a comet. — IBID.

As wasps, provok'd by children in their play,

Pour from their mansions by the broad high-way,

In swarms the guiltless traveller engage,

Whet all their stings, and call forth all their rage :

All rise in arms, and with a gen'ral cry Assert their waxen domes, and buzzing progeny.

Thus from the tents the fervent legion
swarms,

So loud their clamours, and so keen their arms. — HOMER (POPE).

Place swarmed like a fair. — SCHIL-LER.

HARRY LEON WILSON.

Swift as a Thracian Nymph o'er field and height. — WORDSWORTH.

Swift as darted flame. — YOUNG.

Swiftly.

As swiftly as a reach of still water is crisped by the wind. — ANON.

Swiftly like a cloud scud on a breezy day. — SIR A. CONAN DOYLE.

Swiftly as the explosion of a rifle cartridge follows the falling of the hammer. — ROBERT EDGREN.

Swiftly as smiles are caught in looks that meet. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Swiftly as the dolphins glide. — HOOD.

Swiftly as a bright Phœbean dart.
— KEATS.

Swiftly, like birds that skim the air. — MAHABHARATA.

Swim.

Swim like a cork. — INCREASE MATHER.

Swims, like an eagle, in the eye of noon. — JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Swim like a duck. — SHAKESPEARE.

Swim like beams through floating clouds. — SHELLEY.

Swimmingly.

Go on as swimmingly as old Noah's Ark. — HOOD.

Swing.

Like rudder to the ripple veering,
When nobody on board is steering.
— HOOD.

Swinging like a reed in the air. —
HOOD.

Swing like the compass in its brazen ring. — LONGFELLOW.

Swish.

Swished his tail,
As a gentleman swishes a cane.
— SOUTHEY.

Swollen.

Swollen as the cheeks of jubilant cherubim. — O. W. HOLMES.

Swollen immensely, like that of a man who has been drowned and lain under water for many weeks. — POE.

Swollen like a bladder. — R. B.
SHERIDAN.

Swoon.

Sickly swoon, like lillies 'mid the blaze of noon. — SARA COLERIDGE.

Swoon like spring's daffodillies.

— ITALIAN LOVE SONG.

Swoon

Into the silence languidly

As a tune into a tune.

— D. G. ROSSETTI.

Made my blood burn and swoon
Like a flame rained upon.

— SWINBURNE.

Swoop.

Swooped down upon the kitchen, even as a vulture swoopeth upon carrion. — BOCCACCIO.

Swooped into the fray like a sea-eagle into a school of mackerel in a shallow. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

Sympathetic.

A sympathetic heart is like a spring of pure water bursting forth from the mountain side. — ANON.

Sympathetic as sentiment. — LA-MARTINE.

Sympathetic as chameleons. — AMY
LESLIE.

Symphony.

Delicious symphonies, like airy flowers,
Budded and swell'd, and, full-blown,
shed full showers
Of light, soft, unseen leaves of sounds divine. — KEATS.

Systematic.

Systematic as a country cemetery.
— LOWELL.

T

Talent.

A man of great talents, but void of discretion, is like Polyphemus in the fable, strong and blind, endowed with an irresistible force, which for want of sight is of no use to him. — ADDISON.

Talent, like gout, sometimes skips two generations. — BALZAC.

Men of talents are variable as thermometers : genius alone is essentially good. — IBID.

Talent, like beauty, to be pardoned, must be obscure and unostentatious. — LADY BLESSINGTON.

Talk.

(See also CONVERSATION.)

Fish are talkative in comparison. — ANON.

Talkative as a magpie. — IBID.

Like a bagpipe, he never talks till his belly's full. — IBID.

All talking and no listening, after the manner of a Woman's Rights Convention. — J. R. BARTLETT'S "DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS."

Talk like poor Poll [Goldsmith]. — DAVID GARRICK.

Talking is like playing on the harp ; there is as much in laying the hand on the strings to stop a vibration as in twanging them to bring out their music. — O. W. HOLMES.

Writing or printing is like shooting with a rifle ; you may hit your reader's mind or miss it ; — but talking is like playing at a mark with the pipe of an engine ; if it is within reach, and you have time enough, you can't help hitting it. — IBID.

There are men of esprit who are excessively exhausting to some people. They are the talkers that have what may be called jerky minds. Their thoughts do not run in the natural order of sequence. They say bright things on all possible subjects, but their zigzags rack you to death. After a jolting half-hour with one of these jerky companions, talking with a dull friend affords great relief. It is like taking the cat in your lap after holding a squirrel. — IBID.

Talk without truth is hollow brass ; talk without love is like the tinkling cymbal, and when it does not tinkle it jingles, and when it does not jingle, it jars. — MRS. JAMESON.

He talks as a piano-organ grinds out music — steadily, strenuously, tirelessly. — J. K. JEROME.

Talking away like a mill-clapper. — SARAH ORNE JEWETT.

Talks like music set on fire. — RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

His talk is like a stream which runs
With rapid change from rocks to roses ;
It slipped from politics to puns ;
It passed from Mahomet to Moses ;
Beginning with the laws that keep
The planets in their radiant courses,
And ending with some precept deep
For dressing eels or shoeing horses.
— PRAED.

Great talkers are like broken pitchers, everything runs out of them. — PERSIAN PROVERBS.

Talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. — SHAKESPEARE.

A talkative person is like an English sparrow, — a bird that cannot sing, and will, and ought to be persuaded not to try to sing. — HENRY VAN DYKE.

Tall.

Tall and slender like an ode in quinary verses. — EDMONDO DE AMICIS.

Tall as a steeple. — ANON.

Tall as a May-pole. — SWIFT.

Tall — continued.

Tall as a figure lengthened on the sand. — TENNYSON.

Tall as a grenadier. — THACKERAY.

Tame as a kitchen cat on a house-boat. — ANON.

Tame as tepid milk. — ARLO BATES.

Tame and humble, like a child that's whipp'd. — ROBERT BLAIR.

She lies in my hand as tame
As a pear late basking over a wall.

— ROBERT BROWNING.

Tame, as an lilye whyt. — CHAUCER.

Tame as a sheep. — THOMAS FROST.

Tame as a cat. — WILLIAM KING.

Tamer than sleep. — SHAKESPEARE.

Tangle.

Tangled in the Past, like a bird in a snare. — HUGO.

Tantalize.

The rattling of dice is as tantalizing to a penniless man as the sound of drums to a dethroned monarch. — SANSKRIT.

Tap.

Tapping like woodpeckers. — HOOD.

Taps light
As the hand of my heart's delight.
— SWINBURNE.

Taper.

Tapering, like an icicle. — ANON.

Tapering like a lizard's tail. — O. W.
HOLMES.

Tarry.

Tarries . . . like quicksilver in a mould of lapis lazuli. — PILPAY.

Tart.

Tart and crisp . . . as the autumn butter that creams the sumac berry.
— MARK TWAIN.

Taste (Noun).

As bad taste as a wig from the barber's on the head of a marble statue of Apollo. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Left a taste in his mouth like a tintype factory. — IRVIN S. COBB.

A fastidious taste is like a squeamish appetite; the one has its origin in some disease of the mind, as the other has in some ailment of the stomach. — SOUTHEY.

Taste (Verb).

Mouth tasted as if a Chinese family had just moved out. — ANON.

My mouth tastes like a rusty cent.
— "KNICKERBOCKER MAGAZINE."

Taunts.

Taunts, like Vulcan out of heaven.
— WORDSWORTH.

Taut.

Taut as a fiddle string. — ANON.

Taut as a forestay in a gale. —
ALBERT EDWARDS.

Teacher.

The teacher is like the candle, it lights others in consuming itself. — HOSEA BALLOU.

Tear.

Tears of joy, like summer raindrops, are pierced by sunbeams. — HOSEA BALLOU.

Pearly tears, like rose's dew, wept
she. — EMANUEL VON GEIBEL.

Sheds ceaseless tears, like dew on Hermion's hill. — JUDAH HA LEVI.

Tearful and trembling as a dewy rose
The wind has shaken till it fills the air
With light and fragrance.

— O. W. HOLMES.

Tears like pears. — HUGO.

Tears herald smiles, as weeping
April does this sunny May. — JAMES M. MORTON.

Tear — continued.

From his eyes a stream of tears descended like a broken necklace of pearls. — ORIENTAL.

Shining through tears, like April-suns in showers, that labor to o'ercome the cloud that loads them. — OTWAY.

Tears as big as ostrich's eggs. —
RABELAIS.

Then fresh tears
Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honeydew
Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Tears . . . shone as the dew on a lily, at the rising of the sun. — HER-SART DE LA VILLEMARQUÉ.

Her tears, like drops of molten lead,
With torrents burn the passage to my heart. — EDWARD YOUNG.

Tedious.

Tedious a task for the mind as oakum-picking or stone-breaking can be for the body. — ARTHUR ACHESON.

Tedious as a twice-told tale. —
HOMER.

Tedious and dull as truth. — HENRY MACKENZIE.

Tedious as dull sorrows. — MAS-SINGER.

Tedious as a king. — SHAKESPEARE.

Tedious
As a tired horse, a railing wife.
— IBID.

So tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child, that hath new robes,

And may not wear them. — IBID.

As tedious as a guilty conscience.
— CYRIL TOURNEUR.

Teeth.

Those cherries fairly do enclose
Of orient pearl a double row ;

Which when her lovely laughter shows,
They look like rosebuds filled with snow. — RICHARD ALISON.

Teeth, as the gourd's white seed. —
ANON.

Teeth like string pearls in carceneto of gold. — ARABIAN NIGHTS.

Teeth like the tusks of jinni who frightened poultry in henhouses. —
IBID.

Teeth
Like pearls a merchant picks to make a string. — EDWIN ARNOLD.

Her teeth were like pearls array'd in order. — SERVIAN BALLAD.

Her teeth are like a flock of sheep,
With fleeces newly washen clean,
That slowly mount the rising steep.
— BURNS.

Teeth like falling snow
For white, were placed in a double row. — COWLEY.

A girl with teeth like the pieces of broken glass people put on their walls. — EDMOND AND JULES DE GON-COURT.

White teeth showing like pearls dropped in a rose. — ADAMS S. HILL.

Thy teeth like rows of Kunda-petals.
— JAYADEVA.

Red like lips disclosing
Twin rows of fairy pearl.
— LEWIS MORRIS.

Teeth serve as a fence to the mouth.
— WEST AFRICAN PROVERB.

Teeth like ivory mixed with pearl.
— CHARLES READE.

Thy teeth resemble stringed jewels ;
but how can I liken them to lifeless pearls? — "ROMANCE OF ANTAR."

Thy teeth are like a flock of sheep that are even shorn, which came up from the washing ; whereof every one bear twins, and none is barren among them. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Teeth — continued.

Her teeth like pomegranate grains.
— "VIKRAM AND THE VAMPIRE."

Tell-Tale.

Tell-tale as a register of birth. —
BALZAC.

Temper.

Good temper, like a sunny day, sheds a brightness over everything;
it is the sweetener of toil and the soother of disquietude. — WASHINGTON IRVING.

Temperate.

Temperate as the morn. — SHAKE-SPEARE.

Tempestuous.

Tempestuous as a hurricane out of heaven. — EDMOND SCHERER.

Temple.

Thy temples are like a piece of a pomegranate within thy locks. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Tempt.

And as a bird each fond endearment tries,
To tempt its new-pledg'd offspring to
the skies,
He tried each art, reprov'd each dull delay,
Allur'd to brighter worlds, and led the way. — GOLDSMITH.

Temptations.

Temptations, when we meet them at first, are as the lion that roared upon Samson; but if we overcome them, the next time we see them we shall find a nest of honey within them. — BUNYAN.

Temptations, like misfortunes, are sent to test our moral strength. — MARGUERITE DE VALOIS.

Tempting.

Tempting as a barmaid. — ANON.

Tempting as a paradox. — IBID.

and beauty die. — WILLIAM WINTER.

Tenderly.

Tenderly, as round the sleeping infant's feet,

We softly fold the cradle-sheet.

— WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Tenderly as lovers may Who know the breaking dawn will be their wedding day.

— MARY A. DE VERE.

Tenderly as Robin Redbreast covered the dead babes with forest leaves. —
HAWTHORNE.

Tenderly, as a mother might kiss a hot, impulsive child trying to still a restless spirit within. — ROBERT HER-RICK (American).

Tenderly . . . like the song of the robin in the tree. — W. D. HOWELLS.

Tenderly, like one that leads the blind. — WILLIAM C. ROSCOE.

Tenderly be led by the nose,
As asses are. — SHAKESPEARE.

Tenderly as a bee that sips,
Your kisses settle on my lips,
— ARTHUR SYMONS.

Tense.

Tense as that cartilage which we have seen attaching the two Siamese.
— EMERSON.

Fibres tense like a greyhound's sinews after a race. — CHARLES READE.

Tense as a war-steed girth. — SWIN-BURNE.

Tense as wire. — IBID.

Tensely

Tensely as the drawn wire rope of a suspension bridge. — KIPLING.

Terrible.

Terrible as a Cerberus. — ANON.

Terrible as the curse of a dead man's eye. — IBID.

Terrible as Jove. — IBID.

Terrible as the god of war. — FLAU-BERT.

Terrible . . . something like the shriek of a giant in pain. — THOMAS A. JANVIER.

Terrible as a meteor of fire. —
JAMES MACPHERSON.

Terrible as hell. — MILTON.

Terrible as torrents in their fall. —
JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Terrible as war. — HANNAH MORE.

Terrible . . . like flames of death.
— OSSIAN.

Terrible as the sea. — RUSKIN.

Terrible as fire. — SWINBURNE.

His countenance was like the countenance of an angel of God, very terrible. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Terrible as an army with banners.
— IBID.

Terrifying.

Terrifying as the monologue of a storm. — HUGO.

Terror.

In terror . . . like a child that has lost its mother and sees a mastiff coming. — CARLYLE.

Testimony.

Testimony is like an arrow shot from a long bow ; the force of it depends in the strength of the hand that draws it. Argument is like an arrow from a cross-bow, which has equal force though shot by a child. — DR. JOHNSON.

Theatre.

(See also STAGE).

A theatre, unfortunately, is like a stage-coach : empty or full, it starts at the same time. — BALZAC.

The stage is more beholding to love than the life of man ; for as to the stage, love is ever matter of comedies, and now and then of tragedies ; but in life it doth much mischief, sometimes like a siren, sometimes like a fury. — BACON.

Theatrical Favour, like Publick Commerce, will sometimes deceive the best Judgements by an unaccountable change of its Channel ; the best Commodities are not always known to meet with the best Markets. — COLLEY CIBBER.

The Theatre is like a Turkish seraglio : the critics are the eunuchs. — FARQUHAR.

Thin as a costume worn by a Salome dancer. — WALTER TRUMBULL.

Thinly.

The early judicial circuits of Indiana, like the young gentleman's whiskers. — extensively laid out, but thinly settled. — SANFORD COX.

Thirst.

Thirst for them as Tantalus for inaccessible water, and the fruit that the wind blew away from him. — ANON.

My soul thirsteth after thee, as a thirsty land. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Thirsty.

Thirsty as a fish. — ANON.

Thirsty as a sponge. — IBID.

Thirsty as a dry road. — CYRIL HARCOURT.

Thirsty as Tantalus. — SYDNEY MUNDEN.

Thought.

Thoughts, like snowflakes on some far-off mountain side, go on accumulating till some great truth is loosened, and falls like an avalanche on the waiting world. — ANON.

Great thoughts, like great deeds, need no trumpet. — P. J. BAILEY.

Dark wretched thoughts, like ice-isles in a stream, choke up my mind, and clash. — IBID.

Thoughts, like nuns, ought not to go abroad without a veil. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Thoughts, like waves that glide by night, are stillest when they shine. — IBID.

Thoughts are like persons met upon a journey; I think them very agreeable at first but soon find, as a rule, that I am tired of them. — SAMUEL BUTLER (1835-1902).

Our thoughts, like the waters of the sea, when exhaled towards Heaven, will lose all their bitterness and saltiness, and sweeten into an amiable humanity, until they descend in gentle showers of love and kindness upon our fellow-men. — C. C. COLTON.

Curran's airy thoughts, like purple birds that shine and soar. — C. G. DAFFEY.

Human thought is like a monstrous pendulum: it keeps swinging from one extreme to the other. — EUGENE FIELD.

A thought would wander like a free bird over his features, flutter in his eyes, light on his parted lips, hide itself in the wrinkles of his brow, then utterly vanish away. — IVAN A. GONCHAROV.

Some kinds of thoughts breed in the dark of one's mind like the blind fishes in the Mammoth cave. We can't see them and they can't see us; but sooner or later the daylight gets in and we find that some cold, fishy little negative has been sprawling all over our beliefs, and the brood of blind questions it has given birth to are burrowing round and under and butting their blunt noses against the pillars of faith we thought the whole world might lean on. — O. W. HOLMES.

A little thought in life is like salt upon rice. — KIPLING.

Thoughts, common as clay, and the trodden earth. — GEORGE MACDONALD.

My thoughts, like birds, were frightened from their nest. — OTWAY.

Beautiful thoughts that fall like rain
Are droughts for pleasure or balm for pain.
— D. G. ROSSETTI.

The presence of a thought is like the presence of a loved one. We deem that we shall never forget this thought and that the loved one can never become indifferent to us. But out of sight, out of mind! The most beautiful thought runs the risk of being irrevocably forgotten if it is not written down, and the loved one to be torn from us if she has not been wedded. — SCHOPENHAUER.

A thought unknown is as a thought unacted. — SHAKESPEARE.

An old thought turns with the old tune in my head

As a windmill turns in the wind on an empty sky.

— ARTHUR SYMONS.

Thought. — continued.

Sweet thoughts, like honey-bees, have made their hive of her soft bosom cell, and cluster there. — AMELIA B.
WELBY.

Thoughtful.

Thoughtful and dark, like the sun when he carries a cloud on his face.
— JAMES MACPHERSON.

Thoughtless.

Thoughtless as a lark. — KEATS.

Thoughtless as if dead already. — "DHAMMAPADA."

Thrash.

Thrash invaders rash, like barley with a flail. — HOOD.

Thrashed him like a wheat-sheaf. — coat. — LEWIS ROSENTHAL.

Threatening.

Threatening as a porcupine. —
ANON.

Threatening . . . like precipices. —
BURNS.

Threatening, like a storm, just breaking on our heads. — DRYDEN.

Thrill.

Thrilling as the meteor's fall through the depths of lonely sky. — ANON.

Thrilled like the juice of the purple vine. — IBID.

Thrilled like the string of a lyre. —
IBID.

Thrilled as was Rome when Cæsar returned laden with the spoils of conquest. — IBID.

Thrills in leafy tremblement,
Like a heart that after climbing
Beateth quickly though content.

— E. B. BROWNING.

Thrill like his lyre-strings. — BYRON.

Thrilled like a revelation. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Thrilled in ecstasy, like an Oriental saint. — DAUDET.

Her timbers thrilled as nerves,
When through them passed the spirit of that shock.

— SIR FRANCIS H. DOYLE.

KENNETH GRAHAME.

Thrilled like witch-notes. — ARTHUR
HENRY HALLAM.

Thrill like some fanciful land of romance. — BRET HARTE.

Thrills

As if the Enchanted Castle at the heart
Of the wood's dark wonderment Swung wide his valves, and filled the dim sea-banks

With exquisite visitants.

— W. E. HENLEY.

Thrill like a battle shout. — MARY E. HEWITT.

Memories thrill,
Like a breath from the wood, like a breeze from the hill.

— O. W. HOLMES.

A leap and a thrill like the flash of a weaver's shuttle,
Swift and sudden and sure.

— RICHARD HOVEY.

Thrilling like the trump of battle. —
WALTER MALONE.

Thrill,
Like sounds upon the wind-harp's chords when all the winds are still.

— GEORGE D. PRENTICE.

Thrill — continued.

My heart like a touched harp-string thrilled. — ALEXANDER SMITH.

Thrill as a theatre thronged at appeal of an actor's appalled agitation. — SWINBURNE.

Thrilled as by the clangorous call Of storm's blown trumpets from the core of night. — IBID.

Thrill, Like the whole world's heart, with warm new life and gladdening flame. — IBID.

Tight as a bottle. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Tight as a gooseberry. — DICKENS.

Skin tight like a bursting vest. — AMY LOWELL.

Tight like teeth. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Time.

Time is like a river made up of the events which happen, and a violent stream; for as soon as a thing has been seen, it is carried away, and another comes in its place, and this will be carried away too. — MARCUS AURELIUS.

Time is like money; the less we have of it to spare, the further we make it go. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Time, like a brilliant steed with seven rays, and with a thousand eyes, imperishable, full of fecundity, bears all things onward. — "HYMN TO TIME."

Time's shadows, like the shuttle, flee. — D. M. MOIR.

Time, like a seven-wheeled, seven-naved car, moves on. His rolling wheels are all the worlds, his axle is immortality. — FRIEDRICH RÜCKERT.

For time is like a fashionable host That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand,

And with the arms outstretch'd, as he would fly,

Grasps in the comer: welcome ever
smiles,

And farewell goes out sighing.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Time is like the peacefulness of grass, which clothes, as if with silence and deep sleep, deserted plains that once were loud with strife. — ALEXANDER SMITH.

Time is as wind, and as waves are we. — SWINBURNE.

Time, like the earth with flowers bespread

In youthful spring, is dark and Dead when age and cares come on And friends and pleasures are all gone.

— WALTHER VON DER VOGELWEIDE.

Timid.

Timid as a child deserted by its nurse. — ANON.

Timid as a falling snowflake. — IBID.

Timid as a mouse. — IBID.

Timid voice, like a baby afraid of punishment. — HERMANN BAHR.

As timid, touching and inquiring, as she who charmed the gods from the threshold of Olympus. — DR. JOHN DORAN.

high. — J. H. MCCARTHY.

Tingle like fagots. — F. D. SHER-MAN.

Tinkling.

Tinkling . . . like armourers at work upon their anvils. — SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Tiny.

Tiny as the temple of Nike. —
ANON.

Tipple.

Tippled like a fish. — CAMPBELL.

Tip-tilted.

Tip-tilted, like a thirsty duckling's bill
After much guzzling in a pool.

— OSCAR FAY ADAMS.

Her slender nose

Tip-tilted like the petal of a flower.

— TENNYSON.

Tip-toe.

On tip-toe like escaping murderers.
— E. B. BROWNING.

Tired.

Tired as old Nick. — ANON.

Tired as the dickens. — IBID.

Tired as twilight. — IBID.

Tired as tombstones. — ROBERT
BROWNING.

Tiresome.

Tiresome as when poor Sisyphus reaches the top of the mountain vainly to feel his burden go rolling back from his shoulders. — SENECA.

Titter.

A titter

Like the skipping of rabbits by moonlight. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Title.

The title of knight, on the back of a knave, is like a saddle upon a sow. — ALEXANDER BROWN.

Titles of honor are like impressions on coin, which add no value to gold and silver, but only render brass current. — STERNE.

Titles and birth, like diamonds from the mine,

Must by your worth be polish'd ere they shine.

— WILLIAM WHITEHEAD.

Together.

Stick together like birds. — ANON.

Together like birds of prey watching a carcass. — IBID.

Come in together like dinner and wax tapers. — IBID.

We all live together like two wanton vines,

Circling our souls and loves in one another.

— BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Grow together like tares and wheat.
— E. B. BROWNING.

Hang together like bees or Scotchmen. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Cluttered together like so many pebbles in a tide. — ROBERT BURTON.

Together unavoidably, like two ships becalmed near each other. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Together, like meeting rivers. —
JOHN HUGHES.

Gathered herself together like a watch spring. — KIPLING.

Paths now lie together, as our footprints on the strand. — T. BUCHANAN
READ.

So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming
parted,
But yet an union in partition ;
Two lovely berries moulded on one
stem ;

Together — continued.

So, with two seeming bodies, but one heart,

Two of the first, like coats in heraldry,
Due but to one and crowned with one crest. — SHAKESPEARE.

Join they all together,
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather. — IBID.

Gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Together like the two kings of Brentford smelling at one nosegay. — BONNEL THORNTON.

Toil.

Toiled like a dog in a wheel. — ANON.

Toiled like branded slaves. — GERALD MASSEY.

Tolerant.

One who does his duty is tolerant like the earth . . . he is like a lake without mud. — BUDDHA.

Tolerate.

Tolerate as lions tolerate lice. — G. B. SHAW.

Toll.

Deep bells toll,
Like a last knell over the dead world's soul. — HOOD.

Tongue.

Your tongue is like a jaded nag.
When the spurs prick its flanks it can only switch its tail. — LEONID ANDREYEV.

His tongue is like any kind of carriage, the less weight it bears, the faster and easier it goes. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

His tongue is like a Bagpipe Drone, that has no Stop, but makes a continual ugly Noise, as long as he can squeeze any Wind out of himself. — IBID.

Their tongue was like a mellow turret bell

To toll hearts burning into wide-lipped hell. — LORD DE TABLEY.

All tongue, like the lily. — HAFIZ.

His tongue, like the tail of Samson's foxes, carries firebrands, and is enough to set the whole field of the world on a flame. — JOSEPH HALL.

The tongue of a louter should be like the poynt in the Diall, which though it go, none can see it going, or a young tree which though it growe, none can perceiue it growing, hauing alwayes the stone in their mouth which the Cranes vse when they flye ouer mountaines, least they make a noyse, but to be sylent, and lyghtly to esteeme of his Ladye, to shake hir off though he be secrete, to change for euerything though he bewray nothing, is the onely thing that cutteth the heart in peeces of a true and constant louter, which deeply waying with my selfe, I preferred him that woulde neuer remoue, though he reueiled [reveal] all before him that woulde conceale all, and euer be slyding, thus wasting to [o] and fro, I appeale to you my good Violet, whether in loue be more required, secrecie, or constancy. — LYLY.

Whose tongue, like the dart of death, spares neither sex nor age. — CHARLES MACKLIN.

A fool's tongue is like the buye of an anchor, you will find his heart by it where soever it lyes. — SIR THOMAS OVERBURY.

His tongue is like a biscuit-seller's shovel — long tongued. — OSMANLI PROVERB.

Her tongue, which rosily Peeped as a piercing bud between her lips. — D. G. ROSSETTI.

With tongue is like a sword's point. — SWINBURNE.

Thy tongue deviseth mischiefs ; like a sharp razor, working deceitfully. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Your tongue is like a scarlet snake that dances to fantastic tunes. — OSCAR WILDE.

Tongueless.

Tongueless as she whom a man-snake stung. — SWINBURNE.

Tooth.

The dentist pulled her tooth just like a serial, every day another piece. — BENJAMIN KOVNER.

Transparent as the soul of innocent youth. — WORDSWORTH.

Trapped.

Trapped like a rat. — ANON.

Trapped like bears in a pit. — HUGO.

Traveler.

I am of this minde with Homer, that as the Snayle that crept out of hir shell was turned eftsoones into a Toad, and thereby was forced to make a stoole to sit on, disdaining hir own house: so the Trauailer that straggleth from his own country, is in short tyme transformed into so monstrous a shape, that hee is faine to alter his mansion with his manners, and to liue where he canne, not where he would. — LYLY.

Treacherous.

Treacherous as the memory. — ANON.

Treading.

Treading warily, like one on the top of a tower. — HERBERT QUICK.

Treason.

stone
That fell in fear when Joshua's horns were blown.

— HENRY VAN DYKE.

Trembling like a storm-struck tree.
— THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON.

Trembles like a tender spark. —
IBID.

Tremble in the sunny skies,
As if, from waving bough to bough,
Flitted the birds of paradise.

— WHITTIER.

Tremble — continued.

Tremble like a guilty thing surprised.
— WORDSWORTH.

Trembling, as if with fear of some unconfessed peril, which she felt to be near at hand. — ZOLA.

Tremendous.

Tremendous, as that of trying to read the Universal Riddle. — LAF-CADIO HEARN.

Tremor.

A slight tremor in thy tone,
Like that of some frail harp-string blown
By fitful breezes, faint and low.

— WHITTIER.

Tremulous.

Tremulous the voice . . . like any one's when jesting with a subject not a joke. — HOOD.

Tremulous as a nest. — HUGO.

Tremulous as the mimosa leaf. —
LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY.

Tremulous like fire. — SWINBURNE.

Tremulous as brook-water. — OS-CAR WILDE.

True to one as a beggar to his dish.
— BRIAN MELBANCKE.

True as a barber's news on Saturday night. — MIDDLETON.

True as stars. — THOMAS MOORE.

True as the lute, that no sighing can waken. — IBID.

True as the homing-bird flies with its message. — JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY.

True as the Pentateuch. — POE.

True as Heaven. — EARL OF ROCHESTER.

She kept in time without a beat
As true as church-bell ringers.

— C. G. ROSSETTI.

True as steel, as plantage to the moon,

As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre. — SHAKESPEARE.

As true as truth's simplicity. — IBID.

As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire. — IBID.

Keep as true in soul
As doth that orb'd continent the fire
That severs day from night. — IBID.

True as the Stock-dove to her shallow nest

And to the grove that holds it.

— WORDSWORTH.

Trumpet.

Trumpeted like figures of Fame. — HUGO.

Trustful.

Trustful as Don Juan's famous Monsieur Dimanche. — DAUDET.

Trustful as innocence. — W. S. GILBERT.

Truth.

Truth like a torch, the more it's shook, it shines. — ANON.

Truth and falsehood . . . are like the iron and clay in the toes of Nebuchadnezzar's image, they may cleave, but they will not incorporate. — BACON.

Moral truths, like human beings, change their aspect according to their surroundings, to the point of being unrecognizable. — BALZAC.

Truth, like the sun, submits to be obscured ; but, like the sun, only for a time. — C. N. BOVÉE.

Catch truth and wisdom unawares,
As men do health in wholesome airs.
— SAMUEL BUTLER.

The use of truth is like the use of words ; both truth and words depend greatly upon custom. — SAMUEL BUTLER (1835-1902).

Truth, like the juice of a poppy, in small quantities, calms men ; in large, heats and irritates them, and is attended by fatal circulation, because men have discovered that it is far more inconvenient to adulterate the truth than to refine themselves. — C. C. COLTON.

He who will tell the truth appears at times like a hen on a perch in windy weather. — OLOF VON DALIN.

Truth itself is sometimes like a ruddy apple which requires to be cut in halves before we can tell which portion contains the worm. — FRANCIS GRIERSON.

Truth, like beauty, varies in its fashions, and is best recommended by different dresses to different minds. — DR. JOHNSON.

The advent of truth, like the dawn of day, agitates the elements, while it disperses the gloom. — E. L. MAGOON.

Truth . . . shines like the sun, and like the sun it cannot perish. — NAPOLEON.

Truth, like a single point, escapes the sight,
And claims attention to perceive it right.
— JOHN POMFRET.

Truth that has been merely learned is like an artificial limb, a false tooth, a waxen nose ; at best, like a nose made out of another's flesh ; it adheres to us only because it is put on. — SCHOPENHAUER.

Truthful.

Truthful as the genial spring. — NATHANIEL COTTON.

Truthful as a knight of old. — WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Tug.

Tug as a flag in the wind. — LOWELL.

Turbid.

Turbid as passion. — WILLIAM WATSON.

Turbulent.

Turbulent as a children's ball at Christmas. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Turbulent as is the ocean. — HUGO.

Turn.

Turned upon me, as the lion turned upon the hunter's spear. — ANON.

Turn'd, as a vessel holds to sea, when near a Siren strand. — THOMAS ASHE.

Turn it, as a nose of wax, to their own ends. — ROBERT BURTON.

Doubling and turning like a hunted hare. — DRYDEN.

Turn, as upon pivots. — HUGO.

Turned like a weather cock with every wind. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Turned me about as did Lot's wife. — RABELAIS.

Turns as a bucket turns in a well. — D. G. ROSSETTI.

Turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze in commons.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Turn o' the toe like a parish-top. — IBID.

Turning as a turning wave
Against the land-wind.

— SWINBURNE.

Turned, like a panther in his lair. — WHITTIER.

Turning like a windmill sail. — IBID.

Turned, like Lot at Sodom. — IBID.

Turn
Like sunflowers to the pure and best.
— IBID.

Twilight.

Twilight is like death; the dark portal of night comes upon us, to open again in the glorious morning of immortality. — JAMES ELLIS.

Twine.

My thoughts twine and bud about thee, as with vines, about a tree. — E. B. BROWNING.

Twined in Memory's mystic hand,
Like pilgrim's withered wreath of flowers plucked in a far-off land.
— LEWIS CARROLL.

Twineth, like a lover's arm,
With sweet devotion.

— ELIZA COOK.

Twine, like pole ivy round the polished bark. — CUMBERLAND.

Sweet thoughts are twining in with bitter ones, as roses twine with rue. — JAMES M. MORTON.

Twines round it as the ivy does the ash. — MÜNCHHAUSEN.

Like the tendrils of the vine,
Do her auburn tresses twine.
— AMBROSE PHILIPS.

Twinge.

Twinged like a hollow tooth. — RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

Unapproachable.

Unapproachable as a star. — O. HENRY.

Unarmed.

Unarm'd as bending angels.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Unasked.

Like Dian's kiss, unasked, unsought
Love gives itself, but is not bought.
— LONGFELLOW.

Unattractive.

Unattractive as a gargoye. — ANON.

Unavailable.

As unavailable as for a man to whistle in the teeth of a gale, or to cast a jug of water against a tidal wave.
— LI HUNG CHANG.

Unavailing.

Unavailing, as the cry of a spoiled child in its nurse's arms. — HENRY CLAY.

Unaware.

Catch Truth and Reason unawares,
As Men do Health in wholesome Airs.
— SAMUEL BUTLER.

Unawares, like the stroke of sudden death. — HAWTHORNE.

Unbounded, like infinity. — AUBREY DE VERE.

Unbounded as the ample air. — GOLDSMITH.

Unbridled.

Unbridled as the northern storm. — WILLIAM J. MICKLE.

Uncalled.

As light November snows to empty nests,
As grass to graves, as moss to mildewed stones,
As July suns to ruins, through the rents,
As ministering spirits to mourners, through a loss,

As Heaven itself to men, through pangs of death,
He came uncalled wherever grief had come. — E. B. BROWNING.

Unchanging still from year to year,
Like stars returning in their sphere,
With undiminish'd rays.

— JAMES MONTGOMERY.

Unclean.

Unclean as sin. — RICHARD REALF.

Unclose.

Lids unclose

Like petals of a pearly rose
After the rain. — OLIVER HERFORD.

Uncoil.

Uncoiling, —

Like the rattlesnake's shrill warning the reverberating drum.

— O. W. HOLMES.

Uncoiled itself like a huge boa about to engulf a tiny rabbit. — JAMES HUNEKER.

Uncomely.

Uncomely as a drove of pigs running down a lane. — GEORGE MOORE.

Unctuous as a hot-corn dodger ~~plattered~~ with sap. — W. C. BRANN.

Undeified.

Undeified like mountains made of snow. — ERIC MACKAY.

Understanding.

Understandings seem perfect Solids, as dead to Wit and as insensible of Reason as if their Souls and their Bodies (according to Hobbes's Philosophy) were both made of the same stuff and equally impenetrable. — ROBERT WOLSELEY.

Understood.

Harder to be understood than a piece of Egyptian antiquity, or an Irish manuscript. — CONGREVE.

Undimmed.

I have carried your glance within me undimmed, unaltered, as a lost boat, the compass some passing ship has lent her. — ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH.

Undistinguishable.

Undistinguishable, Like far-off mountains turned into clouds. — SHAKESPEARE.

Undisturbed.

Undisturb'd as Death. — COWLEY.

Undisturbed — continued.

Undisturbed as Justice. — SOUTHEY.

Undisturbed;
As on the pavement of a Gothic church Walks a lone Monk, when service hath expired,
In peace and silence.

— WORDSWORTH.

Undone.

All undone,
As earth from her bright body casts off night. — SWINBURNE.

Undone, as we would undo an oyster. — CLEMENT WALKER.

Undulate.

Undulating like the sea. — BOCCACCIO.

Undulating like diluvian billows fixed into stone in the midst of their stormy swell. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Unexciting as the rain-sodden landscape. — FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT.

Unexpected.

Fortune came like Agag, unexpected.
— ANON.

Unexpected as chastity at the bar of a tavern. — IBID.

Unexpected, like a thunderbolt. —
IBID.

As unexpected as a serpent comes.
— ROBERT BROWNING.

Unexpected as seeing a vision. —
JOSEPH CONRAD.

Unexpected as a fifth ace in a poker deck. — ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

Unexpectedly.

Unexpectedly, like a bolt out of the blue. — CARLYLE.

Unfaded.

Unfaded, as before it grew. — WIL-LIAM BROOME.

Unfading.

Unfading as the garden of kindness.
— ANON.

Unfair.

Unfair to rest upon such decision, as it would be to ascribe wisdom to a judge, merely because he is dressed differently from other men. — WILLIAM COOKE.

Unfashioned.

Unfashioned, like a jewel in the mine. — ADDISON.

Unfathomable.

Unfathomable as the Pythagorean number. — ANON.

Unintelligible as any dream. —
DICKENS.

Unintentional.

Unintentional as the birth of a thought in the head. — JOSEPH CON-RAD.

United.

United, as flesh and soul in man.
— P. J. BAILEY.

United as the good thoughts that dwell in the same soul. — MAURICE MAETERLINCK.

United, like a hook and eye. —
SYDNEY MUNDEN.

In harmony united,
Like guests that meet, and some from
far,
By cordial love invited.
— WORDSWORTH.

Unity.

Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity! It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard: that went down to the skirts of his garments. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Universal.

Universal as the sun. — BEAUMONT
AND FLETCHER.

The desire to pry into the future is as universal as the longing after immortal life. — WILLIAM DUNLAP.

Universal as seasickness. — G. B.
SHAW.

Universal — continued.

Universal as the light. — SHELLEY.

Unjust.

Unjust, like the Jedburgh judges of Border history, it first hangs the prisoner and then tries him. — WILLIAM ARCHER.

Unkind.

Unkind as fate. — ANON.

Unkind as hail. — AMBROSE PHILIPS.

Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind
As man's ingratitude. — SHAKESPEARE.

As winter's frost unkind. — SMOL-LETT.

Unknown.

Unknown, like a seed in fallow ground. — T. B. ALDRICH.

Unseasonable as snow in summer. — ANON.

Unseasonable as long graces at a feast. — THOMAS KILLIGREW.

Unseeing.

Unseeing stare, like that of a child who begins to see for the first time. — BALZAC.

Unseen.

Not seen, like arrows shot by night. — BUDDHA.

Unseen, like the wind. — EDMUND GOSSE.

Unseen — continued.

Crept stealthily and unseen, like earth-worms to a carcase. — BULWER-LYTTON.

More unseen
Than Satan in his exile.
— KEATS.

Unseen as a disbanded rainbow. —
SYDNEY MUNDEN.

Unseen, as lamps in sepulchres. —
POPE.

Like a star of Heaven,
In the broad daylight,
Thou art unseen. — SHELLEY.

Unsettle.

As unsettling to us as a change of Government to Londoners. — J. M.
BARRIE.

Unsettles
Like a bed of stinging nettles.
— W. S. GILBERT.

Unshaken.

Unshaken like a Thracian hill. —
RICHARD GLOVER.

Like a rock in the sea, stands unshaken ; like a rock in the sea before the rush and crash of waters, which, amid thousands of breaking waves, is fixed by its own weight ; the crags and the spray-foamed stones roar about it in vain, and the lashed seaweed falls idly by its side. — VIRGIL.

Unshunnable.

'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Unightly.

Unightly as the Monster in the Tempest. — THOMAS RYMER.

Unsordid.

Unsordid as a bond of love. —
ROBERT U. JOHNSON.

Unsparing.

Unsparing as the scourge of war. —
ROBERT BLOOMFIELD.

Unspoken.

Unspoken,
Like daffodils that die with sheaths unbroken. — O. W. HOLMES.

Unstable.

Unstable as the wind. — ALEXANDER BARCLAY.

Unstable as the waves of the sea.
— GEORGE BISHOP.

Unstable as water. — OLD TESTA-MENT.

Unstaid.

Unstaid as rolling waves in ocean flood. — TASSO.

Unstained.

Unstained as snow. — JAMES LANE
ALLEN.

Unstained as the sun. — EMERSON.

Unstained and pure as the lily or the mountain snow. — JAMES THOM-SON.

Unsteady.

Unsteady as a shadow. — ANON.

Unsteady as the eye looking at the sun. — IBID.

Unsteady as the ocean. — GOLD-
SMITH.

Unsteady on his legs, like a young roe scared by a leaf. — HUGO.

Unsubstantial.

Unsubstantial as a ghost. — ANON.

Unsubstantial as a mirage. —
BUDDHA.

Unsubstantial, like the teasing phantoms of a half-conscious slumber. —
HAWTHORNE.

Unsubstantial as a bag of money in a looking-glass. — TELUGU PROVERB.

Unsubstantial as a dream. —
THOMAS WADE.

Unsullied.

Unsullied in life and deed as a holy saint. — O. HENRY.

Unsullied — continued.

Unsullied as a cloistered nun. —
WHITTIER.

Untasted.

My youth's dear sweets here spent
untasted,
Like a fair taper, with his own flame wasted. — BEN JONSON.

Untenanted.

As untenanted of man
As a castle under ban
By a doom.
— ERASTUS W. ELLSWORTH.

Unthinkable.

Unthinkable as trees without roots.
ALFRED AYRES.

Unthinkable as a mirror that would not reflect the objects before it. — FRANZ HARTMAN.

Unthrifty.

Our hedges like a wanton courtesan
Unthrifty of its beauty.
— OSCAR WILDE.

Untimely.

Like winter rose and summer ice,
Her joys are still untimely.
— ROBERT SOUTHWELL.

Untiring.

Untiring as the law of gravitation.
— ANON.

Untiring as an Indian on trail. —
OUIDA.

Untouched.

Like the lotus, which, although it grows in the water, yet remains untouched by the water. — BUDDHA.

Untouched as any islet
Shrined in an unknown sea.
— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Untrue.

It's as true as Biglam's cat crew, and the cock rock'd the cradle. — SCOTCH PROVERB.

Untwined.

Arms untwined, like some twin stream That parts at last in hastening to the sea. — EDMUND GOSSE.

Untwist.

Untwisted the fond links that bound us,
Like frost wreaths, that melt in the morning's first beam.
— FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE.

Unuseful.

Unuseful, as if void of mind. —
R. D. BLACKMORE.

Unusual.

Unusual as a sailor on horseback. —
ANTHONY HAMILTON.

Unvaried.

The same unvaried tone,
Like the Scotch bagpipe's favorite drone. — ROBERT LLOYD.

Unvexed.

Unvexed . . . like the candles round a shrine. — KIPLING.

Unwasted.

Like painted lamps they shine un-wasted. — ABRAHAM COWLEY.

Unwatched.

Unwatched, unwept, as commonly a pauper sleeps. — HOOD.

Unwearied.

Unwearied as the heavens. — DE QUINCEY.

Unwelcome.

Unwelcome as snow in summer. —
ANON.

Unwelcome as water in a leaking ship. — IBID.

Unwelcome as water in your shoe. —
IBID.

Unwelcome to a woman as a looking-glass after the small-pox. — CON-DREVE.

Unwelcome — continued.

Unwelcome and unasked, like Banquo's Ghost, in walked the long-lost Spouse. — HOOD.

Unwelcome to any conceit as sluttish morsels, or wallowish potions to a nice stomach. — SIR THOMAS OVERBURY.

Unwinding.

Unwinding themselves as so many clocks. — ROBERT BURTON.

Unworthy.

As unworthy as to reject a comrade In envy of his share of victory.

— EMERICH MADÁCH.

Unworthy of credence as an anonymous letter. — BRANDER MATTHEWS.

Unyielding.

Unyielding as a rock. — ANON.

Up.

Up and down like a bucket in a well. — ANON.

Up like a lark in the air. — RICHARD HARVEY.

Up and down like a milk punch in the shaker. — O. HENRY.

Up and down, like a chicken drinking. — LEIGH HUNT.

Went up as the smoke of a furnace. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Upborne.

Upborne, like Aphrodite upon a meadowy swell of emerald sea. — GERALD MASSEY.

Uplift.

Uplifted like the everlasting dome Which rises in the miracle sublime over eternal Rome. — ANON.

Uplift as the hearts and the mouths of the singers, on the leaside and lawn. — SWINBURNE.

Uplifted like a quivering dart. — S. H. THAYER.

Uplifting as a jack-screw. — DANIEL WEBSTER.

Upright.

Upright as a ramrod. — ANON.

Upright as a sentinel. — IBID.

As upright as a stake. — IBID.

Upright as a young apple tree. — R. D. BLACKMORE.

Upright, like a taper. — OSMANLI PROVERB.

Upright as a tower. — CHARLES READE.

Upright as a wooden sentinel at the door of a puppet-show. — SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Upright as the cedar. — SHAKESPEARE.

Upright as a wild Morisco. — IBID.

Upright as a sheer cliff's wall. — SWINBURNE.

Upright as an heap. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Uprise.

Uprisen as a prayer. — P. J. BAILEY.

Uprising, like a bubble in a stream. — GERTRUDE BLOEDE.

Uprise like the islands of the Cyclades as seen from the mountains of Negroponte. — PAUL BOURGET.

Uprise, like a tempestuous ocean. — SHELLEY.

Uprising like the smoke wraith, Blue ascending into heaven's blue.

— ELLEN BURNS SHERMAN.

Uproar.

An uproar like ten thousand Smithfield fairs. — ANON.

Upsoar.

Upsoaring like an eagle's wings. — FITZ-GREENE HALLECK.

Upstart.

Upstarting wild and haggard,
Like a man from dreams awakened.

— LONGFELLOW.

Upward.

Upward tending although weak,
Like plants in mines which never saw the sun. — ROBERT BROWNING.

Upward, like the simulated pyramid of flame on a monumental urn. —
GEORGE ELIOT.

Upward flies ;
Like holy thoughts to cloudless skies.
— WILLIAM MOTHERWELL.

Useful.

About as useful as a button on a hat. — ANON.

Useful as a shin of beef, which has a big bone for the big dog, a little bone for the little dog, and a sinew for the cat. — IBID.

Useful as a cow. — IBID.

Useful as daylight. — IBID.

Useful as the useful. — HUGO.

Useless.

Useless as a chimney until you light your fire. — ANON.

Useless as a gun without a trigger.
— IBID.

Useless as a disabled pitcher. —
IBID.

As useless as a monkey's fat. —
IBID.

Useless as a sedan chair on a railway. — IBID.

Useless as a shoulder of mutton to a sick horse. — IBID.

Useless as whispering in the ear of a corpse. — IBID.

Useless as a clock without wheels.
— IBID.

Useless as to stop up a rathole with an apple dumpling. — IBID.

Useless as whistling psalms to a dead horse. — BARTLETT'S "DICTION-ARY OF AMERICANISMS."

Useless as a candle in a skull. — COWPER.

Useless as a buttonhole without a button. — HENRY IRVING DODGE.

Useless as for her hand to try to grasp a shadow. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Useless as to enlarge upon the obvious. — EPICETUS.

Useless as the leg of a man with a sprained ankle. — RICHARD LE GAL-LIENNE.

Useless as a skyrocket without powder. — CHARLES HENDERSON.

Whose talk is as busily useless as the babble of a stream that hurries by a ruined mill. — R. G. INGERSOLL.

Useless as the canal constructor without water. — G. B. SHAW.

Useless extra, like a sixth finger. —
ANTON TCHERHOV.

Useless as perfumery to a hog. — TOLSTOY.

Uselessly.

Uselessly and without any plan,
just like ants crawling over bushes, which creep up to the top, and then down to the bottom again without gaining anything. Many men spend their lives in exactly the same fashion, which we may call a state of restless indolence. — SENECA.

Utility.

It is only the public situation which this gentleman holds which entitles me, or induces me to say a word about him. He is a fly in amber ; nobody cares about the fly ; the only question is, How the devil did it get there ?
Nor do I attack him for the love of the glory, but from the love of utility, as a burgomaster hunts a rat in a Dutch dyke, for fear it should flood a province. — SYDNEY SMITH.

V

Vacant.

Vacant like air. — CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

Vacant as the beach from which the tide has receded. — HAMILTON WRIGHT MABIE.

Vacantly.

Vacantly
As ocean's moon looks on the moon in heaven. — SHELLEY.

Vagrant.

Vagrant as the wind. — JOHN FORD.

Vague.

Vague as a shadow. — ANON.

Vague like a suggestion of solid darkness. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Vague . . . like feathers wafted backwards
From passage birds in flight.
— W. D. HOWELLS.

Vague and unmarked as desert
sands. — MARY JOHNSTON.

Vague as solitary dove,
Nor knew that nests were built.
— KEATS.

Vague, like the thoughts of a child.
— KINGSLEY.

A vague presentment of impending doom,
Like ghostly footsteps in a vacant room. — LONGFELLOW.

Vague surmise
Shines in the father's gentle eyes,
As firelight on a window-pane
Glimmers and vanishes away.
— IBID.

Vague as futurity. — OWEN MEREDITH.

Vague as the music of a moon-bathed brook. — FRANCIS S. SAL-TUS.

Vaguely.

Vaguely, like certain luminous scenes of the theatre back of those thin curtains which suddenly descend on the scenic stage, transporting the spectators from the tumult of a ballroom to the silence of a private house.
— EDMONDO DE AMICIS.

Vaguely, as in a dream. — FITZ-JAMES O'BRIEN.

Vain.

Vain as a peacock. — ANON.

Vain as chasing a bug in the dark.
— IBID.

Vain as the leaf upon the stream.
— IBID.

Vain as the promises of a patent medicine advertisement. — IBID.

Vain as to water the plant when the root is dead. — IBID.

Vain as a rattle in a baby's clutch. —
HENRY B. BINNS.

Vain as the passing gale. — CHAR-LOTTE BRONTË.

Vain
As for a brook to cope with ocean's flood. — BYRON.

As organ plaiers, vnlesse some body blowe vnto them the windie bellows, do make no sound at all: Euen so, vaine men, vnless they be pricked forward, with commendations and praises of others, haue neuer any minde, or purpose to lend themselves to any good action. — ANTHONIE FLETCHER'S "CERTAINE VERY PROPER AND MOST PROFITABLE SIMILES."

Vain as Niobe. — "FOUNDLING HOS-PITAL FOR WIT," 1743.

Vain as the sick man's vow, of young man's sigh. — WALTER HARTE.

Vain as the summer's glowing spoils Flung o'er an early bier.

— THOMAS KIBBLE HERVEY.

Vain — continued.

Vain your feeble cry,
As the babe's wailings to the thundering sky. — O. W. HOLMES.

Vain as a sick man's dream.

— HORACE.

Vain as swords
Against the enchased crocodiles.
— KEATS.

Vain . . . as to attempt to erase what
Time has written with the Judgment
Blood. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Vain and unprofitable, as is the sunshine to a dead man's eyes. —
H. H. MILMAN.

Vain as to strike an axe on a rock.
— OSMANLI PROVERB.

Vain as a leaf from a tree,
As a fading day,
As veriest vanity,
As the froth and the spray
Of the hollow-billowed sea,
As what was and shall not be,
As what is and passes away.
— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Vain as an idiot's dream. — CHRIS-TOPHER SMART.

Vain as to count the April drops of rain. — SMOLLETT.

Vain as a dead man's vision. —
SWINBURNE.

Words as vain as wind. — FREDER-ICK TENNYSON.

Vain as a girl. — THACKERAY.

Troubles of this world are vain as billows in a tossing sea. — WORDS-WORTH.

Vain as a Frenchman newly returned from a campaign. — WYCHER-LEY.

Vain as a gaudy-minded man. —
YOUNG.

Vainly.

Vainly spent, as dews on the sea.
— CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

Vainly as the hydra bleeds. —
SCHILLER.

Vainly given like rain upon the herbless sea poured down by too benignant heaven. — JOHN STERLING.

Valiant.

Valiant as the Cid. — ANTHONY
HAMILTON.

Valiant as Mars. — HOMER.

Valiant as fire. — BEN JONSON.

Valiant as a lion. — SHAKESPEARE.

Valiant as the wrathful dove or most magnanimous mouse. — IBID.

Valiant as Hercules. — IBID.

As valiant a man as Mark Anthony.
— IBID.

Less valiant than the virgin in the night. — IBID.

Valiant as Hector in every marciall nede. — SKELTON.

Valor.

True valor is like honesty; it enters into all that a man sees and does. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Valor higher than that which casts out fear. — SWINBURNE.

Valorless.

Valourless as a hare. — ANON.

Valorous.

Valorous as Cæsar. — ANON.

Valorous as Hector of Troy. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Valuable.

Valuable as chiselled gold or facetted gems. — ANON.

About as valuable as the prayers for divine guidance in selecting a bishop. — APPLETON MORGAN.

Common sense is as inestimably valuable as the solar light. — WILLIAM WINTER.

Vanish.

Vanished like a trifling sigh.

— FRANKLIN P. ADAMS.

Vanished altogether, like the last spark on a burnt piece of paper. — HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN.

Vanish like a bursted bubble. — ANON.

Vanished like a guilty thing. — IBID.

Vanished like a pantomime demon. — IBID.

Vanished like a pie. — IBID.

Vanished like a Titanic world of spectres. — IBID.

Like a vain dream . . . vanish'd hence, we know not how. — IBID.

Vanishing, like eerie bubbles, on the rough, tried sea of care. — IBID.

Vanishing like noxious exhalations. — IBID.

Vanish like the figments of a dream. — IBID.

Vanish like the mist in the morning. — IBID.

Vanish like a ghost before the sun. — P. J. BAILEY.

Vanished like the furrow cut by a ship's keel in the sea. — BALZAC.

Vanished like dew before the morning sun. — GEORGE BEATTIE.

All vanished, like a vision vain. — EMILY BRONTË.

Vanished like a fairy. — E. B. BROWNING.

Vanished like a corpse-light from a grave. — BYRON.

Vanished like dawn to the daylight — GIOSUÈ CARDUCCI.

Vanishes, as is his wont, too like an Ignis Fatuus, leaving the dark still darker. — CARLYLE.

Vanished, like a ghost at cock-crowing. — IBID.

Vanish like a shot. — GIOVANNI BATTISTA CASTI.

Vanishing as flies a dream. — JOHN CLARE.

Vanish'd like dew-drops from the spray. — W. G. CLARK.

Passed away
As Fairies vanish at the break of day.
— HARTLEY COLERIDGE.

Vanished away, like spectres. — DICKENS.

Vanish like a breath. — IBID.

Vanished like a discontented fairy. — IBID.

Vanish . . . as easily as an eel into sand. — SIR A. CONAN DOYLE.

Gradually vanished like the receding hill-tops. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Vanish as mist before the sun. — FLAUBERT.

Colors, like the rainbow, ever vanished. — GILES FLETCHER.

Vanished like an empty shade. — PHINEAS FLETCHER.

Vanished like a beautiful evening cloud. — ARNE GARBORG.

Vanished like the shades of night upon the burst of a glorious morning in July. — WILLIAM GODWIN.

Vanish like an echo or a dream. — GOETHE.

Vanish, as by the waving of an enchanter's wand. — HAWTHORNE.

Vanish, like a glimmering light, that comes we know not whence, and goes we know not whither. — IBID.

Vanish like ephemeral things. — IBID.

Vanish out of life as completely as if . . . he lay at the bottom of the sea. — IBID.

Vanished like a baleful star. — P. H. HAYNE.

Vanish — continued.

Vanished like an empty dream. —
HEINRICH HEINE.

Vanished . . . like the shadow of a cloud. — HOOD.

Vanished like the enchanted castle on the approach of the conqueror.
— FRANK HORRIDGE.

Vanished like the beautiful sparkling hoarfrost. — HUGO.

Vanish together, as a dream of morning flies. — IBID.

Vanish like a fleeting dream,
The shadow of a chariot, or flash of sword. — IBID.

Vanished like the fleeting forms drawn in an evening cloud. — RICHARD JAGO.

All vanish as you shall vanish, like a bubble thrown up from the deep. — LOUIS KOSSUTH.

She vanished like the lightning's sudden gleam. — LAMARTINE.

Vanished like a fleet of cloud, like a passing trumpet-blast, are those splendors of the past. — LONGFELLOW.

Vanish . . . like the mist of the lake. — JAMES MACPHERSON.

Vanished . . . like the body in the tomb. — D. F. MCCARTHY.

Vanished . . . like the day branch in the fire. — IBID.

Like the dreams of the Blind, Vanish the glories and pomps of the earth in the wind.

— JAMES CLARENCE MANGAN.

Vanish like a dew-drop in a rose.
— GERALD MASSEY.

Vanish like a view caught out of darkness by lightning. — GEORGE
MEREDITH.

Vanished, like a blasted thing. —
DONALD G. MITCHELL.

Vanish like gossamers of autumn
eve. — MISS MULOCK.

Vanished like the feathery snow in summer's running brooks. — MRS.
NORTON.

Vanished like a mist that melts on the sunny hill. — OSSIAN.

Vanished like a scene of enchantment. — JANE PORTER.

Vanished, like the airy fabric of an Eastern tale. — PRESCOTT.

Vanished, like a shadow fled. — EDNA D. PROCTOR.

He vanishes like a man who has caused his property to be snatched from a swindler. — OSMANLI PROV-ERB.

Vanished, like the writing from the sand. — T. BUCHANAN READ.

Like the swift shadows of Noon, like the dreams of the blind,
Vanish the glories and pomps of the earth in the wind.

— FRIEDRICH RÜCKERT.

Vanished from our eyes, like sunbeam on the billow cast. — SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Vanisheth as smoke from Ætna.
— SHAKESPEARE.

RICHARD H. STODDARD.

Vanish away like smoke. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Vanish like a shooting star. — JOHN TOBIN.

Vanished like a mere soap-bubble.
— JOSEF K. TYL.

Vanish — continued.

Vanished . . . like a feathered shaft
fræ a yeoman's bow. — DAVID VEDDER.

Evanished like a blink
Of starlight ere the mind can think.
— FRANK WATERS.

Vanished, like a rush
Of self-consuming flame.
— ROBERT K. WEEKS.

Light as a sunbeam glides along the hills
She vanished. — WORDSWORTH.

Vanity.

Vanity acts like a woman — they both think they lose something when love or praise is accorded to another.
— BALZAC.

Vaprous.

Vaprous as a witch's cauldron. —
DICKENS.

Variable.

Variable as a shadow. — ANON.

Variable as color. — C. C. COLTON.

Variable as the weather. — FROUDE.

Variable as flickering flames. —
JAMES MONTGOMERY.

O, woman! . . . variable as the shade,
By the light quivering aspen made.
— SIR WALTER SCOTT

Varied.

Varied as the day. — ANON.

Varied as nature. — IBID.

In France, political principles are as varied as a restaurant bill of fare. —
BALZAC.

Varied as humanity. — DUMAS, FILS.

Varied as the shapes of nothingness.
— JOSÉ ECHEGARAY.

Varied as varying Nature's ways. —
WHITTIER.

Various.

Various as the words we speak. —
ANON.

Their aims as various, as the roads they take in journeying thro' life. —
ROBERT BLAIR.

Various as woman's will. — HENRY BROOKE.

Various as our palates. — ROBERT
BURTON.

Various as the voices of the wind.
— HARTLEY COLERIDGE.

Various as flowers on unfrequented plains. — CONGREVE.

Various as the hues of a rainbow. —
POE.

Various as human life. — SAMUEL ROGERS.

Like nature various. — RICHARD SAVAGE.

Various as an April day. — JOHN
SCOTT.

Various as the weather. — SIR
RICHARD STEELE.

Various as the moon. — ISAAC WATTS.

Vary.

Ever varies, she can pass from gay to severe, from fancy to science — quick as thought passes from the dance of a leaf, from the tint of a rainbow, to the theory of motion, the problem of light. — BULWER-LYTTON.

The color also of this mixture varies in proportion to its degrees of heat and coldness ; as a burning coal, when it is hot, shines ; and when it is cold, looks black. — ROBERT BURTON.

Vary like the rainbow's hue. —
BYRON.

Vast.

Vast as all heaven. — WILFRED S.
BLUNT.

Vast as all space. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Vast — continued.

Vast as cathedrals. — DAUDET.

Vast as Phœbus on his burning wheels. — O. W. HOLMES.

Vast as the mid bulk of a roof-tree's beam. — SWINBURNE.

Vaulted.

Vaulted like rebounding hail. — COLERIDGE.

Vaulted, like a balloon or kite. — JOHN TRUMBULL.

Veer.

Veers and swings,
Like an homing swallow with night-fall in her wings.

— BLISS CARMAN.

Veered like changing memories. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Veer
As the storm shifts of the tempestuous year.

— SWINBURNE.

Vehement.

Vehement as party spleen. — SYDNEY MUNDEN.

Veiled.

Veiled like noontide stars. — AUBREY DE VERE.

Thy beauty lies,
Veiled like a violet nestling in the moss.

— CLAYTON HAMILTON.

Veiled like a nun. — T. BUCHANAN READ.

Venice.

Venice is like a melancholy face of a former beauty who has ceased to rouge, or wipe away traces of her old arts. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Venomous.

Venymous as a snake. — "BOKE OF MAYD EMLYN."

More venomous than the asp or the blue spider. — HUGO.

Venture.

I have ventur'd,

Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,

This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth : my high-blown pride

At length broke under me; and now has left me,

Wearry and old with service, to the mercy

Of a rude stream, that must forever hide me. — SHAKESPEARE.

Verse.

A sweete verse is that which, like a dish with a delicate Sauce, invites the Reader to taste, euen against his will.
— HENRY PEACHAM.

Vertical.

Vertical like a stake. — CHARLES NODIER.

Vexed.

Vexed like a morning eagle, lost and weary,
And purblind amid foggy midnight wolds. — KEATS.

Must I be vexed like the nightly bird,
Whose sight is loathsome to all winged fowls. — MARLOWE.

Vibrate.

Vibrated, like a coffee mill in operation. — ANON.

Vibrate like a soft musical note. — BALZAC.

Vibrating
Like some becalmed bark beneath the burst

Of Heaven's immediate thunder.

— COLERIDGE.

Felt all her being vibrate as if a violin bow were drawn over her nerves.
— FLAUBERT.

Vice.

Vices, like beasts, are fond of none but those that feed them. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

Vice — continued.

Vice, like disease, floats in the atmosphere. — WILLIAM HAZLITT.

The vices operate like age, — bring on disease before its time, and in the prime of youth, leave the character broken and exhausted. — JUNIUS.

Vice leaves repentance in the soul like an ulcer in the flesh which is always scratching and lacerating itself. — MONTAIGNE.

Every great vice is like a pike in a pond, that devours virtues and lesser vices. — SIR THOMAS OVERBURY.

He that is deeply engaged in vice, is like a man laid fast in a bag, who, by a faint and lazy struggling to get out, does but spend his strength to no purpose, and sinks himself the deeper in it: the only way is, by a resolute and vigorous effort to spring out, if possible, at once. — JOHN TILLOTSON.

Vice-President.

The Vice-President of the United States is like a man in a cataleptic state: he can not speak; he can not move; he suffers no pain, and yet he is perfectly conscious of everything that is going on about him. — THOMAS RILEY MARSHALL.

Vicious.

As vicious
As any feend that lith in helle adoun.
— CHAUCER.

Victorious.

Victorious like the crest of Mars. — ANON.

Victory.

Triumphant in victories lyke the Palme tree, fruitfull in hir age lyke the Vyne, in all ages prosperous, to all men gracious, in all places glorious: so that there be no ende of hir praise, vntil the ende of all flesh. — LYLY.

Vigilant.

Vigilant as the stars. — ANON.

Vigilant as a cat to steal cream. — SHAKESPEARE.

Vigorous.

Vigorous as fire. — JOHN POMFRET.

Vile.

Wealth vile, as the dross upon the molten gold. — AKENSIDE.

Vindictive.

Vindictive as Philip II. — ANON.

Vindictive as a parrot. — BULWER-LYTTON.

More vindictive than jealous love. — SHAKESPEARE.

Violent.

Violent as a river, swollen with rain, rushes from the mountain. — ANON.

Violent as botel in the spence [store-room]. — CHAUCER.

Violent as steam. — C. C. COLTON.

Violent as hunger. — WILLIAM ROWLEY.

Violent as poison. — VANCE THOMPSON.

Virgin.

Virgins are like the fair flow'r in its lustre,

Which in the garden enamels the ground,

Near it the bees in play flutter and cluster,

And gaudy butterflies frolic around.

But when once plucked 'tis no longer alluring,

To Convent-garden 'tis sent (as yet sweet),

There fades and shrinks, and grows past all enduring,

Rots, stinks, and dies and is trod under feet. — JOHN GAY.

Virginity.

Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion. — SHAKESPEARE.

Virtue.

Virtue, like the sun, retains its splendence, though frequently obscured by clouds. — ANON.

Virtue is like a rich stone, best plain set ; and surely virtue is best in a body that is comely, though not of delicate features, and that hath rather dignity of presence than beauty of aspect. — BACON.

Virtue is like precious odors, most fragrant when they are incensed, or crushed ; for prosperity doth best discover vice, but adversity doth best discover virtue. — IBID.

Virtue is like health, the harmony of the whole man. — CARLISLE.

Like other plants, virtue will not grow unless its roots be hidden, buried from the eye of the sun. — IBID.

Virtue and learning, like gold, have their intrinsic value ; but if they are not polished, they certainly lose a great deal of their lustre ; and even polished brass will pass upon more people than rough gold. — CHESTERFIELD.

The pleasure of a fine woman is like that of her own virtue — not so much in the thing, as the reputation of having it. — COLLEY CIBBER.

Virtue is like the polar star, which keeps its place, and all stars turn towards it. — CONFUCIUS.

My virtue, like a string, wound up by art

To the same sound, when yours was touched, took part,

At distance shook, and trembled at my heart. — DRYDEN.

The virtues, like the muses, are always seen in groups. A good principle was never found solitary in any breast. — JANE PORTER.

The virtues are lost in interest, as rivers are lost in the sea. — ROCHEFOUCAULD.

Virtue, like the clear heavens, is without clouds. — SIR PHILIP SIDNEY.

Virtues and discourses are like friends, necessary in all fortunes ; but those are the best which are friends in our sadnesses, and support us in our sorrows and sad accidents : and in this sense, no man that is virtuous can be friendless. — JEREMY TAYLOR.

Virtuous.

Virtuous men . . . like some herbs and spices that give not out their sweet smell till they be broken or crushed. — BACON.

Virtuous as holy truth. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Virtuous as a briar-rose. — EMERSON.

A truly virtuous person is like good metal, — the more he is fired, the more he is fined ; the more he is opposed, the more he is approved. Wrongs may well try him and touch him, but they cannot imprint on him any false stamp. — RICHELIEU.

Visible.

Visible like evanescent grave-lights. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Visitors.

(See also Guests.)

Fares with him as it does with a tranquil lake, which is generally disturbed by visitors. — R. R. MADDEN.

BURNE.

Voice . . .

That rings athwart the sea whence no man steers

Like joy-bells crossed with death-bells in our ears. — IBID.

Bernhardt's . . . voice is like a thing detachable from herself, a thing which she takes in her hands like a musical instrument, playing on the stops cunningly with her fingers. — ARTHUR
SYMONS.

A great voice, as of a trumpet. —
NEW TESTAMENT.

I have heard a voice as of a woman in travail, and the anguish as of her that bringeth forth her first child. —
OLD TESTAMENT.

The tones of her voice, like the music which seems

Murmur'd low in our ears by the Angel of dreams. — WHITTIER.

A fall of voice,
Regretted like the nightingale's last note. — WORDSWORTH.

an idiot's brain. — P. J. BAILEY.

Waiting, like a lamp-post. — R. D.
BLACKMORE.

Thy pleasant youth, a little while withdrawn,

Waits on the horizon of a brighter
sky ;

Waits, like the morn, that folds her wings and hides

Till the slow stars bring back her dawning hour ;

Waits, like the vanished spring, that slumbering bides

Her own sweet time to waken bud and flower.

— WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Idly wait
Like lovers at the swinging gate.

A widow is like a frigate of which the first captain has been shipwrecked. — ALPHONSE KARR.

Wife.

A cigar is like a wife!
Put it up to your lips, and light it;
When you've learned to do it right, it
Adds a certain zest to life.
Mind you keep on puffing it,
Or it's out, and can't be lit.
Ah, the aroma! Ah, the glow!
Will I have one? Thank you, No.

— ALEISTER CROWLEY.

Wipe.

My life away like a vast sponge of fate.
— KEATS.

I will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it, and turning it upside down. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Wisdom.

Wisdom is like electricity. There is no permanently wise man, but men capable of wisdom, who, being put into certain company, or other favorable conditions, become wise for a short time, as glasses rubbed acquire electric power for a while. — EMERSON.

Wisdom which is only theoretical and never put into practise is like a double rose; its color and its perfume are delightful, but it withers away and leaves no seed. — SCHOPENHAUER.

Wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Wise.

Wise as Minerva. — ANON.

Wise as Solomon. — IBID.

As wise as the men of Gotham, who went to build a wall about the wood to keep out the cuckoo. — IBID.

Wise as her mother's apron string.
— NICHOLAS UDALL.

Wish.

Wishes, like castles in the air, are inexpensive and not taxable. — SAM SLICK.

Wishes, like painted landscapes, best delight,
Whilst distance recommends them to the sight.

Placed far off, they beautiful appear;
But show their coarse and nauseous colours, near.

— THOMAS YALDEN.

Wistfully.

Wistfully,
Like to some maiden spirit pausing pale,

New-wing'd, yet fain to sail
Above the serene gulf to where a bridegroom soul Calls o'er the soft horizon.

— SIDNEY LANIER.

Wit.

Wit is like a ghost, much more often talked of than seen. — ANON.

Wit kills the soul, as argument kills reason. — BALZAC.

Full of wit as a ginger-bottle is of pop. — J. R. BARTLETT'S "DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS."

Wits, like Physicians, never can agree,
When of a different Society.

— APHERA BEHN.

His wit is like fire in a flint, that is nothing while it is in, and nothing again as soon as it is out. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

Wit — continued.

All wit and fancy, like a diamond,
The more exact and curious 'tis ground,
Is forc'd for every carat to abate,
As much in value as it wants in weight.

— IBID.

Wit's like a luxuriant vine ;
Unless to virtue's prop it join,
Firm and erect toward Heaven bound, Though it with beauteous leaves and pleasant fruit be crown'd
It lies, deformed and rotting, on the ground. — COWLEY.

Wit, like fierce-claret, when't begins to pall,
Neglected lies, as 't of no use at all ;
But, in its full perfection of decay, Turns vinegar, and comes again in play. — EARL OF DORSET.

Wit, like hunger, will be with great difficulty restrained from falling into vice and ignorance, where is great plenty and variety of food. — HENRY FIELDING.

True wit is like the brilliant stone,
Dug from the Indian mine,
Which boasts two different powers in
one,
To cut as well as shine.
— "GRUB-STREET JOURNAL," 1730.

Homebred wits are like home-made wines, sweet, luscious, spiritless, without body, and ill to keep. — *JULIUS C.
HARE.*

Wit, like an insect clamb'ring up a wall, Mounts to one point, and then of course must fall,
No wiser, if its pains proceed, than end,
And all its journey to descend.
— WALTER HARTE.

Wits, like misers, always covet more. — IBID.

Wit is like love — the softest is the best. — AARON HILL.

Wits, like drunken men with swords, are apt to draw their steel upon their best acquaintances. — DOUGLAS JER-ROLD.

Wit, like money, bears an extra value when rung down immediately it is wanted. Men pay severely who require credit. — IBID.

Wit, like every other power, has its boundaries. Its success depends on the aptitude of others to receive impressions ; and that as some bodies, indissolute by heat, can set the furnace and crucible at defiance, there are minds upon which the rays of fancy may be pointed without effect, and which no fire of sentiment can agitate or exalt. — DR. JOHNSON.

Bring all wits to the Rack, whose Noses are euer like Swine spoyling and rooting vp the Muses Gardens, and their whole Bodies like Moles, as blindly working vnder Earth to cast any, the least, hilles vpon Vertue.
— BEN JONSON.

For wits, like adjectives, are known to cling to that which stands alone. —
ROBERT LLOYD.

Nor make to dangerous wit a vain pre-
tense,
But wisely rest content with modest sense ;
For wit, like wine, intoxicates the brain,
Too strong for feeble women to sus-tain :
Of those who claim it more than half have none ;
And half of those who have it are undone. — LORD LYTTELTON.

Wit and wisdom differ ; Wit is upon the sudden turn, Wisdom is in bringing about ends. Nature must be the ground-work of Wit and Art ; otherwise whatever is done will prove but Jack-Pudding's work. Wit must grow like Fingers. If it be taken from others, 'tis like Plums stuck upon black Thorns ; there they are for a while, but they come to nothing. — SELDEN.

Wit . . . blunt as the fencer's foils.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Wit — continued.

One wit, like a knuckle of ham in soup, gives a zest and flavor to the dish ; but more than one serves only to spoil the pottage. — SMOLLETT.

Some men's wit is like a dark lantern, which serves their own turn and guides them their own way, but is never known (according to the Scripture phrase) either to shine forth before men or to glorify their Father in heaven. — POPE.

As in smooth oil the razor best is whet,
So wit is by politeness keenest set.

— YOUNG.

Wither.

Withered like a Normandy pippin.
— ANON.

Withered like a rose without light.
— IBID.

Like the rainbow in a summer shower,
Or gaudy poppy, of fugacious bloom,
'Tis thine to flourish for a transient hour,

Then, withered, sink in dark oblivious tomb. — ALEXANDER BALFOUR.

Her white soul withered in the mire
As paper shrivels in the fire.

— STEPHEN VINCENT BENÉT.

Wither away like a flower ungathered in a garden. — ROBERT BUR-TON.

Withered as an autumn leaf. —
WILKIE COLLINS.

Withered like a plucked flower ready to be flung on some rotting heap of rubbish. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Withered and pale as an old pauper.
— DICKENS.

Withers like debauchery. — DUMAS,
PÈRE.

Withers, like a palm
Cut by an Indian for its juicy balm.

— KEATS.

Withered like a leaf in the breath of an oven. — FRITZ H. LUDLOW.

Withered like some short-lived flower. — MARLOWE.

Withered like an old apple-john. —
SHAKESPEARE.

Like a blasted sapling, withered up. — IBID.

Withered like green corn under the hot winds of the unirrigated American desert. — JOHN R. SPEARS.

Withered like hay. — SPENSER.

Wither like a dying rose. — FRANK L. STANTON.

Withered like stars in the morning.
— ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

Withered all our strength like flame.
— SWINBURNE.

My heart is smitten, and withered like grass. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Wither as the green herb. — IBID.

Withered like an apple that the snow Finds still upon the bough.

— L. FRANK TOOKER.

Withered, as in death congealed.
— TUPPER.

The egoist withers like a solitary barren tree. — IVAN S. TURGENEV.

Withered as if struck by a blight.
— VOLTAIRE.

Wither like a thing of earth. —
ALARIC A. WATTS.

Withheld.

Withheld as things forbidden. —
SWINBURNE.

Within.

Within another, like the ivory balls in a Chinese carving. — DICKENS.

Witless.

Witless as a jackdaw. — THOMAS SHADWELL.

Witness.

Witnesses, like watches, go
Just as they're set, too fast or slow.

— SAMUEL BUTLER

See also Wit.) Witty.

Witty as a Frenchman. — ANON.

Witty as a roll of ten dollar bills.
— IBID.

Witty as Diana. — IBID.

Witty as two fools and a madman.
— IBID.

Witty men commit the most fatal errors, as the strongest horses make the most dangerous stumbles. — IBID.

Wizen.

An old man, wizen as a dried plaice. — CAMILLE LEMONNIER.

Wizen, like a small dry tree. — SWINBURNE.

Woman.

A painted woman is like a gilded pill; fools admire the former, and children the latter, for the disguise.
— ANON.

A woman, like a melon, is hard to choose. — IBID.

Women are like melons: it is only after having tasted them that we know whether they are good or not.
— IBID.

Pretty women are like sovereigns: one flatters them only through interest. — IBID.

Woman, like good wine, is a sweet poison. — IBID.

Women, like the plants in woods, derive their softness and tenderness from the shade. — IBID.

Most women proceed like the flea,
— by leaps and jumps. — BALZAC.

Women, like birds, are shy of a single spring; perplex them by a choice, their heads become giddy, they flutter, and drop into the trap.
— ROBERT M. BELL.

Women, like conjurers' tricks, are miracles to the ignorant. — IBID.

Women, like loadstones, lose their attraction, when they suffer the rust of a fretful temper to eat away their brightness. — IBID.

Women are like wasps in their anger. Not so, for wasps leave their stings, but women never leave their tongues behind them. — NICHOLAS BRETON.

Pleasant at first she is, like Dioscorides' Rhododaphne, that fair plant to the eye, but poison to the taste, the rest as bitter as wormwood in the end and sharp as a two-edged sword.
— ROBERT BURTON.

Your women
Are like new plays, which self-complacent authors Offer at some eight hundred royals each,
But which, when once they're tried,
you purchase dear
Eight hundred for a royal.

— CALDERON.

Women, and men who are like women, mind the binding more than the book. — CHESTERFIELD.

Women are like tricks by sleight of hand,
Which to admire, we should not understand. — CONGREVE.

Women are like medlars, no sooner ripe than rotten. — THOMAS DEKKER.

Beautiful peaches are not always the best flavored; neither are handsome women the most amiable. — W. S. DOWNEY.

The happiest women, like the happiest nations, have no history.
— GEORGE ELIOT.

Women are like pictures; of no value in the hands of a fool, till he hears men of sense bid high for the purchase. — FARQUHAR.

The womenfolk are like the books, — most pleasing to the eye, Whereon if anybody looks he feels disposed to buy.

— EUGENE FIELD.

Woman — continued.

Woman is like a pot of oil, and a man a burning coal. A wise man will not put the oil and the fire together. — HITOPADESA.

Women, with their tongues, like polar needles, ever on the jar.
— O. W. HOLMES.

You look at a star from two motives, because it is luminous — and because it is impenetrable. You have at your side a softer radiance and a greater mystery — woman. — HUGO.

A fine woman, like a fortified town . . . demands a regular siege ; and we must even allow her the honors of war, to magnify the greatness of our victory. — HUGH KELLY.

I have been servitor in a college at Salamanca, and read philosophy with the doctors ; where I found that a woman, in all times, has been observed to be an animal hard to understand, and much inclined to mischief. Now as an animal is always an animal, and a captain is always a captain, so a woman is always a woman ; whence it is that a certain Greek says, her head is like a bank of sand ; or, as another, a solid rock ; or, according to a third, a dark lanthorn : and so, as the head is the head of the body ; and that body without a head, is like a head without a tail ; and that where there is neither head nor tail, 'tis a very strange body ; so, I say, a woman is, by comparison, do you see ? (for nothing explains things like comparisons). I say by comparison, as Aristotle has often said before me, one may compare her to the raging sea ; for as the sea, when the wind rises, knits its brows like an angry bull, and that waves mount upon rocks, rocks mount upon waves, that porpoises leap like trouts, and whale skip about like gudgeons ; that ships roll like beer-barrels, and mariners pray like saints ; just so, I say, a woman — a woman, I say, just so, when her reason is ship-wrecked upon her passion, and the hulk of her understanding lies thumping against the rock of her fury ; then it is, I say, that by certain emotions, which — um — cause, as one may suppose, a sort of convulsive — yes — hurricanes — um — like — in short, a woman is the devil. — THOMAS KING.

Hard is the fortune that your sex attends ;

Women, like princes, find few real friends :

And who approach them their own ends pursue ;

Lovers and ministers are seldom true.
— LORD LYTTELTON.

A woman is like the ivy, which grows luxuriantly whilst it clings to some sturdy tree, but never thrives if it is separated from it. — MOLIÈRE.

A woman who loves to be at the window is like a bunch of grapes at the wayside. — ITALIAN PROVERB.

A woman possessing nothing but outward advantages is like a flower without fragrance, a tree without fruit.
— REGNIER.

Women are like thermometers, which, on a sudden application of heat, sink at first a few degrees, as preliminary to rising a good many. — RICHTER.

Women, like summer storms, awhile are cloudy,

Burst out in thunder and impetuous show'rs ;

But straight the sun of beauty dawns abroad,

And all the fair horizon is serene.

— NICHOLAS ROWE.

Women, like things, at second hand

Do half their value lose ;

But, whilst all courtship they withstand,

May at their pleasure choose.

— SIR CHARLES SEDLEY.

Woman — continued.

Women use lovers as they do cards ;
they play with them awhile, and, when they have got all they can of them, throw them away, call for new ones, and then perhaps lose by the new ones
all they got by the old ones. — POPE.

Women are as roses, whose fair flower

Being once displayed, doth fall that very hour. — SHAKESPEARE.

A woman that is like a German clock,
Still a-repairing, ever out of frame,
And never going right, being a watch,
But being watch'd that it may still go right! — IBID.

A woman mov'd is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of
beauty;
And while it is so, none so dry and thirsty.

Will deign to sip or touch one drop of
it. — IBID.

Woman the other world resembles well,
In whose looks Heav'n is, in whose breast is Hell.

— SIR EDWARD SHERBURNE.

A continual dropping in a very rainy day and a contentious woman are alike. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Women are like curst dogs : civility keeps them tied all day-time, but they are let loose at midnight ; then they do most good, or most mischief. —
JOHN WEBSTER.

Woman is like the reed that bends to every breeze, but breaks not in the tempest. — WHATELY.

You say, sir, once a wit allow'd a woman to be like a cloud, accept a simile as soon between a woman and the moon ; for let mankind say what they will, the sex are heavenly bodies still. — JAMES C. WHYTE.

Women are like minors ; they live on their expectations. — OSCAR WILDE.

Women, like old soldiers, more nimble execute than they resolve. — WYCHERLEY.

Wonderful.

As wonderful as calves with five legs. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Wonderful as a starlit sky. —
RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

Wondrous.

Wondrous as a dream. — FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE.

Wooden.

As wooden as the shoe on a Dutch peasant. — ANON.

Words.

Words . . . as sweet as founts that murmur low,
To one who in the deserts drear,
With parched tongue moves faint and slow.

— ANCIENT BALLAD OF HINDUSTAN.

Sweet words are like honey ; a little may refresh, but too much gluts
the stomach. — ANNE BRADSTREET.

Words are like money ; there is nothing so useless, unless when in actual use. — SAMUEL BUTLER (1835-1902).

Burning Words, like so many full-formed Minervas, issuing amid flame and splendor from Jove's head. —
CARLYLE.

Words, like glass, darken whatever they do not help us to see. — JOSEPH JOUBERT.

There comes Emerson first, whose rich words, every one,
Are like gold nails in temples to hang trophies on. — LOWELL.

His words, like so many nimble and airy servitors, trip about him at command. — MILTON.

Words are like leaves ; and where they most abound,
Much fruit of sense beneath is rarely found. — POPE.

Words — continued.

But obscene Words, too grosse to move Desire,
Like heaps of Fuel do but choak the Fire.

That Author's Name has undeserved
Praise

Who pall'd the Appetite he meant to raise. — LORD ROCHESTER.

These words, like daggers, enter in mine ears. — SHAKESPEARE.

My words hang together like feathers in the wind. — SKELTON.

Thy words, like genial showers to the parch'd earth, refresh my languid soul. — SMOLLETT.

With words as with sunbeams, — the more they are condensed, the deeper they burn. — SOUTHEY.

My words are like spoken roses. —
SWINBURNE.

With all the rhymes like stars above
you,
And all the words like flowers.
— IBID.

Words like swords and thunder-clouded creeds. — IBID.

A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver. — OLD TESTAMENT.

Pleasant words are as an honeycomb, sweet to the soul, and health to the bones. — IBID.

The words of a talebearer are as wounds, and they go down into the innermost parts of the belly. — IBID.

Work.

Work like a horse. — ANON.

Worked like a fury. — IBID.

Worked like a Trojan. — IBID.

Worked like a miner in a landslide.
— IBID.

Work like beavers. — IBID.

Working like the gills of a fish. —
O. HENRY.

Work like a galley slave. — LEAN'S "COLLECTANEA."

Work like a brick. — LYLY.

World.

The world is like yon children's merry-go-round ; what men admire are carriages and hobbies. — P. J. BAILEY.

The world is like the shifting scenes of a panorama : ten years convert the population of the schools into men and women, and make and mar fortunes ; twenty years converts infants into lovers, fathers, and mothers, and decide men's fortunes ; thirty years turn fascinating beauties into bearable old women, and convert lovers into grandfathers ; forty years change the face of all society ; and fifty years will, alas ! find us in a world of which we know nothing, and to which we are unknown. — FROUDE.

The world is like a great staircase, some go up and others go down. —
HIPONAX.

This world is like carrion, round which are thousands of vultures :
this one strikes that one with his claws, that one darts at this one with his beak, till at length they all fly away, and all that remains is the carcass. — PILPAY.

The world is like a tree trunk full of ants ; he who comes into it knows nothing ; he who goes from it, comes not again. — OSMANLI PROVERB.

Everything in the world is like a hollow nut ; there is little kernel anywhere, and when it does exist, it is still more rare to find it in the shell.
— SCHOPENHAUER.

Worlds on worlds are rolling ever
From creation to decay,
Like the bubbles on a river,
Sparkling, bursting, borne away.
— SHELLEY.

World — continued.

The World is not unfitly compared to a fishing-net, the end of the world to be the drawing up of the nets. While the nets are down, there is nothing said to be caught; for the nets may break, and the fish escape: But at the end of the world, when the nets are drawn up, it will then evidently appear, what every man hath caught. — JOHN SPENCER'S "THINGS NEW AND OLD; OR, A STORE-HOUSE OF SIMILES," 1658.

Worn.

Worn down . . . like a shape in a shroud. — ARABIAN NIGHTS.

Worn like a cloth
Gnawn into rags by the devouring moth. — — GEORGE SANDYS.

Worried.

Worried as a toad under a harrow.
— ANON.

Worried,
Like a tempest-driven bark.
— T. BUCHANAN READ.

Worry.

Worry as a wolf a lamb. — ANON.

Worship.

Worship me like an Idol. — ROBERT BURTON.

Worthless.

Worthless as withered weeds, or idlest froth amid the boundless main.
— EMILY BRONTË.

Worthless all as sands. — SWIN-
BURNE.

Worthless as the lightest falling leaf. — CELIA THAXTER.

Wound.

Wounds . . . show
Like graves i' the holy church-yard.
— SHAKESPEARE.

Woven.

Woven like winter serpents in a pit. — AMBROSE BIERCE.

Woven as raiment. — SWINBURNE.

Woven . . . like bubbles in a frozen pond. — WILLIAM B. YEATS.

Wrap.

Wrapped, as in a mist. — ANON.

All wrapped up in flannel, like a race horse. — EUGÈNE BRIEUX.

Wrathful.

Wrathy as a militia officer on a training day. — J. R. BARTLETT'S
"DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS."

Wrathful as Justice in her earnest mood. — W. J. LINTON.

Wriggle.

Wiggles, as though she had the itch. — BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER.

Wriggle, like a screw. — SAMUEL BUTLER.

Wriggle in and out like an eel in a sandbag. — MIDDLETON.

Wriggling about like a mouse in the middle of a wall. — PLAUTUS.

Wriggle . . . like sleep struggling to wake up. — RABINDRANATH TAGORE.

Wrinkle.

Wrinkled as a raisin. — ANON.

His face wrinkled like an old parchment. — GEORGES ECKHOUD.

Wrinkled like a baked apple. —
NOKOLAI V. GOGOL.

Wrinkled like a fresh-blown poppy.
— ALFRED HAYES.

Wrinkled like a last year's apple.
— GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Wrinkles, like a Book
Of Vellam, at a fire.
— "MUSES RECREATION."

Writ.

Writs like wild-fowl, fly abroad,
And then return o'er cities, towns,
and hills,
With clients, like dried straws, between their bills.

— THOMAS MIDDLETON.

Write.

A witty writer is like a porcupine ; his quill makes no distinction between friend and foe. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Our writings are as so many dishes, our readers guests, our books like beauty, that which one admires, another rejects ; so are we approved as men's fancies are inclined. — ROBERT BURTON.

The writer, like the priest, must be exempted from secular labor. His work needs a frolic health : he must be at the top of his condition. — EMERSON.

Write like an angel (Goldsmith). — DAVID GARRICK.

Writing or printing is like shooting with a rifle ; you may hit your reader's mind, or miss it ; — but talking is like playing at a mark with the pipe of an engine ; if it is within reach, and you have time enough, you can't help hitting it. — O. W. HOLMES.

Clear writers, like clear fountains, do not seem so deep as they are ; the turbid looks most profound. — W. S. LANDOR.

Witty Writings, when directed to serve the good ends of Virtue and Religion, are like the Lights hung out in a Pharos, to guide the Mariners safe through dangerous Seas ; but the Brightness of those, that are impious or immoral, shines only to betray, and lead Men to Destruction. — LORD LYTTTELTON.

This much I have discovered, that it is in writing as in building, where, after all our schemes and calculations, we are mightily deceived in our accounts, and often forced to make use of any materials we can find that the works may be kept a-going. — SWIFT.

Writhe.

Writhe like Saint Laurent on the gridiron. — ANON.

Writhe like twisted locks. — IBID.

Writhe like the Pythian. — E. B. BROWNING.

Writhing o'er its task,
As heart-sick jesters weep behind the mask. — HOOD.

Writhe like a feather on the fire. — GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

Writhe like a worm on a hook. — CHARLES READE.

Writhe as a dragon by some great spell curbed and foiled. — WILLIAM WATSON.

YYawn.

Yawned much as a bored tiger does in the face of a philosophical student of savage manners in the zoölogical gardens. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Yawns like a grave in a cemetery. — HUGO.

Yawn'd like a gash on warrior's breast. — SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Yawn and stretch like a greyhound by the fireside. — VANBRUGH.

Yawning.

Yawning wide like the mouth of a cavern. — JOHN DENNIS.

Yawning destruction, deep as the grave. — CHARLES KISFALUDY.

Yawning, like some old crater rent anew. — THOMAS MOORE.

• Yawning — continued.

Yawning silently like an image. —
OCTAVE UZANNE.

Yearn.

Yearned as the parched land for summer's rain. — ANON.

Yearn'd as the captive toiling at escape. — BYRON.

Yearning, like the first fierce impulse into crime. — HOOD.

Yearning, like a swallow in the void.
— TRUMBULL STICKNEY.

Yearning as with child of death. —
SWINBURNE.

Yell.

Yelling like savages. — ANON.

Yolleden, as fendes doon in helle.
— CHAUCER.

Yelling like a maniac. — DUMAS,
PÈRE.

A discordant universal yell, like house-dogs howling at a dinner-bell.
— JOHN H. FRERE.

Yell like a wronged panther. —
ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

A yell as of wild beasts in their famine. — OUIDA.

Yelled like incarnate fiends. —
MICHAEL SCOTT.

Dire yell,

As when, by night and negligence, the
fire

Is spied in populous cities.

— SHAKESPEARE.

Yell'd out

Like syllable of dolour. — IBID.

Yelled like all-possessed. — SAM
SLICK.

Yelled as beasts of ravin. — SWIN-BURNE.

Yellow.

Yellow as a cat's eye. — ANON.

Yellow as a corpse. — IBID.

Yellow as a guinea. — IBID.

Yellow as a hopeless lover. —
ARABIAN NIGHTS.

She was as yellow as a quince. —
BALZAC.

Yellow as gamboge. — R. D. BLACK-
MORE.

Yellow like to fire. — E. B. BROWN-ING.

Yellow, like April bees. — C. S.
CALVERLEY.

As yelowe of hewe
As ony basyn scoured newe.

— CHAUCER.

Yellow as liquid honey. — D'AN-NUNZIO.

Yellow as jealousy. — ANTHONY
HAMILTON.

Yellow as saffron. — BRET HARTE.

Yellow as a Chinaman. — O. HENRY.

Yellow as cowslips. — JAMES HOGG.

Yellow as the amber. — HOOD.

Yellow as Nature, abetted by time.
— BETTINA VON HUTTEN.

Yellow and ill-fitting as the shuck on a dried cob. — KIPLING.

Yellow, like a lion's mane. — HENRY LUTTREL.

Yellow as jaundice. — GEORGE
MEREDITH.

Yellow as corn in the sun. — OUIDA.

Yellow as wood ashes. — HENRY M.
RIDEOUT.

Yaller — like you've saw custardpie with no crust. — JAMES WHIT-COMB RILEY.

Yellow, like ripe corn. — D. G.
ROSSETTI.

His face grew yellow as gamboge.
— HORACE SMITH.

Yellow as sulphur. — ROBERT LOUIS
STEVENSON.

Yellow as pestilence. — SWINBURNE.

As yellow as the blossom of the broom. — "MABINOIGION."

Yellow — continued.

Yellow like canned corn. — CAROLYN WELLS.

Yield.

Yielded like melted snow. — J. FENIMORE COOPER.

Yielded like the mist
Which eagles cleave, upmounting from their nests. — KEATS.

Yielded, like bruised limb to leech.
— GEORGE MEREDITH.

Yielding as light. — JOHN G. NEIHARDT.

Young.

Young as the hour of birth. — MATHILDE BLIND.

Young as Eve with nature's day-break in her face. — E. B. BROWNING.

Young as old Homer's song is young.
— GEORGE MEREDITH.

Young as morn. — MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

Young as Truth. — D. G. ROSSETTI.

Young as dawn. — SWINBURNE.

Youth.

Youth, like white paper, will take any impression. — ANON.

Youth is like green corn, all sap and promise. — IBID.

The rose, like ready youth, enticing stands,

And would be cropt if it might choose the hands.

— WILLIAM BROWNE.

Youth like genius gives its best at first. — CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

Youth, like spring-time, light and nimble,

Evanescent in its glee.

— HARTLEY COLERIDGE.

Youth is not like a new garment which we can keep fresh and fair by wearing sparingly ; youth, while we have it, we must wear daily ; and it will fast wear away. — JOHN FOSTER.

Youth is like those verdant forests tormented by winds : it agitates on every side the abundant gifts of nature, and some profound murmur always reigns in its foliage. — M. DE GUERIN.

Youth, like the aloe, blossoms but once, and its flower springs from the midst of thorns : but see with what strength and to what height the aloeflower rises over them. — W. S. LANDOR.

Blithe youth is like a smile,
So mirthful, and so brief.

— ROBERT NICHOLL.

Youth passes like the odour
From the white rose's cup
When the hot sun drinks up
The dew that overflowed her.

— C. G. ROSSETTI.

Youth like summer morn, age like winter weather,

Youth like summer brave, age like winter bare. — SHAKESPEARE.

Youthful.

Youthful as the month of May. —
ANON.

ZZeal.

Zealous, like a Quaker railing at lace. — ANON.

Zeal without humanity is like ship without a rudder, liable to be stranded at any moment. — OWEN FELTHAM.

Zeal without knowledge is like expedition to a man in the dark. — NEWTON.

Zigzag.

Zigzag like lightning. — SOUTHEY.

ADDENDA

Abandonment.

A final abandonment of pride that was like changing at the end of a dreadful day from tight boots to slippers. — HENRY JAMES.

Ability.

Some persons have ability enough, but it is like goods in the pieces ; they never make it up into anything. — GEORGE HEMBERT WESLEY.

Abnormal.

Abnormal as an eight-heart hand. — IBID.

Abominable.

Abominable as the man who is surly and sulky and snappish with a woman who is trying to please him. — ANON.

Abrupt.

Abrupt as cock-crow. — G. K. CHESTERTON.

Absorb.

Able to absorb punishment as open buds absorb the dew. — GRANTLAND RICE.

Absurd.

Absurd as a Hottentot marooned on an iceberg. — ANON.

Absurd as an Esquimaux pretending the desert is a sea of ice. — IBID.

Absurd as for a doctor to ask whether to give the ether before or after cutting off a man's leg. — IBID.

Absurd as mathematics without numbers. — IBID.

Absurd as to clap spurs into a wooden horse and expect him to gallop. — IBID.

Absurd as to say that a fox is the son of a gander. — IBID.

Absurd as to try to drive a windmill with a pair of bellows. — IBID.

Absurd as to try to keep the sea back with a pitchfork. — IBID.

Absurd as to give a boy some mystic treatise of the Middle Ages on alchemy to serve as a text-book in chemistry. — CHARLES ANTHON.

Absurd as to instruct a rooster in the laying of eggs. — HENRY L. MENCKEN.

For a man beyond forty to be daffy with love seems quite as absurd to me as for an archbishop to die of cholera morbus. — IBID.

Absurd as to expect harvest in the dead of winter. — ROBERT SOUTH.

Abuse.

Abuse, like other poisons, when administered in too strong a dose, is thrown off by the intended victim, and often relieves where it is intended to destroy. — ANON.

Acrimonious.

Acrimonious as post-mortems of the bridge table. — ANON.

Act.

To see Kean act was like reading Shakespeare by flashes of lightning. — S. T. COLERIDGE.

He acted [Hamlet] like a suffering plumber suicidal over his troubles with the I. W. W. — AMY LESLIE.

Acting, like playwriting, is lowering buckets into empty wells and drawing nothing up. — ALICE GERSTENBURG.

Action.

This play has no more action than a snake has hips. — ANON.

Active.

About as active as a left-over fly in January. — ANON.

Actors.

The public behaves to actors like love to warriors : it has no consideration for an old soldier. — SOPHIE ARNOULD.

Adapted.

About as well adapted to the purpose as a one-pronged fork for pitching hay. — HERMAN MELVILLE.

Adroit.

Adroit as a rhinoceros. — FRANKLIN P. ADAMS.

Advancing.

Advancing and receding like an automatic pistol. — VINCENTE BLASCO-IBÁÑEZ.

Adversity.

Adversity, like winter weather, is of use to kill those vermin which the summer of prosperity is apt to produce and nourish. — JOHN ARROWSMITH.

Advice.

Advice is like castor oil, — easy enough to give, but dreadful uneasy to take. — J. R. BARTLETT'S "DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS," 1877.

Gives her excellent advice, but it is a good deal like giving a child a dictionary to learn a language with. — HENRY JAMES.

Advice, like water, takes the form of the vessel it is poured into. — PUNCH, August 1, 1857.

Good advice is like a tight glove ; it fits the circumstances, and it does not fit other circumstances. — CHARLES READE.

Affections.

Affections are like slippers ; they will wear out. — EDGAR SALTUS.

Affluence.

A man in time of affluence is like unto a tree, Round which the folk collect as fruit thereon they see,
Till, when its burden it hath cast, they turn from it away,
Leave it to suffer heat and dust and all inclemency.
— "ARABIAN NIGHTS" (PAYNE).

Aggressive.

Aggressive as an elbow in the side.
— HENRY JAMES.

Agitation.

Producing the same violent agitation in the public mind that was excited in the proverbial ox when the fly lighted on its off horn. — HENRY MORFORD.

Aglow.

Aglow like the dream of a lover.
— NEWMAN HOWARD.

Agreeable.

Agreeable as an uninvited guest.
— ABE MARTIN.

Alike.

No more alike than an elephant and a giraffe. — ANON.

Allies.

Allies . . . are of the description of twins joined by a membrane. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Aloof.

Aloof as in prayer. — CAROLINE HAZARD.

Alternately.

Alternately, like the layers of bread and meat in a plate of sandwiches.
— DICKENS.

Ambition.

Ambition is like a treadmill ; it knows no limits ; you no sooner get to the end of it than you begin again. — JOSH BILLINGS.

American.

American as corn on the cob. — ANON.

American as Yankee nutmegs or the Pilgrim Fathers. — GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN.

American as a catcher's mit. — GEORGE JEAN NATHAN.

Amorous.

Amorous as Emma Bovary. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Amorous, as the first of May. — TENNYSON.

Anachronistic.

Anachronistic as a Watteau shepherdess at a clambake. — LAWRENCE GILMAN.

Anarchist.

An anarchist is like a man who throws an egg in an electric fan. He doesn't stop the fan, but he smears the place up some. — ANON.

Anarchy.

Anarchy reigning is like stagnation stirring, cold burning, or heat freezing. — PUNCH, 1856.

Anger.

Anger, like grief, is a mark of weakness ; both mean being wounded and wincing. — MARCUS AURELIUS.

Wise anger is like fire from the flint ; there is a great ado to bring it out ; and when it does come, it is out again immediately. — MATTHEW HENRY.

Angling.

You will find angling to be like the virtue of humility, which has a calmness of spirit and a world of other blessings attending upon it. — IZAAK WALTON.

Angry.

Angry and choleric men are as ungrateful and unsociable as thunder and lightning, being in themselves all storms and tempests ; but quiet and easy natures are like fair weather, welcome to all, and acceptable to all men : they gather together what the others disperse, and reconcile all whom the others incense : as they have the good will and the good wishes of all other men, so they have the full possession of themselves, have all their own thoughts at peace, and enjoy quiet and ease in their own fortune, how strait soever it may be. — EARL OF CLAREN-ENDON.

Animated.

About as animated as a dummy. — ANON.

Ankles.

The young lady has a pair of ankles like chianti bottles. — GEORGE JEAN NATHAN.

Annoying.

Annoying as a fly speck in a column of figures. — ANON.

Antique.

Antique as the clown at the circus. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

True antique as family heirlooms. — CHARLES WAGNER.

Apart.

As far apart as the atheists who claim there is no soul, and the Christian Scientists who declare that there is no body. — ANON.

Appalling.

Appalling as a great fat mother-in-law. — R. S. SURTEES.

Apparent.

About as apparent as a microbe's eyebrow. — ANON.

Apparent to the naked eye as the Woolworth Building. — ROBERT CORTES HOLLIDAY.

Appetizing.

Appetizing as a boiled cocktail. — HENRY L. MENCKEN.

Appropriate.

Appropriate as a country dance in a private vault. — DICKENS.

Arbitrary.

Arbitrary as a cyclone. — ANON.

Argument.

Entering upon an argument with a metaphysician is like getting into an omnibus : you know where you start from, but it is impossible to tell where it will carry you. — PUNCH, 1854.

Aristocracy.

Aristocracy, Hinnissy, is like rale estate, a matter iv location. I'm aristocracy to th' poor O'Briens back in the alley, th' brewery agent's aristocracy to me, his boss is aristocracy to him, an' so it goes, up to the Czar of Rooshia. — FINLEY PETER DUNNE.

Arms.

Arms like legs of mutton. — W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM.

Thine arms are as a young sapling under the bark. — EZRA POUND.

Army.

An army is like an old maid : it lives on rumors. — ANON.

Sending men to that army is like shoveling fleas across a barnyard. — ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

The German army moved into Brussels as smoothly and as compactly as an Empire State Express. — RICHARD HARDING DAVIS.

Art.

Art in America is like a patent medicine or a vacuum cleaner. It can hope for no success until 90,000,000 people know what it is. — MARSDEN HARTLEY.

Art, like the universe, said they, exists for itself alone. — HEINRICH HEINE.

Art, like nature, has her monsters, things of bestial shape and with hideous voices. — OSCAR WILDE.

Naïveté in art is like zero in a number : its importance depends on the figure it is united with. — HENRY JAMES.

Art, like the microscope, reveals many things that the naked eye does not see. — GEORGE MOORE.

Art is like a charming woman who once had her age of innocence in the nursery, when she was beautiful without knowing it, being wholly intent on what she was making or telling or imagining. — GEORGE SANTAYANA.

Artists.

The mood of an artist, his exultations and depressions . . . were like the pen-flourishes a writing master makes in the air when he begins to set his copy. — HENRY JAMES.

Ascends.

Thought ascends, and buds from the brain, as the fruit from the root. — VICTOR HUGO.

Ascends like the spiral smoke of perishing flame. — WILLIAM SHARP.

Ashamed.

Ashamed as a fox caught in a trap. — ANON.

Askew.

All askew like a hat on one ear. — ROMAIN ROLLAND.

Athwart.

Athwart it like the dagger in a contadina's hair. — HENRY JAMES.

Attention.

The attention is like a narrow mouthed vessel ; pour into it what you have to say cautiously, and, as it were, drop by drop. — JOSEPH JOUBERT.

Attracted as little attention as a dirty finger nail in the third grade. — RING LARDNER.

Auctioneer.

An auctioneer like a man with an ugly countenance . . . is always forbidding. — PUNCH, 1841.

Avaricious.

An avaricious man is like a pig, which seeks its food in the mud, without caring where it comes from. — JEAN B. M. VIANNEY.

Avarice is like a grave yard : it takes all that it can get, and gives nothing back. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Awkwardly.

Splashes . . . a little awkwardly, like an elephant in a bathtub. — MALCOLM COWLEY.

BBaby.

A baby is like a sheaf of wheat : first it is cradled, then thrashed, and then it becomes the flower of the family. — ANON.

Bachelor.

A bachelor is a nondescript in human society, like the odd end of a pair of shears, of little use till it's joined to its mate. — BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

The town bull is as much a bachelor as he. — THOMAS FULLER'S "GNOMOLOGIA," 1731.

Backbone.

Some men have so little backbone that you might as well undertake to help them as to stand an angleworm on end and ask him to dance a jig. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Backwards.

To bang compliments backwards and forwards, like two asses scrubbing one another. — JONATHAN SWIFT.

Like a Witch's Prayer, to be said backwards. — SAMUEL BUTLER, 1612-1680.

As bears go down hill, backwards. — WILLIAM GURNALL.

Bad.

Bad as beating a crippled child with a mallet. — GEORGE ADE.

Bad as cheating the devil in the dark. — THOMAS FULLER'S "GNOMOLOGIA," 1731.

Bad as plowing with dogs. — GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE, 1795.

Baffling.

Baffling as a blizzard. — ANON.

Bald.

Bald as a bat. — ANON.

Bald as a watermelon. — IBID.

Bald as an orange. — THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH.

Bald as time. — RICHARD BROME.

Bald as a Mussulman in the morning. — DICKENS.

Balmy.

Balmy as the dew which sheds on the roses' cheek. — HENRY GLAPTHORNE.

Kisses balmier than half-opening buds of April. — TENNYSON.

Bandy.

Bandy like a racket ball. — JOHN DAVIES.

Bandied about, like bullets in a battle. — BALZAC.

Bare.

Bare, as a wild wave in the wide North Sea. — ANON.

Bare as a new-born Venus rising from the sea. — COLLEY CIBBER.

Bare as an anatomy. — JOHN MARSTON.

Lay bare, as lies the mirrored moon in silver sleeping seas. — GERALD MASSEY.

Bare as the sides of a living volcano. — FREDERICK O'BRIEN.

Bare, like a carcass picked by crows. — SWIFT.

Barren.

Barren as an iceberg of vegetation. — ANON.

Barren as a draught-struck sky. — HENRY C. BUNNER.

Barren as the ground around a cabin door. — WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE.

Bashful.

Bashful as a clock, which always has its hands before its face. — ANON.

Bashful as a shrapnel shell. — IBID.

Battering.

Battering down meanings like a man that drives palings. — CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL.

Beat.

His heart beat like a hopper of a mill. — MAURICE HEWLETT.

He will beat at me like the rainy west wind on a lily. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Beaten . . . like dirty linen on the washing-board. — R. L. STEVENSON.

Beautiful.

Beautiful as a rich orphan. — GELETT BURGESS.

Beautiful as a martyr's visions. — MRS. CENTLIVRE.

Beautiful as a flower in a seed catalogue. — ROBERT H. DAVIS.

Beautiful as the sun going into the sea. — GIACOMO GREBER.

Beautiful as Liberty. — HEINRICH HEINE.

Beautiful as is the gorgeous palace of the sun. — THOMAS HEYWOOD.

Beautiful as flame. — JOHN STERLING.

Beautiful as a child's dream of a star. — HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

Beautiful as nature in the spring. — O. S. WONDERSFORD.

Beauty.

For beauty, like white powder, makes no noise,
And yet the silent hypocrite destroys.
— DRYDEN.

Her faded beauty was like summer twilight. — HENRY JAMES.

It is a great comfort for timid men, that beauty, like the elephant, doesn't know its strength. Otherwise, how it would trample upon us. — "JOE MILLER'S JESTS," 1739.

The beam of her beauty was as the constant bite of a serpent, poisoning his blood. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Beauty without virtue is like a flower without perfume. — GIOVANNI RUFFINI.

Belch.

Belch like popguns. — JOHN FLETCHER.

Belong.

He didn't belong any more than a white poodle on a coal barge. — ARTHUR BAER.

Benefactor.

A true benefactor is like a vine which is satisfied by being fruitful in its kind and bears a bunch of grapes without expecting anything for it. — MARCUS ANTONINUS.

Benefits.

Benefits, like bread, soon become stale. — CAROLINE FORNE.

Bible.

The truths of the Bible are like gold in the soil. Whole generations walk over it and know not what treasures are hidden beneath. So centuries of men pass over the Scriptures and know not what truths be under the feet of their interpretation. — HENRY WARD BEECHER.

The Bible itself is like an old Cremona; it has been played upon by the devotion of thousands of years, until every word and particle is public and tunable. — R. W. EMERSON.

But the way in which common people read their Bibles is just like the way that the old monks thought hedgehogs ate grapes. They rolled themselves (it was said) over and over, where the grapes lay on the ground. What fruit stuck to their spines, they carried off, and ate. So your hedgehoggy readers roll themselves over and over their Bibles, and declare that whatever sticks to their own spines is Scripture, and that nothing else is. But you can only get the skins of the texts that way. If you want their juice, you must press them in cluster. — RUSKIN.

Bills.

Bills are like dram-drinking . . . when one once begins, it is very hard to leave off. — ANTHONY TROLLOPE.

Biting.

Biting as nitric acid in an etcher's copper plate. — ANON.

Bitter.

Bitter as a disappointed Democrat. — ABE MARTIN.

Black.

Black as if cast from the shadow of a fallen angel's wing. — ANON.

Black as the ace of spades. — IBID.

Black as the back alley in Chelsea village. — IBID.

Black as the inside of a fountain pen. — IBID.

Black as perjury. — IBID.

Black as murder. — THOMAS DEKKER.

Black as the ninth plague of Egypt. — THOMAS HARDY.

Black as an honorary pallbearer's hat. — HENRY L. MENCKEN.

Black as sorrow. — SIR PHILIP SIDNEY.

Blank.

Blank of subjects as the white canvas before the stereopticon picture is thrown upon it. — ARLO BATES.

Blazed.

Blazed up like one universal soda bottle. — CARLYLE.

Bluster like the north wind. — MRS. GENILVRE.

Boasts.

Boasts like a quack doctor. — ANON.

Bobbing.

Bobbing up and down like a barometer on an April morning. — CLIFFORD MILLS.

Bobbing up and down, . . . like an apple in a bowl of toddy. — EDGAR ALLAN POE.

Body.

The body is like a vase or a receptacle for the soul. — CICERO.

Her body was like a white satin stove. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

A doctor knows the human body as a cabman knows the town ; he is well acquainted with all the great thoroughfares and small turnings ; he's intimate with all the principal edifices, but he cannot tell you what is going on inside of any one of them. — PUNCH, 1856.

My body, like a leather sack, is full of joy and sorrow, spite and good-humor, wisdom and folly, hay and straw, figs and grapes, fruit ripe and unripe, roses and haws — what I have seen, felt and known, owned and lived, all jumbled together in the game bag, and what fun to dive into it. — ROMAIN ROLLAND.

A man's body and his mind, with the utmost reverence to both I speak it, are exactly like a jerkin and a jerkin's lining ; rumple the one, you rumple the other. — LAURENCE STERNE.

Bold.

Coming boldly to the Bait as if it were a Mastiff dog at a Bear. — JOSEPH BLAGRAVE.

Bold as Paul in the presence of Agrippa. — COWPER.

Bold as love. — EDMUND GOSSE.

Bold as Mars. — NATHANIEL LEE.

Bold as the piercing shriek of the God of Gold. — KENNETH L. ROBERTS.

Bold as a dying saint. — ELKANAH SETTLE.

Bold as a miller's shirt, which takes a rogue by the throat every morning. — "MARRIAGE OF WIT AND SCIENCE."

Books.

Books, like Madeira, much improve at sea. — BERNARD BLACKMANTLE.

Books — continued.

What is a great love of books? It is something like a personal introduction to the great and good men of all past time. Books, it is true, are silent as you see them on their shelves; but, silent as they are, when I enter a library I feel as if almost the dead were present, and I know if I put questions to these books they will answer me. — JOHN BRIGHT.

Some books, like the city of London, fare the better for being burnt. — THOMAS BROWN.

A room without books is like a body without a soul. — CICERO.

Books, like friends, should be few and well chosen. — THOMAS FULLER.

A book, to meet with its proper desert, should be gone through like a bag of filberts . . . you throw away the bad ones, of course, and crack only the good ones; these you enjoy with all the greater relish after the bad specimens, and you do not condemn the whole lot because there happens to be one or two among them not quite so sound as the rest. — HORACE MAYHEW.

As good almost kill a man as kill a good book: who kills a man kills a reasonable creature, God's image; but he who destroys a good book, kills reason itself, kills the image of God, as it were, in the eye. — MILTON.

Alfred Naquet once said to me with true French flavor: "A book without an index is as incomplete as an eunuch." — THEODORE STANTON.

A new book, like a young man, has a reputation to acquire; and on the other hand, an old book, like an old man, is bound to have a good character already established, and must expect to be looked upon with suspicion, if it has not. — CLARENCE WALWORTH.

Boom.

Boomed out like a dinner-gong. — SIR A. CONAN DOYLE.

Boomed, like the big bell in the Kremlin at Moscow. — CARL VAN VECHTEN.

Bores.

Bores are not to be got rid of except by rough means. They are to be scraped off like the scales from a fish. — C. N. BOVÉE.

Bothered.

Bothered, like a novel reader when the third volume's missing. — ANON.

Bottomless.

Bottomless as Hell. — BEN JONSON.

Bounce.

Bounce right back like an anvil dropped in a swamp. — ARTHUR BAER.

Bound.

Bounded like a rate exchange when some one has trodden on the tail of a Foreign Minister. — PHILIP GUEDALLA.

Bow.

He bows to the Court like a mandarin before the Emperor of China. — RICHARD LAYLOR SHEIL.

Bowed.

Bowed down like barley. — WALTER DE LA MARE.

Bowed like a broken flower. — SWINBURNE.

Branchin' out like the genealogical tree of a ducal family. — R. S. SURTEES.

Brays.

Brays, like a gong. — WILLIAM LITTLE BOWLES.

Breaking.

The German lines [1918] are breaking like the river ice, — rapidly in some places, slowly in others, but everywhere breaking. — FRANK H. SIMONDS.

Breasts.

Breasts, like kettledrums of brass. — HENRY FIELDING.

Breasts like giant cabbages. — W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue. — SHAKESPEARE.

Her breasts are like white birds. — SWINBURNE.

Breath.

Thy breath is like the steam of apples. — ROBERT GREENE.

Her breath is like the gentle air of Spring. — LONGFELLOW.

Breathing.

Breathing like an escape valve. — JOSEPH C. LINCOLN.

Bridesmaid.

A very stout bridesmaid like a first-rate bottle of claret — she's all body and bouquet. — PUNCH, 1863.

Brief.

Brief as a sinner's prayer. — ANON.

Brief as a monarch's audience. — IBID.

Brief as the flutter of a star in flight. — DANA BURNET.

Brief as the Z column in a pocket dictionary. — IRVIN S. COBB.

Brief as a drop of dew. — CALE YOUNG RICE.

Brief . . . as woman's love. — SHAKESPEARE.

Certainly as the cross of St. George means English patriotism. — G. K. CHESTERTON.

Certain as smoke is a proof of fire. — CICERO.

Imbecile breeds imbecility as certainly as white hens breed white chickens. — NEW REPUBLIC, March 16, 1916.

Chance.

About as much chance as a chicken at a camp-meeting. — GEORGE ADE.

About as much chance as a bow-legged girl in her home town. — ANON.

About as much chance as a feather boa in a blast furnace. — IBID.

About as much chance as a snowball in hell. — IBID.

About as much chance as a stump-tailed cow in fly time. — IBID.

About as much chance of recognition as would the breathing of a lute under an elevated train. — IBID.

About as much chance as to sell a British flag in Ireland. — IBID.

About as much chance as a woodpecker making a nest in a concrete telephone pole. — IBID.

About as much chance as a blind man who falls into the sea has of coming up with a fish in his mouth. — IBID.

About as much chance as a bar-fixture salesman in Zion City. — IBID.

He has about as much chance as one apple in an orphan asylum. — ARTHUR BAER.

About as much chance as a dish-faced chimpanzee in a beauty contest. — IBID.

Chance — continued.

About as much chance as a woodpecker in a hardwood forest with a rubber bill. — IBID.

No more chance than a hothouse in a hail-storm. — IBID.

About as much chance as a silk shirt in a steam laundry. — IBID.

About as much chance as a nickel in a two-bit crap game. — OCTAVUS ROY COHEN.

As much chance as a monocle at a teamsters' ball. — LAWRENCE GILMAN.

About as much chance as a peashooter in an air raid. — IBID.

About as much chance as a quart o' whisky on an Indian reservation. — PETER B. KYNE.

About as much chance as Shenandoah [airship] in a cloudburst of pitchforks. — NEAL O'HARA.

About as much chance of being recognized as a skunk in a hay fever colony. — BOSTON POST, February 10, 1921.

No more chance than a barber on an Indian reservation. — JOHN D. WELLS.

Chaotic.

Chaotic as the mind of a photo-play director. — DON MARQUIS.

Character.

The fragrance of her rich and delightful character still lingered about the place where she had lived, as a dried rosebud scents the drawer where it has withered and perished. — NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

Charged.

The angry rhinoceros charged like a demented express train. — ANON.

Chaste.

Chaste as when she was new born. — DAVID GARRICK.

Chaste as untrodden snow. — V. S. LEAN'S "COLLECTANEA," 1903.

Chastity.

Chastity is like unto a bright mirror, that is bedimmed and troubled not only by the touch of filthy things, but also by the breath of man. — "THE LITTLE FLOWERS OF ST. FRANCIS," circa 1390.

Chastity is like an isikel. If it onse melts that's the last ov it. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Cheerful as a new oak upright piano — SINCLAIR LEWIS.

Cheerless.

Cheerless as the Arctic. — ANON.

Child.

It is a groundless fallacy to suppose that a child is like a carpet, that requires to be instantly pulled up, and thoroughly well beaten, before it can be put down. — PUNCH, 1859.

Christian.

A true Christian is like the ripening corn ; the riper he grows the more lowly he bends his head. — ANON.

Some Christians are like soiled bank notes : while we acknowledge their value we wish them changed. — WILLIAM LEWIS.

Chummy.

About as chummy as a pair of panthers. — JAMES FORBES.

Cigar.

A cigar is like some people : jest as soon as it gits pop'lar it begins to deterirate. — ABE MARTIN.

Circle.

He started going around in circles like a glass-eyed zebra on a Coney Island carrousel. — ARTHUR BAER.

Circled like a clasping arm. — JAMES A. GARFIELD.

In a circle like a horse tethered to an iron pin. — RICHARD JEFFERIES.

Cities.

Cities, like cats, will reveal themselves at night. — RUPERT BROOKE.

Cities are like woman in respect of the evanescent and impressionistic quality that is suggested by the word charm ; they have it or they have it not ; one does not know why if one seeks to define or to analyse it, it is quite apt to vanish away. — BRAND WHITLOCK.

Clamorous.

Clamorous as the boys of a district school just let out to play at lunch-time. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Clang.

Clanged like fifty fire-engines. — HERMAN MELVILLE.

Clatter.

Clattered like a dropped tray of tin things. — FANNIE HURST.

Clean.

Clean as a New England kitchen. — ANON.

Clean as a cold winter morning. — ELLIS PARKER BUTLER.

Clean as the deck of a yacht. — RICHARD HARDING DAVIS.

Clean as a pint of filtered spring-water in a non-fillable bottle. — WILLIAM SLAVENS McNUTT.

Clean as a pearl. — PLAY, "JACOB AND ESAU," 1586.

Cleverness.

Little clevernesses are like half-ripened plums, only good eating on the side that has had a glimpse of the sun. — HENRY JAMES.

Cling.

Clings like an impecunious school friend. — ANON.

Clung, like an iron ring. — BARRY CORNWALL.

Cling like a long hair to a wet hand. — WILLIAM GEORGE JORDAN.

Close.

Close as the gum on a postage stamp. — ~~IBID.~~

Close as the cu's in cucumbers. — ~~IBID.~~

Close as a dead heat. — ~~IBID.~~

The game was closer than a carriage dog's spots. — ARTHUR BAER.

Close'as any true lovers in the spring. — EDWARD BLUNDEN.

Close as my lady's shoe to her foot. — GEORGE CHAPMAN.

Close as the report follows the powder. — JOHN FLETCHER.

Close as beggary to a prodigal. — JOHN KIRK.

Close together as the two shells of an oyster. — LEONARD McNALLY.

Close — continued.

Close as the skin to the flesh, or as the flesh to the bone. — THOMAS RAWLINS.

Close as the bark to the tree. — SIR CHARLES SEDLEY.

Close as an uncracked nut. — PLAY, "ALL VOWS KEPT," 1733.

Closed.

Closed — like banks on Sunday. — ANON.

Clothes.

A suit iv clothes that looked like a stained-glass window in th' house iv a Dutch brewer. — FINLEY P. DUNNE.

A suit iv clothes that looks like a tablecloth in a section house. — IBID.

Clouds.

Clouds, like Alps in the sky. — KENELM H. DIGBY.

Large puffed clouds like deliberate loads of hay. — RICHARD JEFFERIES.

Little white clouds like cushions of cotton. — EUGÉNIE DE GUÉRIN.

Large black clouds, like chimney-sweepers' feather-beds. — PUNCH, 1841.

The summer clouds lay pitched like tents. — JOHN R. THOMPSON.

Coarse.

Coarse as a turnip field. — HENRY JAMES.

Coarse as horse hair. — EUGENE SUE.

Coiled.

Coiled up like a spiral spring. — DAMON RUNYON.

Coiled up like the letter S. — IBID.

Cold.

Cold as a white rose waking at day-break. — ANON.

Her nature was as cold as the reflection of the moon in a boghole. — IBID.

Cold as a six-card poker hand. — ARTHUR BAER.

Cold as the obit of a Pope. — BALZAC.

Cold as an egg in a deserted bird's nest. — SIR JAMES M. BARRIE.

Cold as a stepmother's kiss. — ZELDA SEARS.

Cold as a corpse after the spirit's flight. — SHELLEY.

Cold as Presbyterian charity. — SAM SLICK.

Cold as the new-sprung girlhood of the moon. — FRANCES THOMPSON.

Cold as unsunned snow. — ROSAMUND MARRIOTT WATSON.

Cold as a pawnbroker's smile. — H. C. WITWER.

Collapse.

Collapsed like a concertina. — ANON.

Collapses like a financial system with no cash basis whatever. — WILLIAM JAMES.

Colorless.

Colorless as a Scotch lowland in a fog. — ANON.

Colorless as the entries of a log-book. — J. HAMPDEN PORTER.

Come.

Always comin' and goin', like Mul-ligan's blanket (i. e. to the pawnbroker). — V. S. LEAN'S "COLLECTANEA," 1903.

Come as country gentlemen do into the fashion; that is, in the tail end or latter end on't. — EDWARD SHARPHAM.

Comfort.

Creature comforts are like the soft morning dews which, while they water the branches of the trees, leave the roots dry. — WILLIAM SECKER.

A man's comfort is like a cigar, — if he cannot get it at home, he will go in search of it elsewhere. — PUNCH, 1859.

Comfortable.

About as comfortable as a roller-coaster. — ANON.

Comfortable as a litter of pups sleeping under a stove. — IBID.

Comfortable as a farmer with his Sunday shoes under his arm. — ARTHUR BAER.

About as comfortable as a hairbrush in bed. — W. L. GEORGE.

Comfortable as the melting wax to the impress of the seal. — JAMES HERVEY.

Comforting as a good old-fashioned murder. — EDGAR SALTUS.

Comfortable as a toothache. — MARK TWAIN.

'Bout as comfortable as a rooster in a pond. — EDWARD NOYES WESTCOTT.

Comfortless.

Comfortless as frozen water to a starved snake. — ANON.

Common.

Common as pump water. — JOSEPH G. BALDWIN.

Common as gas-posts and telegraph posts. — HENRY ARTHUR JONES.

Common as spots upon doves, moles upon faces, caterpillars upon sweet apples, cobwebs upon fair windows. — LYLY.

Common as the way between St. Alban's and London. — SHAKESPEARE.

Common as public houses in an English slum. — NEW YORK WORLD, August 19, 1922.

Compact.

Compact as a watch. — ANON.

Compact as a Greek temple. — HENRY JAMES.

Compact as a thatch. — R. L. STEVENSON.

Compact as the shape of chestnuts and oranges. — WALT WHITMAN.

Company.

Bad company is like a nail driven into a post, which after the first or second blow may be drawn out with little difficulty ; but being once driven up to the head, the pinchers cannot take hold to draw it out, but which can only be done by the destruction of the wood. — ST. AUGUSTINE.

Compelling.

Compelling as gunpowder. — ANON.

Complete.

Exquisitely complete as a nocturne by Chopin. — WILLIAM SHARP.

Complexion.

Complexion like the Sunset Blush on a Snow Bank. — GEORGE ADE.

Complexion like the blushy side of a peach. — ANON.

A complexion like a brick. — W. L. GEORGE.

A complexion like the skin of a raw fowl. — JOHN OLIVER HOBBS.

A complexion like a Holland cheese. — WILLIAM WYCHERLEY.

Compliments.

Compliments to me [an old man] are like strawberries in winter time, deuced cloying, and a good deal out of season. — EDWARD LAMAN BLANCHARD.

Conceited.

Conceited as a negro bishop. — HENRY L. MENCKEN.

Concise.

Concise as a king's declaration of love. — LAURENCE STERNE.

Concrete.

Concrete as a bird in a cage, a bait on a hook, a piece of cheese in a mouse-trap. — HENRY JAMES.

Conduct.

Wind up your conduct, like your watch, once every day, examining minutely whether you are "fast" or "slow." — PUNCH, 1857.

Conquerors.

Conquerors are like fires — the greater their brilliancy, the larger the ruin they leave behind them. — PUNCH, 1857.

Conscience.

Conscience is like a sun-dial ; if you let truth shine upon it, it will put you right ; but you may cover it over so that no truth can fall upon it, or you may let false light gleam upon it and then it will lead you astray. — HAMILTON BOWER.

Conscience, in many souls, is like an English sovereign ; it reigns but it does not govern ; its function is merely to give a formal assent to the bills passed by the passions. — W. H. MALLOCK.

No more conscience than a fox in a poultry farm. — G. B. SHAW.

Conscience, like every other judge, may be misled, and there is no advocate so eloquent as self-interest, before that high, but infallible tribunal. — RICHARD LALOR SHEIL.

Considerate.

Considerate as the Fiji islander was of the missionary, when he asked him if he would rather be cooked à la maître d'hôtel or en papillote. — PAUL LEICESTER FORD.

Conspicuous.

Conspicuous as a sore thumb at an amateur piano contest. — ANON.

Conspicuous as a man at The Capitol without a badge. — NEW YORK TRIBUNE, February 14, 1917.

Constant.

A pipe in his mouth as constant as his front teeth. — DOUGLAS JERROLD.

Constitutions.

Constitutions are like virgins ; they never bear fruit till they have been violated. — PEARSON'S MAGAZINE, November, 1920.

Consulted.

Consulted as you would run over the leaves of a dictionary. — FRANCISQUE SARCEY.

Contagious.

Contagious as the sympathy of a smile. — JACINTO BENAVENTE.

Contemporary.

Contemporary as a newspaper. — WILLIAM LYON PHELPS.

Contemptible.

Contemptible as an apoplectic dancing-master. — PUNCH, 1841.

Contented.

Contented as a clam at sea. — ANON.

Contented as kittens before the fire. — IBID.

Contented as the debutante on receiving her first basket of orchids. — FRANCIS W. CROWNINSHIELD.

Contented as a cobra full of warm milk. — RUPERT HUGHES.

Conversation.

My conversation, it is like the Sun's, with all men, and with a friendly aspect to good and bad. — SIR THOMAS BROWNE.

Conversation is like a boot. When damped it loses its polish. — SIR FRANCIS C. BURNAND.

The conversation of Sir James Mackintosh has the effect of reading a well-written book ; that of his friend is like hearing a bewildering dream. — WILLIAM HAZLITT.

Conversation — continued.

The conversation of Burke must have been like the procession of a Roman triumph, exhibiting power and riches at every step, — occasionally, perhaps, mingling the low Fescennine jest with the lofty music of its march, but glittering all over with the spoils of the whole ransacked world. — THOMAS MOORE.

Conversation should be like a salad, composed of various ingredients, and well stirred with salt, oil and vinegar. — JOQUIN SETANTI.

Lettuce is like conversation : it must be fresh and crisp, so sparkling that you scarcely notice the bitter in it. Lettuce, like most talkers, is however, apt to run rapidly to seed. Blessed is that sort which comes to a head, and so remains — like few I know — growing more solid and satisfactory and tender at the same time, and whiter at the centre, and crisp in its maturity. Lettuce, like conversation, requires a good deal of oil, to avoid friction, and keep the company smooth ; a pinch of Attic salt, a dash of pepper, a quantity of mustard and vinegar, by all means — but so mixed that you will notice no sharp contact — and a trifle of sugar. You can put anything — and the more things the better — into salad, as into conversation ; but everything depends upon the skill in mixing. — CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER.

Convincing.

Convincing as a proposition in Euclid. — ANON.

Cook.

She cooked like the mother of all the Delmonicos. — HAROLD FREDERIC.

Coquette.

Coquettes are like hunters who are fond of hunting, but do not eat the game. — BALZAC.

A coquette is like your shadow ; chase her and she flees from you, flee from her and she chases you. — HINDU PROVERB.

Coquetry whets the appetite ; flirtation depraves it. Coquetry is the thorn that guards the rose — easily trimmed off when once plucked. Flirtation is like the slime on water-plants, making them hard to handle, and when caught, only to be cherished in slimy waters. — DONALD G. MITCHELL.

Cordial.

Cordial as an open door. — OWEN JOHNSON.

Corrupt.

Corrupt as a political boss. — ANON.

Cosy.

About as cosy as he would be standing on a bull's horns. — HERMAN MELVILLE.

Courage.

As a cur that goes through a Village, if he clap his tail between his legs, and run away, every cur will insult over him, but if he bristle up himself, and stand to it, give but a counter-snarl, there's not a dog dares meddle with him. Much is in a man's courage and discreet carriage of himself. — ROBERT BURTON.

Courtesy.

Courtesy is a science of the highest importance. It is like grace and beauty in the body, which charm at first sight, and lead on to further intimacy and friendship, opening a door that we may derive instruction from the example of others, and at the same time enabling us to benefit them by our example, if there be anything in our character worthy of imitation. — MONTAIGNE

Courtship.

Courtship is something like stag hunting, of which few care to see the finish. — R. S. SURTEES.

Covetous.

A covetous man is like a camel with a great hunch on his back ; heaven's gate must be made higher and broader, or he will hardly get in. — THOMAS ADAMS.

Coy.

Coy as an alderman's eldest daughter. — THOMAS NABBES.

Cracks.

Cracks like the firing of pistols in dead of night. — KATHLEEN NORRIS.

Cramped.

Cramped like malefactors with the chain and ball. — HERMAN MELVILLE.

Crash.

A crash like the combined force of all the battering rams of Titus Flavius Vespasianus on one of the gates of Jerusalem. — CHARLES FAIRBANKS.

Creamy.

Creamy as a charlotte russe. — ANON.

Critic.

The critic has the same relation to literature that a flea has to a dog — he infests it, lives off it without either advancing or adorning it. — ANON.

The mule is like the critic of the drama. He can kick, but he cannot produce. — HARRY B. SMITH.

The critics are a race of scholars I am very little acquainted with ; having always esteemed them but like brokers, who, having no stock of their own, set up a trade with that of other men ; buying here, and selling there, and commonly abusing both sides, to make out a paltry gain, either of money or of credit, for themselves, and care not at whose cost. — SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE.

Crooked.

Crooked as a hair in a gale of wind. — ANON.

Crooked as an Arab street. — CHANNING POLLOCK.

Cropped.

Cropped as close as Time at Greenwich. — EDITH SITWELL.

Cross.

Cross as a capital X. — ANON.

Cross as a bag of cats. — P. W. JOYCE'S "ENGLISH AS WE SPEAK IT IN IRELAND," 1910.

Crowded.

Crowded as the Presbyterian hell for babies. — HENRY L. MENCKEN.

Cruel.

Cruel as the Holy. — GEORGE ELIOT.

Cruel as loneliness. — W. L. GEORGE.

Cruel as love or life. — SWINBURNE.

Crumpled.

Crumpled as a Palm Beach suit which has passed through a torrid afternoon. — ARTHUR BAER.

Crush.

Crush his neighbor's interest under foot, like a horse-roller over a daisy. — RICHARD JEFFERIES.

Crushed in the bottom of Stubb's boat, like one trodden underfoot of herds of elephants. — HERMAN MELVILLE.

Crushed like rotten apples. — SHAKESPEARE.

Crying.

Crying before people is just like taking off all your clothes before people. — MARGARET DELAND.

Culture.

As the soil, however rich it may be, cannot be productive without culture, so the mind without cultivation can never produce good fruit. — SENECA.

Curiosity.

Unconquerable curiosity, like that of our mother Eve. — BALZAC.

Curled.

They hurled the Javelins into him until he curled up like a Rubber Band. — GEORGE ADE.

Curled up like gummed labels. — ARTHUR BAER.

His backbone curled up like two broken sofa springs. — IBID.

Curled like an ocean wave. — LAWRENCE HOPE.

DDainty.

Dainty as a chorus man. — ANON.

Dance.

Danced like a man in a swarm of hornets. — ANON.

Danced as though he had two left feet. — IBID.

Dancing . . . like nothing so much as the jerking of a wooden monkey on a pole in the hands of a small boy. — ARLO BATES.

I don't think much of a dance where th' girl looks like she wuz bein' carried out of a burnin' buildin'. — ABE MARTIN.

She dances like a cattle stampede. — ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE.

Dangle.

As the exhausted prize fighter sat on his second's knee, his head dangled about like a poppy in a shower. — H. S. CANBY'S "ENGLISH COMPOSITION IN THEORY AND PRACTICE," 1909.

Dark.

Dark as a club flush. — H. C. WITWER.

Daughter-in-Law.

A daughter-in-law is not like a shoe, you can't kick her off. — LEO TOLSTOY.

Dazzling.

Dazzling as a pawnbroker's wife. — ANON.

Dead.

Deader than a moosehead hatrack. — ARTHUR BAER.

Jack Dempsey will knock him deader than a two-hour old street-car transfer. — IBID.

Dead as last year's sand grass. — IDA M. EVANS.

Dead as a fern-leaf in a lump of coal. — THOMAS HARDY.

Dead as charity. — ROBERT HER-MINE.

Dead as the eye of the fish served at a 60-cent table d'hôte. — DON MAR-QUIS.

Dead as the beau monde of Pompeii, or as the remains of Etruscan leaders of the ton. — GRACE AND PHILIP WHARTON.

Dear.

Dear as radium. — LEONARD MER-LUCK.

Debts.

Small debts are like small shot ; they are rattling on every side and can scarcely be escaped without a wound. Great debts are like cannons of loud noise but little danger. — DOCTOR JOHNSON.

Decorated.

The ring was decorated like a canary bird's cage on Audubon's birthday. — ARTHUR BAER.

Decorous.

Walked as decorously as Mr. Rockefeller would enter a Baptist church. — ST. JOHN G. ERVINE.

Decorous, as a superannuated coquette. — WASHINGTON IRVING.

Definite.

Definite and enduring as Hamlet or Micawber. — FREDERIC TABER COOPER.

Definite as a map for a townsite. — BENJAMIN DE CASSERES.

Definite as the colour red. — HENRY JAMES.

Delicate.

Delicate as the play of moonbeams on a field of snow. — ROBERT P. DOWNS.

Delicate as the hands of the almond-white daughter of the Emperor of Pekin. — HARRIS MERTON LYON.

Delicate as a fairy's sigh. — FRANCES SARGENT OSGOOD.

Delicious.

Delicious as an Apricot. — CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH, 1580-1631.

Delightful.

Delightful as the recovery of lost sight. — APOLLONIUS RHODIUS.

Delusion.

Delusion and a snare, like the paint on a second-handed flivver. — ARTHUR BAER.

Demoralizing.

Demoralizing as a holiday. — ABE MARTIN.

Demure.

Demure as a bawd at a christening. — JAMES KELLY'S "SCOTTISH PROVERBS," 1721.

Dense.

Dense as a Scotchman at a Charity bazaar. — ANON.

Dependable.

Dependable as the sun. — ANON.

About as dependable as a woman's wrist watch. — IBID.

Descends.

Descends like mining stock. — BERT LESTON TAYLOR.

Desolate.

Desolate looking as a summer resort in midwinter. — RICHARD HARDING DAVIS.

Destitute.

Destitute of relations as Melchisedec. — DR. JOHN BROWN.

Destructive.

Destructive as a sledge hammer in a jewelry store. — ANON.

Determined.

Determined as a cook to make a beefsteak tender. — BAUDELAIRE.

Developed.

Developed like a bottle from the neck down. — ANON.

Dictionaries.

Dictionaries are like watches; the worst is better than none, and the best cannot be expected to go quite true. — DOCTOR JOHNSON.

Differ.

Differ as a cuckatoo and an elephant. — IBID.

Differ as a holocaust and a hollyhock. — IBID.

Differ as a mountain range and a grain of sand. — IBID.

Differ as a mouse and an elephant. — IBID.

Differ as an eagle and an ant. — IBID.

Differ as the dusk does from the day. — HARRY KEMP.

Difference.

The difference between vivacity and wit is the same as the difference between the lightning-bug and lightning. — JOSH BILLINGS.

A difference surely as great as between the bottle and the wine. — EDGAR SALTUS.

Different.

Different as Piers Plowman and Mr. Pickwick. — IBID.

Different as orchids' breath from grocery garlic. — WILLIAM BEEBE.

Different as three men singing the same chorus from three men playing three tunes on the same piano. — G. K. CHESTERTON.

Different . . . as grape-juice from vodka. — KATHARINE FULLERTON GEROULD.

Difficult.

Difficult as putting a blister on a porcupine. — ANON.

Difficult as to collect loose feathers in a hurricane. — ARTHUR BAER.

Difficult as virtue and almost as unreasonable. — ARLO BATES.

Difficult as to catch an eel in a bucket of oil. — IBID.

Difficult as to remember a wheeze devised in a dream. — IBID.

Difficult as to sell a ham at Long Branch. — IBID.

Difficult as to sell needles in the blacksmith's street. — IBID.

It would be scarcely more difficult to push a stone out from the Pyramids with the bare hand, than to alter a word, or the position of a word, in Milton or Shakespeare (in their most important works at least), without making the poet say something else, or something worse, than he does say. — S. T. COLERIDGE.

Difficult as finding a fifty-dollar bill on the floor of a poorhouse. — JOSEPH C. LINCOLN.

Difficult as getting a concession to put a merry-go-round on the front lawn of the White House. — KENNETH L. ROBERTS.

Dignified.

Dignified as Julius Caesar. — ANON.

Dignified as the electoral college. — ALBERT E. HOYT.

More dignified than a whitewashed negro. — HERMAN MELVILLE.

Direct.

Direct as a torpedo. — WALLACE IRWIN.

A directness in the argument was like the ache of old pinchers. — HENRY JAMES.

Disappear.

Disappear like one apple in an orphan asylum. — ARTHUR BAER.

Disappeared as though behind the curtain of a theatre. — VICTOR HUGO.

Disappeared like a rabbit down a boa-constrictor's throat. — R. S. SURTELL.

Disappointing.

Disappointing as a honeymoon. — HENRY L. MENCKEN.

Disarrayed.

Disarrayed as a woman's top dresser drawer. — BURTON RASCOE.

Disconnected.

Disconnected like the buzzing song of a swarm of gnats. — MAY SINCLAIR.

Disconsolate.

Disconsolate as a bee that has lost its sting. — THOMAS SHADWELL.

Discords.

As many discords as bullets in a battle. — ANON.

Discouraged.

Discouraged as a frog catcher in the Desert of Sahara. — DON MARQUIS.

Discourse.

His discourse was like a fire, which, instead of enlightening, obscured everything with its smoke. — ABELARD.

Discreet.

About as discreet as streetwalkers. — GERTRUDE ATHERTON.

Disgusting.

Disgusting, like mediocrity in verse. — HILAIRE BELLOC.

Disgusting as the opening of Rockway clams with a shoe-hammer. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Dismal.

Dismal as a bowling alley without beer. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Dismal as a cypress swamp on a rainy Sunday. — CORNÉLIS DE W. WILCOX.

Dispersed.

Dispersed, as fiends before rebuking saints. — SIR AUBREY DE VERE.

Distinct.

Distinct as in a line engraving. — THOMAS HARDY.

Distinctive.

Distinctive as a nigger in a snow-storm. — THOMAS BURKE.

Distressing.

Distressing as an amateur cocktail. — ANON.

Divorce.

Divorce is like matrimony, a fellow has got to go through it three or four times before he knows how. — EDGAR SALTUS.

Do.

Do as beggars do, go away when you have got enough. — JONATHAN SWIFT.

Doctor.

A doctor, be he never so clever and delightful, who doesn't cure, is like a mole-catcher who can't catch moles, or a watchmaker who can do everything but make your watch go. — DR. JOHN BROWN.

Dog.

A good dog, like a good candidate, cannot be of a bad colour. — PETER BECKFORD.

Dogma.

Without dogma a religion is like a body without skeleton. It can't stand. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Domestic.

Domestic as a doughnut. — ANON.

Down.

Down like a sledge hammer. — ANON.

He went down like a clothing-store dummy. — CLARENCE L. CULLEN.

The barometer went down like sands in an hourglass. — GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

Came down on him like a new Republican President on a Democratic postmaster. — GEORGE W. PECK.

Drastic.

Drastic as surgery. — ANON.

Draws.

Draws like a dog fight. — MARK TWAIN.

Dreaming.

A certain amount of dreaming is good, like a narcotic in discreet doses. — VICTOR HUGO.

Dreary.

Dreary as pyramid under the stars.
— G. K. CHESTERTON.

Dreary as chaos ere creation's reign.
— VOLTAIRE.

Dressed.

Dressed like a Christmas tree. — ANON.

Dressed like an Easter egg. — IBID.

Dressed up like a sore thumb. — IBID.

All his body was dressed like a May-pole. — JOHN EVELYN.

Drink like a suction hose. — THOMAS BURKE.

My drooping soul drinks up your words as the parched earth does a refreshing shower. — EDWARD RAVENSCROFT.

Drip.

Dripping like a leaky watering-cart. — GELETT BURGESS.

On we went, dripping, and sloshing, and looking very like men that had been turned back by the Royal Humane Society as being incurably drowned. — A. W. KINGLAKE.

Dripping like sea deities after an elemental Waterloo. — HOWARD PAUL.

Droop.

Droop like flowers when evening shuts her eyes. — SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT.

Mouth drooped as in the mask which the ancients sculptured on tombs. — VICTOR HUGO.

Drooping like the boughs of a weeping ash. — RICHARD JEFFERIES.

Drooped like birch-boughs. — DINAH MARIA MULOCK.

Dropped.

Men dropped, like brown leaves from autumn trees. — SIR PHILIP GIBBS.

Drops like the released pile-driver. — MARK TWAIN.

Drowsy.

Drowsed like so many hibernating bears. — GEORGE ADE.

Drowsy as watchers at a death bed. — ANON.

Drunk.

Drunk as Pluto, who drinks lightning and never gets scorched. — ANON.

Drunk as a bacchanal. — THOMAS DUFFEY.

Drunk as nurses at a christening. — "LONDON CHANTICLEERS," 1659.

Drunken as our swine. — EDWARD MORE.

Drunk as an M. P. (Can't stand up). — G. F. NORTHALL'S "FOLK PHRASES," 1894.

Drunk as a prohibition enforcement agent. — BERT LESTON TAYLOR.

Dry.

Dry as the tonsils that thought their master was taking in washing. — ANON.

Her throat was as dry as if it had been swabbed with blotting paper. — IBID.

Dry as a covered bridge. — ARTHUR BAER.

Dry as the clerk of a lime-kiln. — J. R. BARTLETT'S "DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS," 1877.

More dry than a fever. — RICHARD BROME.

Dry as a prohibitionist lost in the Sahara Desert. — BENJAMIN DE CAS-SIN.

Dry as corn fodder in March. — DAVID GRAYSON.

Dry — continued.

Dry as sawdust. — HENRY HIGDEN.

Dry as a parliamentary blue-book.
— JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Dry as noon. — RICHARD JEFFERIES.

Dry as seasoned fish. — PATRICK MACGILL.

Dry as the Congressional Record. —
JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

Dry as the crop report. — H. C.
WITWER.

Dry as an author's pocket. — ED-MUND YATES.

Dull.

Dull as a Philadelphia Sunday. —
ANON.

Dull as books in a guest room. —
IBID.

Dull as the man who thought Scotland Yard a place where they hung out kilts. — IBID.

Dull as a banker. — BALZAC.

Throb dull as the measured beat of the steam-engine. — KENNETH GRA-HAME.

Dull as a flower without the sun. —
THOMAS HARDY.

Dull as an obsolete almanac. —
JOHN HAY.

Dull as a London fog. — JAMES G.
HUNEKER.

Dull as duty. — DON MARQUIS.

Dull as oysters. — HENRY L. MENCK-EN.

Dull as a Trinity Sunday sermon. —
JONATHAN SWIFT.

Dull as a lecture at the Royal Society. — OSCAR WILDE.

Dumb as a stage doorkeeper. —
ANON.

Dumb as the man who thinks a baseball fan is run by electricity. — IBID.

He is as dumb as the man who thought a football coach has four wheels. — IBID.

Dumb as the ninnyhammer who thought the Mann act a quartette. —
IBID.

Durable.

Durable as a pig's nose. — WARREN
LEWIS.

Durable as the stars. — DANIEL WEBSTER.

Duration.

No more duration than a blaze of straw. — JOSEPH E. CONRAD.

E

Eager.

Eager as an understudy. — L. MONTA BELL.

Eager as fire horses, heads lifted to the gong. — MARY ROBERTS RINE-HART.

Eager as the dinner gong to make himself heard. — RUFUS E. SHAPLEY.

Ears.

Ears like mangled doughnuts. —
ANON.

Pricked up his ears like two railroad signals. — LEWIS CARROLL.

Easy as selling beer at a picnic. — GUY BOLTON.

Easy as sucking a fresh egg. — BENVENUTO CELLINI.

Easy as spitting. — ANTON T. CHEKHOV.

Gallop easy as an iceboat's rush before the wind. — R. B. CUNNINGHAM GRAHAM.

Easy as falling off a cable-car. — CUTCLIFFE HYNE.

To swim in the open ocean is as easy to the practised swimmer as to ride in a spring-carriage ashore. — HERMAN MELVILLE.

Easy as ordering a drink. — LEONARD MERRICK.

About as easy as to do up an elephant in a shawl strap. — CHANNING POLLOCK.

Easy as for a cat to have twins. — MARK TWAIN.

Editors.

Editors are like the people who bought and sold in the book of Revelation; there is not one but has the mark of the beast upon them. — SAMUEL BUTLER, 1835-1902.

Education.

Education, like politics, is a rough affair, and every instructor has to shut his eyes and hold his tongue as though he were a priest. — HENRY ADAMS.

Your education, like . . . carrots, is not a manufactured article, but just a seed which has grown up largely under nature's friendly influence. — WILLIAM J. LONG.

Effect.

The blows rattled off Jack Dempsey's chin with no more effect than a tack hammer against a statue of bronze. — NEW YORK TRIBUNE, July 3, 1921.

Effective.

Effective as a bullet. — EDGAR SALTUS.

Efficacious.

About as efficacious as mustard plaster on a wooden leg. — WASHINGTON POST, October 5, 1918.

Efficient.

Efficient, like the hero in a cinema play. — EDWARD S. MARTIN.

Elastic.

Elastic as a steel spring. — ANON.

Elegant.

Elegant as the Claypool Hotel in Indianapolis. — GEORGE ADE.

Eloquence.

His eloquence [Bishop Joseph Butler] was like a chain of gold. — LONDON MAGAZINE, 1752.

As the shadow runs over the field, so the impression of his [Daniel O'Connell] varying eloquence ran over the assemblage. — JUSTIN MCCARTHY.

Eloquent.

Eloquent as a bushel of alphabets. — JOHN BROUGHAM.

Elusive.

Elusive as a wet fish. — ANON.

Empty.

Empty as a contribution box. — ANON.

Empty as an author's pocket. — IBID.

Empty as a poorhouse's boarder's pocket. — JOSEPH C. LINCOLN.

Enemy.

An enemy as much as the fox is the enemy of the poultry-yard, and the hound is the enemy of the fox. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

English.

English as Piccadilly. — ANON.

Enigmatic.

Her smile as enigmatic as a gambler's thinking. — MARION STROBEL.

Entangled.

I would not take any risk of being entangled upon the river, like an ox jumped halfway over a fence and liable to be torn by dogs front and rear without a fair chance to gore one way or kick the other. — ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Enthusiasm.

Enthusiasm, like a match, must be held down, to burn well. — LIFE, December 9, 1920.

Enthusiastic.

Enthusiastic as a bride buying her trousseau. — ANON.

About as enthusiastic as a guy going to the chair. — H. C. WITWER.

Enthusiastic as a three-headed cat in a creamery. — IBID.

Envious.

Envious as a dropsical man looking at the Mississippi River. — ANON.

Essays.

His [Emerson] Essays are like a plot of ground sown with lilies and other white flowers, without perfume. — FRANCIS GRIERSON.

His [Montaigne] Essays are like a mythological landscape—you hear the pipe of Pan in the distance, the naked goddess moves past, the satyr leers from the thicket. — ALEXANDER SMITH.

Eternal.

Eternal as mediocrity. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Etiquette.

As good-breeding is an expedient to make fools and wise men equals, so etiquette is the invention of wise men to keep fools at a distance. — SIR RICHARD STEELE.

Even.

Even as a set of false teeth. — ARTHUR BAER.

Even as a row of West Point cadets on parade. — IBID.

Evident.

Evident as a wooden leg. — ANON.

Exact.

Exact as a blue print. — ANON.

Exact as the technical jargon of a trade. — ALDOUS HUXLEY.

Exasperated.

The American mind exasperated the European as a buzz-saw might exasperate a pine forest. — HENRY ADAMS.

Excel.

Excel as much as diamond does glass. — PLAY, "LIFE AND DEATH OF LORD CROMWELL," 1602.

Excel, as the sun with beams most clear and bright excels the stars. — JOHN LYDGATE.

Exciting.

About as exciting as a ride on a stone camel. — ANON.

Excited as if Rockefeller had asked her to get married. — GELETT BURGESS.

Exciting as war. — RT. HON. WINSTON CHURCHILL.

Exciting as a sudden gallop. — HENRY JAMES.

Excited as a cop making his first pinch. — H. C. WITWER.

Exclusive as a Turkish Bath on Saturday night. — GEORGE ADE.

About as exclusive as the Grand Central Station. — ANON.

Exhilarating.

Exhilarating as love. — BALZAC.

Exhilarating as iced champagne. — MARION HARLAND.

Exhilarating as a fanfare of bugles. — HENRY L. MENCKEN.

About as exhilarating as the morning after the celebration of New Year's resolutions. — EDWIN L. SABIN.

Expect.

As well expect a hook to hold soft cheese. — ANON.

As well expect an experimental physiologist to bless the Anti-vivisection Society, or a saloon keeper to uphold a temperance lecturer as a model of all the virtues. — IBID.

As well expect a tempest in a saucer. — IBID.

As well expect bird lime in a cuckoo clock. — IBID.

As well expect the King of England to be a Nonconformist, or to find a statue of Voltaire in the Vatican. — IBID.

As well expect to saddle and bridle an eagle. — IBID.

Expensive.

Expensive as a mistress. — ANON.

Expensive and exclusive as millinery masterpieces. — WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT.

Experience.

Experience is like medicine; some persons require larger doses of it than others, and do not like to take it pure, but a little disguised and better adapted to the taste; like medicine, also, it is a cure for many ills to which we are liable. — "ACTON; or, THE CIRCLE OF LIFE," 1849.

Expressionless.

Expressionless as the grin of letter boxes. — BALZAC.

Extinct.

Extinct, like the Harlem goat. — GRANT M. OVERTON.

Eyebrows.

The eyebrow polished and dark as though the brush had drawn it. — DANTE.

Eyebrows arched like skipping ropes. — HENRY JAMES.

Eyes.

His eyes looking like the frosting on an angel cake. — ARTHUR BAER.

Her eyes were like bright blots of ink. — MAX BEERBOHM.

Eyes like acetylene headlights. — ALEXANDER BLACK.

The eyes, like sentinels, occupy the highest place in the body. — CICERO.

Eyes like the lakes of Killarney for clarity. — RICHARD HOVEY.

Her eyes looked like two rainy autumn moons. — HENRY JAMES.

His eyes [Edwin Booth] shone out like gleaming jets of grief. — AMY LESLIE.

Had an eye like a loose button on an ulster. — MARK TWAIN.

F

Face.

He had a face like a bottle of warts.
— ANON.

He has a face like a busted sofa. —
IBID.

Your face looks like a Chinese lantern after a wet lawn fête. — IBID.

A face like an open book. — IBID.

A face like a wet holiday. — IBID.

A face that looks like it had worn out four bodies. — IBID.

A face like the battlefields of France.
— IBID.

A face that looked like a sucked
lemon. — JOSH BILLINGS.

A face like a drowning horse. —
GELETT BURGESS.

His face was afire with intelligence as a flannel pincushion. — STEPHEN CRANE.

Faces like the backs of cabs. — W.
H. T. CROSLAND.

His face like a shout on a sunny morning. — A. S. M. HUTCHINSON.

Face like a three-parts deflated football. — IBID.

It was an oddity of Mrs. Lowder's that her face in speech was like a lighted window at night, but that silence immediately drew the curtain. — HENRY
JAMES.

Face like a sea-monster. — BEN
JONSON.

A sad face like a salt fish. — DON MARQUIS.

A great red face like a leg of mutton.
— W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM.

A face like the abdomen of a tenpin.
— HENRY L. MENCKEN.

A face like a sea boot. — CLIFFORD MILLS.

A face like a pug-dog. — CARL VAN VECHTEN.

A face like a sallow bust on a bracket in a university library. — EDITH WHARTON.

Fade.

Faded as a fashionable beauty at the end of a London season. — J. STERLING COYNE.

Fading away like a mist from Killarney of a fine morning. — RUPERT HUGHES.

You are beautiful and faded,
Like an old opera tune
Played upon a harpsichord ;
Or like the sun-flooded silks
Of an eighteenth-century boudoir.
— AMY LOWELL.

Faded, like a cloud which has out-wept its rain. — SHELLEY.

Faint.

Faint as a chicken's note that has the pip. — WILLIAM COWPER.

Faint as far-off bugles blowing. —
WILLIAM WALLACE HARNEY.

Fair.

Fair as milk. — LORD BYRON.

Fair as the maiden spring. — JOHN CARTER.

Fair as day in its first birth. — SIR
WILLIAM DAVENANT.

Fairer than the bud unfolding in a shower. — JOHN LOGAN.

Fair as Cupid's mother. — MOSES MENDES.

Fair as faith. — JOAQUIN MILLER.

Fair as the inhabitants of heaven. —
MARY PIX.

Fair and fresh as flowers in May. —
EDMUND SPENSER.

Fair as heaven or freedom won. —
SWINBURNE.

Fair as Paradise. — WORDSWORTH.

Faith

Our faith is too often like the mercury in the weather-glass ; it gets up high in fine weather ; in rough weather it sinks proportionally low. — ANON.

Faithful.

Faithful as angel guardians. — PLAY, "EMILIA," 1672.

Faithless.

Faithless as Don Giovanni in love. — PIERCE EGAN.

Faithless as the Muses' oaths. — EDMUND GOSSE.

Fall

Fall like a bullet spent. — CLINTON SCOLLARD.

False as a dentist's smile. — ANON.

Falser than the weeping crocodile. — DRYDEN.

False as harlot's tears. — THOMAS DUFFEY.

False as the loose coquet's inveigling airs. — JOHN GAY.

Falser than malice in the mouth of envy. — MARY PIX.

False as the fowler's artful snare. — TOBIAS SMOLLETT.

Fame

Men's fame is like their hair, which grows after they are dead, and with just as little use to them. — GEORGE VILLIERS.

Familiar.

Familiar as a town clock. — ANON.

Familiar as an old mistake. — EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON.

Fancy.

Fancy is like a butterfly, which must be delicately handled ; if rude fingers tamper with it, the bloom is rubbed off, and the gay insect perishes. — FREDERICK BOUTERWEK.

Fantastic.

It would be as fantastic for a housekeeper to comment upon a gentleman's absence as for a clock to remark upon not being wound up. — HENRY JAMES.

Fascinating.

Fascinating as a seed catalogue. — ANON.

Fascinating as the scene of the murder. — IBID.

Fascinating as a hanging or a dog-fight. — HENRY L. MENCKEN.

Fashion.

Fashion is like a shadow — fly from it and it follows you ; follow it and it flies from you. You can point your finger at it, but you can't put your finger on it. It is as much an affair of carriage as of clothes, and more an affair of the wearer, than of the tailor, haberdasher or bootmaker. — ANON.

Fast.

Fast as Jehu drove for a crown. — CHARLES CHURCHILL.

Fast as a clinched nail. — DOUGLAS JERROLD.

Fast as a cook cracks eggs. — THOMAS NASH.

Fast as a musical professor's fingers travel over the keys of a piano. — MARK TWAIN.

Fat as a balloon. — MARK TWAIN.

Fat as plenty. — HUGH WARD.

Fearful.

Fearful as degradation. — ANON.

Fearless.

Fearless as valour. — BARBARA HOOLE.

Feeble.

Feeble as a winter's fly. — EVELYN SCOTT.

Feeling.

About as much feeling as a milk trust has for babies. — ANON.

Feet.

His feet were like icicles in refrigerating stockings. — SIR FRANCIS C. BURNAND.

Felicity.

Many in this world run after felicity like an absent-minded man hunting for his hat while all the time it is on his head or in his hand. — SYDNEY SMITH.

Felt.

He felt like the symptoms on a medicine bottle. — GEORGE ADE.

Fermenting.

Fermenting like bungalow brew. — ARTHUR BAER.

Fettered.

Fettered to a pack of useless memories like a living person, to a corpse. — OUIDA.

Fictitious.

Fictitious as a sick man's dream. — HORACE.

Fidgety.

Fidgety, like a rabbit's nose — or a commuter. — DON MARQUIS.

Fierce.

Fierce as a shark. — ANON.

Fierce as a rat-catcher's dog at a sink-hole. — ALFRED CROWQUIL.

Look as fierce as if he took Gunpowder Snuff. — SAMUEL [Maggoty or Fiddler] JOHNSON.

Fierce as Frenzy's fevered blood. — SIR WALTER SCOTT.

Fierce as a pacifist in a passion. — H. G. WELLS.

Fiercer.

Fiercer than famine, war, or spotted pestilence. — NICHOLAS ROWE.

Figure.

A woman with a figure like a pouter pigeon. — JULIAN STREET.

A figure like a beer barrel. — OSCAR WILDE.

Fire.

The Irish . . . they will stand fire like a mutton chop. — PUNCH, 1850.

Firm.

Firm as Plymouth Rock. — ANON.

Planted firm like castles. — RICHARD JEFFERIES.

Stand firm as the foot of resolution. — THOMAS SOUTHERNE.

Firm as the pillars of the earth, and lasting. — WILLIAM THOMPSON.

Fits as a hollow fits its circle. — ANON.

Fits like a duck's foot in the mud. — IBID.

Fits like a glass eye. — IBID.

Fits like the skin on a sausage. — IBID.

Fits him as easily as his skin. — THOMAS HUGHES.

Fitted.

He was no more fitted to rule than a sea-serpent is competent to be an apothecary. — EDGAR SALTUS.

Fixed.

Fixed as the sun. — ERASMUS.

Fixed and unchangeable, as the pole star in heaven. — FRIEDRICH VON SCHILLER.

Fizzle.

The usual fizzle, like a mattoid blonde attempting to express emotion in a moving picture. — ANON.

Flabbergasting.

Flabbergasting as the amorous glance of a lady embalmer. — HENRY L. MENCKEN.

Flapped.

Flapped like a loose top-sail in a gale of wind. — JOSEPH C. LINCOLN.

Flashed.

Flashed like long pear earrings. — GEORGE W. BAGBY.

Flashed like a mirror played at the face of the sun. — HENRY JAMES.

Flash like a live wire flopping against an iron rail. — EDISON MARSHALL.

Flash'd like Gun-Powder. — COTTON MATHER.

Flat.

Flat as if an English tank had happened along and sat down on him. — ANON.

Flat as a waiter's feet. — ARTHUR BAER.

Flat as last night's beer. — LOUIS UNTERMEYER.

Flattery.

Flattery is like the smoke of incense ; it defiles the object it pretends to adore. — ANON.

Flattery is like champagne, it soon gets into the head. — WILLIAM BROWN

Flattery is like wine, which exhilarates a man for a moment, but usually ends by going to his head and making him act foolish. — HELEN ROWLAND.

I was not accustomed to flattery. I was rather like the Hoosier with the gingerbread — who reckoned he loved it better than any man, and got less of it. — ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Fleeting.

Fleeting as a ferryboat shoe-shine. — F. P. ADAMS.

Flexible.

Flexible as a diplomat's conscience. — ANON.

Flickered.

Flickered like a candle in a wind. — HENRY JAMES.

Flippant.

Flippant as a man-milliner. — WILLIAM CHARLES MACREADY.

Flippant as a Court Coquet in Tragedy. — JAMES RALPH.

Flopped.

Fluent as a rill that wanders silver-footed down a hill. — ANON.

Flopped like the ears of a dog. — EDGAR ALLAN POE.

Fluttered.

Fluttered on her lips like a drop of dew on a flower. — VICTOR HUGO.

Fluttering down like a hooded hawk. — SIR PHILIP SIDNEY.

Fly.

Fly like a thief from the gallows. — TOBIAS SMOLLETT.

Foamed.

Foaming at the mouth like a cream-puff. — ANON.

The sea foamed like the mouth of madness. — GEORGE MEREDITH.

Foggy.

Foggy . . . as the wraith of a jelly fish dipped in ink. — ANON.

Foggy as Blackfriar's bridge on Lord Mayor's day. — LEIGH HUNT.

Folded.

He folded up like a Pocket Camera.
— GEORGE ADE.

The handsome immigrant [Georges Carpentier, pugilist] folded up like a violin stand. — ARTHUR BAER.

Folds.

Full of folds as a sleeping boa-constrictor. — WILLIAM MATHEWS.

Folly.

A woman to be suspected of folly is as a bracelet of gold upon the wrist ; but to be convicted of wrong-doing is a handcuff whereof the grip is iron. — GELETT BURGESS.

Fool.

A Fool in an elevated position is like a man in a ballroom — everybody appears little to him, and he appears little to everybody. — PUNCH, 1856.

Foolish.

Foolish as the fly that mistook a spider's web for a full set of whiskers. — ANON.

Foolish as to cut off the head to preserve the hair. — IBID.

Foolish as to expect a snake to hatch out a rope. — IBID.

Foolish as to judge a horse by its harness. — IBID.

Foolish as to cast missiles at a rat in the vicinity of a priceless piece of porcelain. — LI HUNG CHANG.

Forlorn.

Forlorn as an unmated coon. — J. R. BARTLETT'S "DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS," 1877.

Fortune.

Fortune is like a coquette ; if you don't run after her, she will run after you. — JOSH BILLINGS.

We treat fortune like a mistress ; the more she yields, the more we demand. — MME. ROLAND.

Freckles.

Freckles, like rust spots. — WILLA CATHER.

Free.

Free as the grace of God and twice as plentiful. — ANON.

Free as the butterfly. — W. H. HUDSON.

A hand as free as that of a compositor scattering type. — HENRY JAMES.

Free as fish that glide through the deep. — THOMAS KILLIGREW.

Free as the birds among the flowers and sunshine. — AUGUST STRINDBERG.

Free as Nature is. — JAMES THOMSON.

The diplomatists at Vienna . . . thought themselves as free to carve up the world as one is free to carve up such a boneless structure as a cheese. — H. G. WELLS.

Freedom.

Freedom is like drink. If you take anny at all ye might as well take enough to make you happy f'r awhile. — FINLEY PETER DUNNE.

Fresh.

Fresh as English bowling-green. — BALZAC.

Fresh as to-morrow. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Fresh as an unveiled statue. — HENRY JAMES.

Fresh as in the month of May. — LYLY.

She freshened up like a wilted violet in water. — FRANK R. ADAMS.

Friend.

A bad friend is like a smith, who if he does not burn you with fire will injure you with smoke. — ANON.

A cheerful friend is like a sunny day, which sheds its brightness on all around ; and most of us can, as we choose, make of this world either a palace or a prison. — SIR JOHN LUBBOCK.

Friendship

Friendship is a good deal like China ; it is very beautiful and durable as long as it is quite whole ; break it and all the cement in the world will never quite repair the damage. — ANON.

Friendship, like the immortality of the soul, is too good to be believed. — R. W. EMERSON.

An old friendship is like old wine ; the longer it lasts the stronger it grows. — ANTONIO PEREZ.

A hollow friendship is like a hollow tooth — it's always best to have it out at once. — PUNCH, 1862.

Many men that pretend friendship, they are like the shadow of the bodie, they follow a man while the sun of prosperitie shines : but if a cloud of adversity hide that sun, those shadows are gone. — THOMAS SHELTON'S "A CENTURIE OF SIMILES," 1640.

Frightful.

Frightful, like funerals. — MAY SENECLAIR.

Frigid.

Frigid and academic as a painted nude in a blizzard. — JAMES G. HUNEFER.

Gay as a parade. — HILDA CONKLING.

Gay as paradise, when first its sweetness bloomed. — EDWARD HOWARD.

Gay as a tea-store chromo. — JOSEPH C. LINCOLN.

Gay as a frigate's pennant. — HERMAN MELVILLE.

Gazing.

Gazing at me in a way in which the damned gaze out of their cauldrons of boiling pitch at some soul walking scot free in the place of torment. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Generous.

Generous as the man who would give you the sleeves out of his vest. — ANON.

Genial.

About as genial and communicative as a maiden aunt over a married sister's new dress. — A. S. M. HUTCHINSON.

Genius.

A genius without vices is like a race horse without a good jockey. — BENJAMIN DE CASSERES.

Genius, in one respect, is like gold ; numbers of persons are constantly writing about both, who have neither. — C. C. COLTON.

Gentle.

Gentle as the falling tear. — THOMAS CHATTERTON.

Gentle as a glove. — CONGREVE.

Gentle as bridal smiles. — SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT.

Gentle as an apostle. — EDMOND ROSTAND.

Goad.

Goad him like an untractable donkey. — GEORGE CRUIKSHANK'S "COMIC ALMANACK," 1847.

Golden.

Kinder golden, like the hair o' them British Blondes that was here in the Variety Show. — BRET HARTE.

Gone.

Gone, like the life from a busted balloon;
Gone, like the soul from a ruptured bassoon;

Gone, like the sheen of a pock-pitted cheek;

Gone, like our change at the close of the week.

— PALMER COX.

Gone as a dream is gone from a dreamer waked with a shout. — LORD DUNSANY.

Good.

Good as a glass of sherry in front of a wood fire. — WILLIAM ROSE BENÉT.

Good out of the world, as out of fashion. — THOMAS FULLER, M. D., "GNOMOLOGIA," 1732.

Gorgeous.

Gorgeous as the gold of sunset. — CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL.

Gossip.

Confirmed gossips are like connoisseurs of cheese: the stuff they relish must be stout. — HOLMAN DAY.

Governments.

Governments are like men, more or less suspicious according to their temperament. — PUNCH, 1844.

Government is not reason, it is not eloquence, it is force; like fire, a troublesome servant and a fearful master. Never for a moment should it be left to irresponsible action. — GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Graceful.

Graceful as Diana when she draws her bow. — LORD BYRON.

Graceful as the swallow's flight. — JULIAN GRENFELL.

About as graceful as a hippopotamus. — W. CAREW HAZLITT.

Grave as an old abess. — SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT.

Grave as Spain. — JOHN GAY.

Grave as a wintry sea. — JOHN OLIVER HOBBS.

Grave, but satisfied, like a widower. — GORDON ARTHUR SMITH.

Grave as a society of bearers. — WESTMINSTER REVIEW, January, 1856.

Gravity.

There is a false gravity that is a very ill symptom ; and it may be said that as rivers, which run very slowly, have always the most mud at the bottom, so a solid stiffness in the constant course of a man's life is a sign of a thick bed of mud at the bottom of his brain. — SIR GEORGE SAVILE.

Greedily.

Greedily as a puritan hunting vice. — LAWRENCE GILMAN.

Green.

Green as a Sinn Feiner's conception of heaven. — WASHINGTON STAR, September, 1919.

A rangy Person with a Head the shape of a Rocky Ford Cantaloupe. — GEORGE ADE.

Head like a peeled onion. — ANON.

A head on him like a lima bean. — IBID.

A Chinaman is a vastly conservative person, and his head is constructed after the manner of certain fish — traps, into which, now and again, something may stray, but out of which nothing that has once entered can ever pass. — SIR HUGH CLIFFORD.

A head shaped like a alligator pear. — FINLEY PETER DUNNE.

A round bald head, like the egg of an ostrich. — WASHINGTON IRVING.

Heart.

The heart of man is like a creeping plant, which withers unless it has something around which it can entwine. — CHARLES JAMES APPERLEY.

The heart of a young woman in love is like a golden sanctuary which often enshrines an idol of clay. — PAULIN LIMAYRAC.

The human heart is like a millstone in a mill : when you put wheat under it, it turns and grinds and bruises the wheat to flour ; if you put no wheat, it still grinds on, but then 'tis itself it grinds and wears away. — MARTIN LUTHER.

A man's heart, like an automobile, is always apt to skid and ditch him just at the psychological moment when he thinks he has it under perfect control. — HELEN ROWLAND.

A man's heart is like a sponge, just soaked with emotions and sentiment of which he can squeeze a little bit out for every pretty woman. — IBID.

Heaving.

Heaving like a counterpane upon a restless sleeper. — THOMAS HARDY.

Helpless.

Helpless as a Sultana made ready for the Bosphorus. — MAX BEERBOHM.

Helpless . . . as a hooked fish swinging to land. — THOMAS HARDY.

Helpless as a plant without water. — F. HOPKINSON SMITH.

Helter-Skelter.

Piled helter-skelter like packages from a bundle chute. — DIAL, August, 1920.

The humorist's like a man firin' at a target — he doesna ken whether he hits or no till them at the target tells 'im. — SIR JAMES M. BARRIE.

Husbands.

Husbands, like governments, must never admit that they are in the wrong. — BALZAC.

The husband, like a loaded ass, must drag on the heavy burthen, till death alone relieves him. — FIELDING.

Husbands are like motor cars : All are good the first year. — CHANNING POLLOCK.

An husband, like unto religion and medicine, must be taken with blind faith. — HELEN ROWLAND.

Hush.

An immense hush, like a dusky silence in a cathedral aisle. — DOROTHY CANFIELD.

Hushed as when the Host is lifted. — EDITH WHARTON.

IIdeals.

Ideals, like comets, revisit the earth periodically after a long cycle of years — always excepting the enormous ideas that so many sublime donkeys entertain of themselves. — PUNCH, 1859.

Ideals are like stars ; you will not succeed in touching them with your hands, but like the seafaring man on the desert of waters, if you choose them as your guides and follow them you reach your destiny. — CARL SCHURZ.

Ideas.

Ideas of your own are like babies. They are all right if you can keep them quiet. — ANON.

An idea, like a ghost (according to the common notion of ghosts), must be spoken to a little before it will explain itself. — DICKENS.

Old ideas, like old clothes, put carefully away, come out again after a time almost as good as new. — PUNCH, 1856.

Identical.

Identical . . . as two reproductions of the same cinema film. — WILLIAM J. LOCKE.

His kiss was like a flash of lightning. — HENRY JAMES.

Kiss (Verb).

Kissing her is like tasting a sherbet. — JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER.

Kittens.

Kittens, like Japanese and Negro babies, may lose some of their charm when they grow older, but as kittens they are paramount. — CARL VAN VECHTEN.

Knocked.

His heart knocked like a Ford car trying to climb the roof of a Methodist church. — GELETT BURGESS.

Know.

He knew about as much about navigation as a fly in a milk pan. — MARTHA BAKER DUNN.

Knowledge.

Many people think of knowledge as of money. They would like knowledge, but cannot face the perseverance and self-denial that go to the acquisition of it. — JOHN VISCOUNT MORLEY.

LLaborious.

Laborious as idleness. — LOUIS IV.

Lakes.

Lakes in a beautiful country are like silver ornaments on a lovely dress, like liquid gems in a beautiful setting, or bright eyes in a lovely face. — SIR JOHN LUBBECK.

Lean as a vegetarian's cat. — ANON.

Learning.

Learning, like a river, beginneth in a little stream. — ANON.

Legs.

She had legs like an hour-glass. — ANON.

Letter.

An elegant letter is like a meadow enameled with flowers. — IBN AL BAWWAB.

Librarian.

The Librarian may be just compared with him who keeps an Armoury of Weapons; for as the Keeper doth neither forge the implements of War, nor employ them in the field of Battle, so neither doth the Librarian compose the learn'd Works which are under his charge, nor use their wisdom in his own special interest. But like that Keeper, Librarian — continued.

it is his Duty to see that his Armoury (which is the Library) be well stock'd with the fittest Weapons, and that they be put into the hands of such as can use them at proper time. — EDMUND L. PEARSON'S "THE OLD LIBRARIAN'S ALMANAC," 1774.¹

Lie (Verb).

Lie like a dentist. — ANON.

Lies like an affidavit. — IBID.

Lies like a gas-meter. — "NOTES AND QUERIES," VIII, XII. 5.

Life.

Life is more like wrestling than dancing ; it must be ready to keep its feet against all onsets, however unexpected. — MARCUS AURELIUS.

Life is like playing a violin solo in public and learning the instrument as one goes on. — SAMUEL BUTLER, 1835-1902.

Life is like an onion — you peel off layer after layer and then you find there is nothing in it. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Life often seems like a long shipwreck, of which the débris are friendship, glory, and love ; the shores of existence are strewn with them — MME. DE STAËL.

Light.

Light as morning cobwebs on the grass. — AUSTIN DOBSON.

Lightly.

Responsibilities rested upon him as lightly as the freckles on his nose. — ALICE CALDWELL HEGAN.

Like.

Much like another as one print of a mimeograph is like its original. — ANON.

My playing is no more like hers than a lamp is like sunshine. — JANE AUSTEN.

So like to one another that we can less discern an egg from an egg or a fig from a fig. — THOMAS BECON.

Like as star to star. — ANTHONY BREWER.

He is like him as if he were spit out of his mouth. — THOMAS DRAXE'S "TREASURIE OF ANCIENT ADAGES," 1633.

About as much like a water-fall as a canvas-covered ham is like a cataract. — MARK TWAIN.

Like as two drops of water. — JAMES MILLER.

Likeness.

The same manifest likeness between Tailings, the father, and Tailings, the son, as there is between Her Most Gracious Majesty's profile on a half-crown, and Her Most Gracious Majesty's profile on a half-penny ; the same square Tailings face, the same Tailings pug nose, the same little ferrety eye, the same sly mouth, above all, the same beautiful bow-legs, so inviting to a headstrong run-a-way pig to pop through. — R. S. SURTEES.

Limber.

Limber as a yard of tripe. — IRVIN S. COBB.

Limp.

Limp as a cold storage chicken. — ALINE KILMER.

Lost as a sob in the midst of cheering. — SARA TEASDALE.

Love.

Love is like a cold. Easy to catch but hard to cure. — ANON.

Love is like soup — it cools when the fire dies out. — IBID.

Love is like the devil ; he whom it has in its clutches it surrounds with flames. — BALZAC.

In love, regardless of the soul, a woman is like a lyre that only yields its secrets to him who is a skillful player. — IBID.

Love — continued.

Falling in love is like being thrown from a horse ; if you let yourself go it doesn't hurt as badly as if you try to save yourself. — EDWIN L. BLANCHARD.

Love is like a lounge cushion — it has to be stuffed with illusions and patched with laughter before one can rest on it. — BENJAMIN DE CASSERES.

His love is like unto a tapster's glasse that is broken with every touch. — ROBERT GREENE.

Love is like the measles ; we all have to go through it. — J. K. JEROME.

Love is like a cigar — the longer it burns the less it becomes. — PUNCH, 1855.

Love, like a chicken salad or restaurant hash, must be taken with blind faith or it loses all its flavor. — HELEN ROWLAND.

Going through life without love is like going through a good dinner without an appetite — everything seems flat and tasteless. — IBID.

Love is like a painter, who in drawing the picture of a friend having a blemish in one eye, would picture only the other side of the face. — ROBERT SOUTH.

Love is exactly like war in this — that a soldier, though he has escaped three weeks complete on Saturday night, may nevertheless be shot through his heart on Sunday morning. — LAURENCE STERNE.

Love is like what is called the Milky Way in Heaven, a brilliant mass formed by thousands of little stars, of which each perhaps is nebulous. — STENDHAL.

Love hit Elmer like a hod of bricks dropped on a plug hat from the top of the Woolworth Building. — HUGH WILEY.

Lovely.

Lovely as a dream in marble. — BAUDELAIRE.

Lovely as a violin. — JOSEPHINE PRESTON PEABODY.

Lover.

An old lover is as winter without flowers. — THOMAS DRAXE'S "TREASURY OF ANCIENT ADAGES," 1633.

Luminous.

Golden fire in a porcelain vase would not be more luminous than the soul of that actress [Adelaide Neilson] as it shone through her ideal of Juliet. — WILLIAM WINTER.

MMan.

Some men are like the Einstein Theory ; nobody at home understands them. — ANON.

Some men, like modern shops, hang everything in their show windows ; when one goes inside, nothing is to be found. — BERTHOLD AUERBACH.

Man is like a napkin, the more neatly the housewife doubles him, the more carefully she lays him on the shelf. Neither can a man once doubled know how often he may be doubled. Not only his wife folds him in two, but every child quarters him into a new double, till what was a wife and handsome substance, large enough for anything in reason, dwindles into a pitiful square that will not cover one platter — all puckers and creases — smaller and smaller with every double — with every double a new crease. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Most men are like eggs, too full of themselves to hold anything else. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Man — continued.

Great men are like mountains ; we do not appreciate their magnitude while we are still close to them. — JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN.

Man is like a bit of Labrador spar, which has no lustre as you turn it in your hand, until you come to a particular angle, then it shows deep and beautiful colors. — RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

Men are like strange dogs . . . Walk right up to them, bold as life, and they're as gentle as ducks. — OWEN JOHNSON.

Men, like pictures, must be viewed on a favorable day. — NAPOLEON I.

Men, like jewels, require a setting. A clerk on a high stool, poring over a ledger, is not unimpressive, or a cook over her stove. But place the cook on the stool, poring over the ledger! — MARY ROBERTS RINEHART.

A man is like a cat ; chase him and he'll run ; sit still and ignore him and he'll come purring at your feet. — HELEN ROWLAND.

A man is like a pigeon. Give him plenty to eat, a comfortable house and the freedom of the whole wide world to fly about in and he will never desert you — for long. — IBID.

Men are like the earth and we are the moon ; we turn always one side to them, and they think there is no other, because they don't see it — but there is. — OLIVE SCHREINER.

Some men are like rifles with plenty of powder but no bullet ; they have a great flow of language but no thought. — SYLVANIUS STALL.

It is with men as with horses : those who do the most prancing make the least progress. — BARON DE STAS-SART.

Man in this life is like one who stands with one foot on a board and with the other on the ground. As soon as reason awakens in him, he sees that the board on which he all but stepped hangs over a precipice, and is not only bending and cracking, but is already falling down ; he then shifts his weight to the other leg, which is on the ground. How then can one help being afraid, if one is standing on that which is bending, cracking and falling down, and what can one fear if one stands on that onto which everything falls and below which one cannot fall? — LEO TOLSTOY.

Men are like bricks, alike, but placed high or low by chance. — JOHN WEBSTER

Manners.

The kind, generous souls, who are rough and almost insulting in their manners, are like the rich man, who, when solicited to relieve his poor relations, used to fling his old clothes at them, taking good care to secrete money in the pockets. — PUNCH, 1856.

Many.

Although there may be as many devils in Worms as there are tiles on the housetops, I will go. — MARTIN LUTHER.

As many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although this sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware in England. — SHAKESPEARE.

Marriage.

Marriage is like a besieged fortress ; those without want to get in and those within want to get out. — ANON.

Marriage is like a department store. It is all over when you buy. — IBID.

Marriage is like a Paris gown. The more you pay for it the less there's to it. — IBID.

Marriage is like a river. It is easier to fall in than out. — IBID.

A bad marriage is like consumption. It is better to prevent it because later you can't cure it. — IBID.

Marriage — continued.

Marriage is like twirling a baton, turning handsprings or eating with chopsticks ; it looks so easy till you try it. — HELEN ROWLAND.

Marriage resembles a pair of shears, so joined that they cannot be separated ; often moving in opposite directions, yet always punishing any one who comes between them. — SYDNEY SMITH.

Marry.

For an old man to marry a young girl is like buying a new book for somebody else to read. — ANON.

Marrying.

Marrying a woman for her munny is vera mutch like setting a rat-trap, and baiting it with yure own finger. — JOSH BILLINGS.

To marry a woman merely for her person is buying an empty vessel : and a woman is a vessel which a man will grow cursed weary of in a long voyage. — HENRY FIELDING.

Massive.

The building looked as massive as a large woman in a one-piece bathing suit. — ANON.

Matrimony.

Matrimony, like a dip in the sea, first stimulates, then chills. But once out of the water the call of the ocean lures the bather to another plunge. — ANON.

Matrimony is like motoring, because it's really travelling by means of a series of explosions. — ARTHUR STRINGER.

Mean.

So mean he'd make dice out of the knuckle-bones of his aunt. — ANON.

So mean that he would rob a cuspidor. — IBID.

So mean he would steal a dead fly from a blind spider. — IBID.

Mean as the man who skimmed his milk on the top, and, turning it over, skimmed it on the bottom. — IBID.

Mean as the man who told his children that Santa Claus is dead. — IBID.

Mean as the man who insisted on getting sleeves with his vests. — ARTHUR BAER.

Mean enough to steal acorns from a blind hog. — J. R. BARTLETT'S "DICTIONARY OF AMERICANISMS," 1877.

Mechanical.

Mechanical as a levee at St. James's Palace. — HENRY ADAMS.

Meek.

Meek as a Quaker. — PUNCH, 1863.

Melancholy.

Melancholy as a bass viol in a concert. — ROBERT GREEN.

Melancholy as a fiddle with one string. — THOMAS HOLCROFT.

Melancholy as a hairpin on a tombstone. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Melancholy as a sick monkey. — JOHN LEANERD.

Melancholy as a discarded statesman. — WILLIAM MOUNTFORD.

Memory.

Memory is a delicate instrument. Like an old musical box it will lie silent for long years ; then a mere nothing, a jerk, a tremor, will start the spring, and from beneath its decent covering of dust it will talk to us of forgotten passion and desire. — THOMAS BURKE.

Memory is like the Moon ; it hath its new, its full, and its wane. — DUCHESS OF NEWCASTLE.

Menacing.

Menacing as metal. — VANCE THOMPSON.

Mendacious.

Mendacious as a real estate agent. —
DON MARQUIS.

Merry.

Merry as bees in clover. — ANON.

Merry as a Christmas tree. —
JOSEPH C. LINCOLN.

Methodical as a policeman on his beat. — ANON.

Methodical as a tailor. — EDWARD HOWARD.

Mexican.

A Mexican must look like a toadstool t' a aviator. — ABE MARTIN.

Mild

Mild as Mercy looking on Repentance's tear. — ROBERT POLLOK.

Mild as the star-beam on the silent wave. — ANNA A. SEWARD.

Mild as the angelic guardian of the blest. — JANE WEST.

Milk

Modern milk is like a bank-note, — not current without a water mark. —
SKETCH (London), January 11, 1922.

Milky Way.

The Milky Way — which I think looks exactly like a torn wreath of tulle with diamonds. — SIR HARRY JOHN-STON.

Mind

He had a mind like the face of a great Cathedral clock, — but with a Waterbury movement. — ANON.

Your mind is like a sun-dial. It records only pleasantness. — IBID.

The mind is like a merchant's ledger ;
it requires to be continually posted up to the latest date. — PHILIP GILBERT HAMERTON.

My mind is like a flogged horse — it won't give another kick. — HENRY
JAMES.

Some minds are like trunks — packed tight with knowledge, no air and plenty of moths. — LIFE, January 31, 1918.

The human mind, both in persons and societies, is like a pendulum, which, the moment it has reached the limit of its swing in one direction, goes inevitably back as far as the other side and so on forever. — J. R. LOWELL.

My mind is like the Panama Canal.
Great ocean-going ideas
Lie moored in the locks
Until my thoughts rise to the level
Where they can proceed.
Every now and then
There is a brain-slide
In the Culebra cut.
And all the traffic is halted.

— CHRISTOPHER MORLEY.

The human mind should be like a good hotel — open the year round. —
WILLIAM LYON PHELPS.

Many minds are like low-grade ores — there is gold in them, but it takes a vast deal of labor to get it out. —
JOHN ALFRED SPENDER.

The mind is like a slate, — one thing gets rubbed out for another. — SAM SLICK.

Mirth

Mirth, and even cheerfulness, when employed as remedies in low spirits, are like hot water to a frozen limb. —
DR. BENJAMIN RUSH.

Miserable.

Miserable as a wet dog shivering dejectedly in a rain-swept alley. —
E. D. PRICE.

Missed

Missed more chances than a farmer at a circus raffle. — ARTHUR BAER.

Mistake.

A mistake is like a mule, not always distinguishable from a horse in front, but known beyond doubt by acquaintance with its kicking qualities. — NEW YORK SUN, 1918.

Modesty.

Modesty, in a woman, is like the angel's flaming sword, to keep vile men out of the paradise of their chastity. — OWEN FELTHAM.

Modesty is like virtue; suspected only when it is advertised. — DOUGLAS MALLOCH.

Money.

Money is in some respects like fire; it is a very excellent servant, but a terrible master. — P. T. BARNUM.

Money is shaped like a wheel; it rolls to some, from others; but seldom is at rest. — EDWARD PARSONS DAY.

Money, like a boot, when it's tight, is extremely trying. — PUNCH, 1864.

Monotonous.

Monotonous as an animated electric sign. — ANON.

Monotonous as a London suburb. — IBID.

Monotonous as a metronome. — GEORGE JEAN NATHAN.

Monotonous as a million one-dollar bills. — ROBERT ROE.

Moon.

The moon drowsed between the trees like a great yellow moth. — ANON.

The moon, like a gardenia in the night's buttonhole. — MAX BEERBOHM.

The moon like a big goldfish bowl. — GRACE HAZARD CONKLIN.

This resplendent luminary, like a youth on the Fourth of July, has its first quarter; like a ruined spendthrift, its last quarter; and, like an omnibus, is occasionally full and new. The evenings on which it appears between these last stages are beautifully illumined by its clear, mellow light. — JOHN PHOENIX.

O yellow moon,
Drifting across the night,
As a rakish pirate brig
Tattered of rig
And ghostly white
Goes floating down the black lagoon
Of a dead sea.

— LEW SARETT.

Mothers-in-law.

Mothers-in-law, like cats, show a great attachment to the houses they inhabit, without caring much for the persons who inhabit them. — PUNCH, 1859.

Motives.

Motives are like harlequins; there is always a second dress beneath the first. — JACOB JAN ARTEVOLD.

More.

More money than the telephone company's got wrong numbers. — SAM HELLMAN.

Motionless.

Motionless as a stone above a grave. — WILLIAM WETMORE STOREY.

Mountains.

Mountains like frozen wrinkles on a sea. — ANON.

The mountains are like crouching camels. — MILTON RAISON.

Mouth.

He has a mouth like a slit in the sidewalk. — ANON.

Her mouth opened like a folding bed. — IBID.

His mouth, thin and straight, like a cut in his face. — BALZAC.

What a hideous, odd-looking man Sydney Smith is! With a mouth like Mouth — continued.

an oyster, and three double chins. —
MRS. W. H. BROOKFIELD.

A mouth like a vent in an oyster-man's cantern. — "CRUIKSHANK AT HOME," 1845.

A mouth like a crack in the pavement. — SEWELL FORD.

A mouth cut like a scallop in a pie. —
EDGAR LEE MASTERS.

Mouth like a rent in an old, battered purse. — FREDERICK O'BRIEN.

The curve of her mouth was like blood upon snow. — ARTHUR TRAIN.

A mouth as open as the North Atlantic. — H. C. WITWER.

Music.

Music is like soft hands stealing into ours in the dark, and holding us fast without a spoken word. — ANON.

Musik, after all, is sumthing like vittels, the more cooking and seasoning we use, the more we have to hav, till after a while we kant enjoy annything ov the vittels but the pepper. — Opera don't have enny more loosening effect on me, than caster ile wud on a graven image. — JOSH BILLINGS.

It is like eating vanilla cream in Paradise, listening to beautiful music.
— CAMILLE LEMONNIER.

Musical.

Musical as a pumpkin rolling down a barn floor. — ANON.

Musical as the air whistling through a maiden's teeth at the end of a long adhesive kiss. — HENRY L. MENCKEN.

Mustache.

A mustache like a walrus. — ABE MARTIN.

A mustache like a pump with two handles. — IBID.

A little black mustache like an eyebrow. — GEORGE DU MAURIER.

A white mustache, cut short like a worn-out brush. — HENRY JAMES.

NNaked.

Naked as an egg. — ANON.

Naked as Eve ere she the apple ate.
— ALFRED DE MUSSET.

Naked as a soul for judgment. —
SIR AUBREY DE VERE.

Naked as a cornet solo. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Naked as a poulterer's capon. —
PUNCH, 1842.

Naked as the moon. — GEORGE STERLING.

Naked as the sun at noon. — JAMES THOMSON.

Naked as Adam. — THOMAS WARD.

Naked as a fish. — HUGH WILEY.

Names.

Some people have names like pitchforks, some people have names like cakes,

Names full of sizzling esses like a family quarrel of snakes,

Names black as a cat, vermilion as the cockscomb of a fool,

But your name is a green small garden,
a rush asleep in a pool.

— STEPHEN VINCENT BENÉT.

A German with a name like a lady's sneeze. — WILLIAM MCFEE.

Natural.

It's just as natural for lawyers tu lie, as it is for a white-hared young one's nose tu run. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Natural — continued.

Natural . . . as the passion for air, or food, or drink. — STEPHEN McKENNA.

Near.

Near as twilight is to darkness. — THOMAS PAINE.

Near now as June is to May. — SWINBURNE.

Near as death to life. — SIR AUBREY DE VERE.

Neat.

Neat as a handbox. — ANON.

Neat as a coffin. — IBID.

About as neat as a coal-heaver's nails. — PHILADELPHIA LEDGER, October 9, 1922.

Neatly.

Picked up as neatly as if he had been prodded by a fork, swallowed down straight, and ground into small pieces. — HENRY JAMES.

Necessary.

Necessary as a handsaw to a carpenter. — ANON.

Necessary for man's life as water, air and fire. — RICHARD R. EDWARDS.

Necessary to me as honey to the bee or hell to the Christians. — HENRY L. MENCKEN.

Necessity.

As much a necessity as poverty is to incompetents. — BEN HECHT.

Need.

Doesn't need it any more than a dog needs a pocket handkerchief. — ANON.

Nervous.

Nervous as a high-school valedictorian. — ARTHUR BAER.

Nervous as a commuter in the third act of Parsifal. — ORSON LOWELL.

New.

New as dollar bills. — PADRAIC COLUM.

New as a morning. — D. H. LAWRENCE.

Newspaper.

An off-colored newspaper is like that kind of a woman. A man might not care to be seen in a café with it, but taking it home is something else again. — ANON.

Nimble.

Nimble as a woman to a dance. — E. BARRINGTON.

Noiseless.

Noiseless as the fall of snow. — ANON.

Noiseless as the tread of a kitten in a molasses factory. — BENJAMIN DE CASERES.

Noisy.

Noisy as a trunkmaker. — ANON.

Noisy as iron waves splashing and dashing on an iron ocean. — IBID.

Noisy as the prompter at the opera. — IBID.

Noisy as the testing room of a base-drum factory. — IBID.

Noisy as two skeletons having a wrestling match on a tin roof. — IBID.

Noisy as the Stock Exchange. — AUGUSTINE BIRELL.

Noisy as a barracks on pay-day night. — STARS AND STRIPES, Paris, 1918.

Nose.

A nose like a sponge. — MAXIM GORKY.

Blows his nose with a noise like the falling of a tree. — DAVID GRAYSON.

A large nose like a trumpet. — EDWARD LEAR.

His nose stuck out like the first joint of a thumb. — FREDERICK O'BRIEN Nose — continued.

A nose like a Bartlett pear. — JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

His nose sprang out of the big face like an ejaculation. — H. M. TOMLINSON.

Novel.

The charm of a novel is like the charm of a woman reserved for special sympathies and beings. — JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER.

A novel is like a bow — the violin which gives out the sound is the soul of the reader. — STENDHAL.

Nude.

Nude as a star. — FRANCES S. SALTUS.

Numerous.

Numerous as a bank or trust company's vice-presidents. — NEW YORK TRIBUNE, January 6, 1921.

OObstinacy.

Obstinacy is like red hair : there is no cure for it but to die. — JOSH BILLINGS.

Obvious.

Obvious as gestures. — STEPHEN CRANE.

Odorless.

Odorless as a Congressional investigation. — GEORGE ADE.

One-sided.

One-sided as a tramp's heels. — ARTHUR BAER.

Open.

Open as the brain of a maiden the day after her marriage. — BALZAC.

Open to observation as the coops at a dog show. — SINCLAIR LEWIS.

Firpo was as open as an umbrella. — NEAL O'HARA.

Opposite.

Opposite as yea and nay. — FRANCIS QUARLES.

Opposition.

A fierce, turbulent opposition, like the north wind, only serves to make a man wrap his notions about him. — SAMUEL CROXALL.

Tremendous opposition . . . taking a paving stone to crush a fly ; or raising a whirlwind to blow out a farthing candle. — PUNCH, 1849.

Out of Place.

Felt as out of place as an Elk at Oxford. — PERCY HAMMOND.

Overdone.

Everything was as overdone as a soubrette taking supper at Rector's. — GEORGE HORACE LORIMER.

Overloaded.

Overloaded as a Ford on Sunday. — ANON.

PPadded.

The catcher is padded like an arm chair. — LONDON TIMES, 1918.

Painful.

Painful as kicking a burglar with your bare foot. — ABE MARTIN.

Pale.

Pale like white wine. — SIR KENELM DIGBY.

Pale as Christmas roses. — NORA HOPPER.

She turned as pale as if she had heard of the landing, there on her coast, of a foreign army. — HENRY JAMES.

Passed.

Passed like a flivver in a Vanderbilt Cup race. — ARTHUR BAER.

Passionate.

About as passionate as shredded wheat. — LAWRENCE GILMAN.

Passionless.

Passionless as a clam. — GERTRUDE ATHERTON.

Passionless as algebra. — EDGAR SALTUS.

Passions.

Passions are like the trout in my pond : one devours another until only one fat old trout is left. — PRINCE HERBERT BISMARCK.

Our wild passions are like so many lawyers wrangling and bawling at a bar ; discretion is the lord-keeper of man that sits as judge, and moderates their contestations. — OWEN FELTHAM.

The passions, like the managers of a playhouse, often force men upon parts without consulting their judgment, and sometimes without any regard to their talents. — FIELDING.

Passive.

Passive as a bronze Buddha! — ANON.

Pathetic.

Pathetic as an octogenarian messenger boy. — CHARLOTTE LEBEAU.

Patient.

Patient as hat-racks. — ANON.

Patient as a prostitute. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Peaceful.

Peaceful as Socrates. — ANON.

Peaceful as a London suburb on bank holiday. — LONDON CHRONICLE, 1917.

Peacefully.

Rested as peacefully as a night nurse on duty. — ANON.

Pedants.

Pedants who prescribe pleasantries are like cripples who decry dancing. — PUNCH, 1856.

Penmanship.

His penmanship looks like the autograph of a dying spider which has paid a surreptitious visit to the ink bottle. — ANON.

His penmanship looks like the lid of a Chinese tea chest. — IBID.

His penmanship looks like the marks that might be made by a kangaroo jumping out of a mud puddle and splashing a pillow sham with its tail. — IBID.

Pep.

Full of pep as an electric fan. — ANON.

Perfect.

Perfect as a sonnet. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Perfunctory.

Perfunctory as an officer's return salute to a Y. M. man. — STARS AND STRIPES, Paris, 1918.

Perilous.

Perilous as T N T. — ANON.

Personal.

About as personal as an amputated limb. — GERTRUDE ATHERTON.

Personality.

He had no more physical personality than a consulted thermometer. — HENRY JAMES.

Persons.

Some persons, like certain paintings, appear to advantage at a distance. — MARY G. HORSFORD.

Persons extremely difficult are like old enameled watches, which had painted covers that hindered your seeing what o'clock it was. — HORACE WALPOLE.

Phantasmagoric.

Phantasmagoric, like a prismatic reflection or a serial novel. — HENRY JAMES.

Pieces.

He went to pieces like a fifty-cent umbrella in a gale. — ANON.

Pinch.

Pinch like a new shoe. — ANON.

Pinch like a painless dentist. — IBID.

Pit-a-pat.

His heart going pit-a-pat, like a duck's foot in mud. — GEORGE MOORE.

Place.

Out of place as gasoline in a fire extinguisher. — H. C. WITWER.

Plain.

Plain as a famous beauty before breakfast. — ANON.

Plain as the chalk marks on the schoolhouse fence. — DON MARQUIS.

Plain as a sheep's nose. — F. BERKELEY SMITH.

Plainly.

Plainly as the man of science finds evolution in the physical universe. — "A GENTLEMAN WITH A DUSTER."

Plays.

Plays are like trees, which will not grow without nourishment; but like mushrooms, they shoot up spontaneously, as it were, in a rich soil. — FIELDING.

Plays, like motor-engines, must be running when one locates trouble. — CHANNING POLLOCK.

Pleasant.

About as pleasant as to have an umbrella jammed down your throat — and opened there — and pulled out open, so that the broken ribs lacerate your lungs, and beaten over the head with the handle. — DON MARQUIS.

Pleasures.

Pleasures are much like mushrooms. The right kind are fine, but you have to be on the lookout for toadstools. — BOSTON TRANSCRIPT, May 21, 1921.

Plenty.

Plenty as frogs in a Dutch inundation. — THOMAS MOORE.

Pliable.

Pliable as cloth. — EUGENE SUE.

Plunge.

Plunges like a hangman's trap. — ANON.

Poets.

Poets are like birds; they sing best when they are half starved. — HORACE WALPOLE.

Poignant.

Poignant as a bell for fire. — WITTER BYNNER.

Poor.

Poor as the family that could wash its dishes with a tear. — ANON.

Popular.

About as popular as a mouse at a suffragette meeting. — ANON.

Popular as a safety razor at a darkey picnic. — ROBERT H. DAVIS.

Popular as a munition stock before peace talk. — LAWRENCE GILMAN.

Popular, like reform. — ARTHUR B. REEVES.

Possible.

No more possible than the development of an orchid in the middle of a crowded street. — W. H. MALLOCK.

Practical.

Practical as a razor. — COSMO HAMILTON.

Praising.

The practice of praising children is like opium . . . because it's laudanum. — PUNCH, 1853.

Preacher.

A preacher that will speak everything that comes into his mind is like a maid that goes to market, and, meeting another maid, makes a stand, and they hold together a goose-market. — MARTIN LUTHER.

Precious.

Precious as a bundle of love letters in a breach of promise case. — ARTHUR BAER.

Precise.

Precise, like rooms which we enter and leave, not those in which we settle and dwell. — BULWER-LYTTON.

Presbyterianism.

Presbyterianism without infant damnation would be like the dog on the train that couldn't be identified because it has lost its tag. — MARK TWAIN.

Pride.

Pride, like all ringmasters in all circuses, is always in evening dress and wears a high hat, even in the morning. — BENJAMIN DE CASSERES.

Prim.

Prim as a peeled pine pole. — ANON.

Principles.

Principles are like mountains ; they rise very near heaven, but when they stand in our way, we drive a tunnel through them. — CARDINAL RAMPOLLA.

Privacy.

About as much privacy as a statue in a park. — ANON.

No more privacy than a traffic cop. — IBID.

Probable.

About as probable as that Napoleon the Third should have forbidden the polka. — HILAIRE BELLOC.

Profound.

Profound and illuminating as the discovery that children are born, not hatched. — LITTLE REVIEW, December, 1919.

Profusion.

Comets are scattered through the heavens with as much profusion as fishes in the ocean. — JOHANN KEPLER.

Prologue.

Prologues precede the piece in mournful verse,

As undertakers walk before the hearse.
— DAVID GARRICK.

Prominent.

Prominent, like a fried egg stain on a full dress vest. — ARTHUR BAER.

Promotes.

It promotes conviviality, just as a pack of foxhounds promotes sport. — R. S. SURTEES.

Prose.

Prose is like music, — every word, every letter must be placed for sound, color, nuance. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Prosperity.

Prosperity is like perfume, it often makes the head ache. — DUCHESS OF NEWCASTLE.

Prosperitie and abundance are like long garments to a man that walkes ; they will trip up his heales if he take not heed. — THOMAS SHELTON'S "A CENTURIE OF SIMILES," 1640.

Proud.

Proud as a hen that got a duck for a chicken. — DION BOUCICAULT.

Jerry in his new clothes is as proud as a whitewashed pig. — P. W. JOYCE.

Prudent.

A prudent man is like a pin, — his head prevents him from going too far. — ANON.

Publishing.

Publishing a book of verse is like dropping a rose leaf down the Grand Cañon of the Colorado and waiting to hear the echo. — DON MARQUIS.

Puffed.

His lordship [Lord Norbury, 1745-1831] it should be noted, always puffed like an asthmatic locomotive, before uttering a joke. — R. SHELTON MACKENZIE.

Punctually.

Punctually, as the Tax gatherer. — PUNCH, 1862.

Punctually as a cuckoo in a Swiss clock. — EDITH WHARTON.

Pure.

Pure as a bishop's bathroom. — ANON.

Pure as a naked flame. — SARA TEASDALE.

Puzzled.

Puzzled like a roach trying to crawl downstairs on an escalator. — ARTHUR BAER.

QQuake.

Quake like mice when the cat is mentioned. — BALZAC.

Quickly.

Quickly as the effervescence on a bottle of ginger beer. — HENRY VAN DYKE.

Quiet.

Quiet as an eel swimming in oil. — ARTHUR BAER.

Quiet as far-away waters. — SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN.

Quiet as a street of tombs in a buried city. — JOHN RUSKIN.

Quiet as a Sunday morning in an Ohio village. — BRAND WHITLOCK.

Quietly.

Quietly as a stout lady accumulates her fat — by the daily satisfaction of her appetite. — GILBERT HAMERTON.

Quiver.

Quivered like a sob. — CONRAD AIKEN.

Quivering like a taxicab. — ANON.

Quivered like a dish of marmalade in an earthquake. — ARTHUR BAER.

Quiver like a naked Russian in the snow. — SIR WILLIAM DAVENANT.

Racked.

Racked his ears like an explosion of steam-whistles. — ANON.

Radiant.

Radiant as a tiara of celestial diamonds. — VICTOR HUGO.

Radiant as ice. — EVELYN SCOTT.

Ragged.

Ragged as a scarecrow. — THOMAS HEYWOOD.

Ran.

He ran the bases as if he were hauling William H. Taft in a rickshaw. — HEYWOOD BROWN.

Rang.

Rang like a golden jewel down a golden stair. — SYDNEY DOBELL.

Rapid.

Rapid as the fragmentary images of the cinema. — RÉMY DE GOURMONT.

Rapid as the wing of time. — JOHN HAMILTON.

Rare.

Rare as holy water in an Orange lodge. — ANON.

Rare as snowflakes in a well-regulated August. — IBID.

Rare as the rose in December, a bird in an arctic clime. — IBID.

Rare, as a mind that's chaste. — FITZ-GREENE HALLECK.

Rare in life as black lightning on a blue sky. — JAMES G. HUNEKER.

Rare as a fat man in a clothing advertisement. — GEORGE S. KAUFMAN.

Rare as humility in a grizzly bear. — JULIAN RALPH.

Rattle.

Rattle like a taxicab. — ANON.

Rattling like a crockery shop in a earthquake. — ARTHUR BAER.

Rattled like dried scales. — GEORGE CRUIKSHANK'S "TABLE-BOOK," 1845.

Raved.

Raved like a ravished virgin. — BAUDELAIRE.

Ravishing.

Ravishing as the returning sun to Greenland. — FIELDING.

Ravishing like the music of the spheres. — LODOWICK CARLELL.

Read.

A person who cannot read is something like a blind man walking through a pleasant meadow; where there are flowers and fruit trees; there are many pleasant things and many wise and good things printed in books, but we cannot get them unless we read. — TIMOTHY DWIGHT.

Readers.

The first class of readers may be compared to an hourglass, their reading being as the sand; it runs in and runs out, and leaves not a vestige behind. A second class resembles a sponge, which imbibes everything, and returns it in nearly the same state, only a little dirtier. A third class is like a jelly-bag, which allows all that is pure to pass away, and retains only the refuse and dregs. The fourth class may be compared to the slave of Golconda, who, casting aside all that is worthless, preserves only the pure gems. — S. T. COLERIDGE.

Reading.

Reading is to the mind what exercise is to the body. As by the one, health is preserved, strengthened and invigorated; by the other, virtue, which is the health of the mind, is kept alive, cherished and confirmed. But as exercise becomes tedious and painful, when we make use of it only as a means of health, so reading is apt to grow uneasy and burdensome, when we apply ourselves to it only for our improvement in virtue. For this reason, the virtue which we gather from a fable, or an allegory, is like the health we get from hunting; as we are engaged in an agreeable pursuit that draws us on with pleasure, and makes us insensible of the fatigues that accompany it. — SIR RICHARD STEELE.

Reading — continued.

Reading Milton is like dining off gold plate in a company of kings; very splendid, very ceremonious, and not a little appalling. — ALEXANDER SMITH.

Real.

Real as hunger. — ANON.

Real as George Washington and Valley Forge. — ALICE BROWN.

Realistic.

Realistic as a cinematogram. — WILLIAM ARCHER.

Red.

Red as a radish. — ANON.

Red as Robin's breast. — IBID.

Red as Rob Roy's beard. — DR. JOHN BROWN.

Red as Charlemagne's knightly blood. — E. B. BROWNING.

It is red as the flame where it springs from the molten metal, as red as the beating heart of a Red Indian, as the famous sport coat of little Miss R. Riding Hood, as a red herring's tongue, as a clown's nose, as Mme. Bernhardt's painted finger nails. — HOWARD BRADY MULLIN.

Red as the face of shame. — JOHN O'KEEFFE.

Red as an auction flag. — BERT LESTON TAYLOR.

Refused.

Being refused by a woman is like being turned down in an election; the unlucky candidate's first sensation is soreness, but after that he spends years of amiable amusement in watching the struggles of the successful party. — MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL.

Regular.

Regular as the moon makes the tides. — HENRY JAMES.

Regularly.

Regularly as the clock strikes nine in the morning. — MARK TWAIN.

Relatives.

Poor relatives, that have been flung aside, often turn up and prove of value when least expected — like banknotes that have been found, before now, in a waste-paper basket. — PUNCH, 1866.

Reliable.

Reliable as a plain wife's smile. — ANON.

Reliable as a salary. — FRANK R. STOCKTON.

Religion.

Religion is like love; it plays the devil with clear thinking. — ROSE MACAULAY.

Some people are afraid of anything like joy in religion . . . Their religion is something like the stars, very high, and very clear, but very cold. — ROBERT MURRAY MCCHEYNE.

Alteration of religion is dangerous, because we know not where it will stay. 'Tis like a millstone that lies upon the top of a pair of stairs: 'tis hard to remove it, but if once it be thrust off the first stair, it never stays till it comes to the bottom. — JOHN SELDEN.

Religion is like the breath of heaven; if it goes abroad into the open air, it scatters and dissolves. — JEREMY TAYLOR.

Remorseless.

Remorseless as a mad Pasha. — ANON.

Remorseless as an alarm-clock. — ANON.

Remote.

Remote as a nightmare. — WALTER DE LA MARE.

Rend.

Rend and tear like an arrant Turk. — "STRANGE METAMORPHOSES OF MAN," 1634.

Renews.

Renews itself like a classic. — PERCY HAMMOND.

Repentance without amendment is like continually pumping without mending the leak. — ANON.

Repentant.

Repentant as Magdalen. — FRANCIS MERES.

Reproachful.

Reproachful as a curate's eye. — OSBERT SITWELL.

Reputation.

The reputation of a woman is like that chaste flower amaranthus, which is no sooner touched but withers. — CHRISTOPHER BULLOCK.

A good reputation is like the cypress ; once cut, it never puts forth leaf again. — FRANCESCO GUICCIARDINI.

Resembled.

Resembled each other like two drops of water. — DUKE OF SAINT SIMON.

Fedor resembled his father as a fawn resembles a boa-constrictor. — EDGAR SALTUS.

Resembles.

Clara Morris resembles Joe Jefferson to the same extent that an April thunder storm resembles a pastoral symphony. — NYM CRINKLE.

Reserved.

Reserved ladies are like ice, Egad no sooner begin to soften when they melt. — HANNAH COWLEY.

Resolutions.

Sudden resolutions, like the sudden rise of the mercury in the barometer, indicate little else than the changeableness of the weather. — JULIUS CHARLES HARE.

Resonant.

Resonant as a bugle-note. — DOROTHY CANFIELD.

Respect.

About as much respect for women as a tomcat has for a marriage license. — ANON.

Respond.

Could Respond to a Dinner Invitation like a Fireman going to a Fire. — GEORGE ADE.

Restful.

Restful as the Firing Line. — GEORGE ADE.

Restful as a bowling alley. — ANON.

Restful as a Rembrandt background. — IBID.

Restless as a bluebottle fly on a warm summer's day. — ANON.

Restless as a man with the itch. — IBID.

Restless as sharp desire. — ARTHUR C. BENSON.

He [E. A. Sothern] is wiry ; elastic, as restless as a bundle of nerves under galvanic influence. — T. EDGAR PEMBERTON.

Restrain.

Restrain as in a corset. — EDMOND ROSTAND.

Retreat.

This force retreated through Germany, as a man might retreat who had ventured into a cageful of drugged lions and found that the effects of the drug were evaporating. — H. G. WELLS.

Rhythmical.

Rhythmical as a pianola. — PERCY HAMMOND.

Rich.

Rich as a munition maker. — ANON.

Ridiculous.

Ridiculous as any theatrical wigs in the world. — DICKENS.

It would be as ridiculous as the owl pairing with the sprightly lark. — WILLIAM HEARD.

Ridiculous as the British public in one of its periodical fits of morality. — T. B. MACAULAY.

Right.

The right of every man to judge on every question for himself is like the right of every man who possesses a balance at his bankers to require its immediate payment in sovereigns. — ARTHUR JAMES BALFOUR.

Ripened.

For love and charity ripened in that nature [Charles Lamb] as peaches ripen on the wall that fronts the sun. — ALEXANDER SMITH.

Risque.

About as risqué as a bed in a hospital. — GEORGE JEAN NATHAN.

Roared.

Roared, as if stabbed. — STEPHEN CRANE.

Roar like an army of Fenians. — BRICK POMEROY.

Romantic.

About as romantic as the Chicago stockyards. — WILL IRWIN.

Rooms.

A flat with rooms like a string of buttons. — CLYDE FITCH.

Scream like a child born with neuralgia. — ANON.

Scream like the devil's baby. — IBID.

Screaming like an impaled madman. — MARK TWAIN.

Sea.

Of all the things I have ever seen, only the sea is like a human being; the sky is not, nor the earth. But the sea is always moving; always something deep in itself is stirring it. It never rests; it is always wanting, wanting, wanting. It hurries on; and then it creeps back slowly without having reached, moaning. It is always asking a question, and it never gets the answer. — OLIVE SCHREINER.

Searching.

Searching as the Röntgen ray. — AUGUSTA EVANS WILSON.

Stingy as the man who crawled under the fence to save the wear and tear on the hinges. — ANON.

Stir.

A little love stirs up my heart, as tides stir up the ocean. — CHARLES GODFREY LELAND.

Stir that town up like the first night of a Billy Sunday season. — JOHN PETER TOOHEY.

Stirring.

Stirring as the cry of fox hounds in chase. — ANON.

Stomach.

The stomach is like a crucible, for it has a chemical kind of virtue to transmute one body into another, to transubstantiate fish and fruits into flesh within and about us. — JAMES HOWELL.

Stupid as oysters. — AUGUST E. F. VON KOTZEBUE.

Stutters.

Stutters like a Ford starter. — ARTHUR BAER.

Style.

To praise the style of an author more than his thoughts, is like commending a woman for her dress more than for her person; style, like dress, should be appropriate, and not detract attention from what it was meant to adorn. — LADY BLESSINGTON.

She had style — like the prose of Thèophile Gautier, the Venus of Milo, the Petit Trianon. — WILLIAM J. LOCKE.

No more style, — literary style, — than my Chinaman's laundry-bill. — CHARLES FREDERIC NIRDLINGER.

The energetic style will resemble an impetuous torrent, which carries away rocks, disdains a bridge, and makes banks for itself; it will impel the judge, even though he strive against it, whithersoever it pleases, and oblige him to take the course into which it hurries him. — QUINTILIAN (WATSON).

Style in painting is the same as in writing, — a power over materials, whether words or colors, by which conceptions or sentiments are conveyed. — SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS.

Subsided.

Subsided like a water-tap turned off. — KENNETH GRAHAME.

Virtue.

Virtue is like an enemy avoided. — DANTE.

Virtue, like a dowerless beauty, has more admirers than followers. — LADY BLESSINGTON.

Virtue within a woman's heart

By nature's hand is rammed in,
There must be kept by steady art,
Like water when it's dammed in ;
But if once broken
Past all revoking,

Virtue flies off in a minute ;

Like a river left,
Of waters bereft,
Each man may venture in.

— FIELDING.

A virtue is like a city set upon a hill, it cannot be hid. — ROBERT HICHENS.

Virtue, like hops, must wait the time of the market, or virtue itself becomes a very drug. — PUNCH, 1843.

The virtue of a wife is like the merit of a poet, never justly valued until after death. — SIR RICHARD STEELE.

Woman is like a gun. Her range is limited. But in the home she hits a man like ten thousands of brick. — G. K. CHESTERTON.

Women are very like religion ; we must take them on faith, or go without. — F. MARION CRAWFORD.

Women, like quicksilver, are never fixed till they are dead. . . . Egad, they are more like gold, I think ; for they are never fixed but by dross. — FIELDING.

A white horse and a beautiful woman are akin, and two troublesome things to manage : the first is difficult to be kept clean ; and the second, honest. — SAMUEL FOOTE.

Woman — continued.

A woman who won't flatter is like a piano that won't play. It may be an imposing piece of furniture, but it isn't a piano. — ELLEN T. FOWLER.

A big woman . . . like a cantaloupe melon. — GILBERT FRANKAU.

Women are like cats. If you move toward them they run away, but if you sit there and say, "Puss, puss, puss," and put a saucer of milk on the floor, in due course they will be moved by curiosity to come and see what there is in the saucer. Then, click! you've got the cat by the back of the neck, so that it can't scratch you. When the cat has struggled enough and discovered that she can't get away, and been tickled behind the ear, she'll sit on your lap and purr. And then, ah, then you no longer need say, "Puss, puss, puss!" You can say, "You damn cat!" and she'll go on sitting there, purring. — W. L. GEORGE.

Women are like Bradshaw — a guide and a puzzle. — SYDNEY GRUNDY.

Cantaloupes are jest like women — we kin themp 'em, an' lift 'em, an' squeeze 'em, but we can't tell a blamed thing about 'em till it's too late. — ABE MARTIN.

Women are just like elephants t' me. I like t' look at 'em, but I wouldn't want one. — IBID.

Women, . . . are like the sawdust put in cases containing chinaware ; it is counted for naught, and still, without it, everything would be wrecked. — MADAME NECKER.

A woman, like the Koh-i-noor,
Mounts to the price that's put on her.
— COVENTRY PATMORE.

Woman's like a looking glass
That when its owner goes,
Will flatter any other face
As much as it doth his.

— LOPE DE VEGA.

It's kindness that brings everything that's best out of us women. We're terribly like sliced pineapple in that respect : give us just a sprinkling of sugar, and out come all the juices. — ARTHUR STRINGER.

Words.

His words tumbling, crashing, slithering over each other like coals down a steel chute. — FANNIE HURST.

Slowly pronouncing and delivering his words like a man pitching quoits. —
D. H. LAWRENCE.

Their words, like stage processions,
stalk along. — ROBERT LLOYD.

Arranging words like the parts of a tessellated pavement, or mosaic work.
— GAIVS LUCILIUS (WATSON).

Long words, like long dresses, frequently hide something wrong about the understanding. — PUNCH, 1853.

The words are like a cloud of winged snakes. — SHELLEY.

Words are like money ; and when the current value of them is generally understood, no man is cheated by them. — SIR RICHARD STEELE.

Her words fell like rain on a waterproof umbrella ; they made a noise, but they could not reach the head which they seemed destined to deluge. — FRANCES TROLLOPE.

Words are, like money, a medium of exchange, and the sureness with which they can be used varies not only with the character of the coins themselves, but also with the character of the things they buy, and that of the men who tender and receive them. — ALLEN UPWARD.

World.

The world is a great book, of which they that never stir from home read only a page. — SAINT AUGUSTINE.

The face of the world looks as though it had shaved itself with a broken beer bottle while standing on a barrel in a cyclone. — BENJAMIN DE CASSERES.

The world is like an inn : a rider comes at night

Is fed and lodged, and then jogs on at morning light.

— WISDOM OF THE BRAHMIN.

The world is like a beautiful book, but of little use to him who cannot read it. — CARLO GOLDONI.

The world is like an old coquette, who conceals her age. — VOLTAIRE.

Worries.

Worries as a hen under a shower bath. — ARTHUR BAER.

Wrinkle.

Wrinkled like a mud-bank drying in the sun. — ANON.

Her face was wrinkled like a roll-top desk. — ARTHUR BAER.

Wrinkled like a newly plowed field. — JULES VERNE.

Writer.

An unpractised writer will sometimes send a beautiful and powerful phrase jostling along in the midst of a clumsy sentence — like a crowned king escorted by a mob. — SIR WALTER RALEIGH, 1860-1922.

Writhing.

I could see the man's very soul writhing in his body like an impaled worm. — JOSEPH CONRAD.

Writing.

Dislocated writing that looks like a Profile Drawing of the Sierra Nevadas. — GEORGE ADE.

Writing is like pulling the trigger of a gun : if you are not loaded, nothing happens. — HENRY SEIDEL CANBY.

She confesses [George Sand] that her writing was like the turning on of a water-tap, the stream always flowed, a literary hydrant. — JAMES G. HUNCKER.

Method in writing is like ceremony in living too often us'd to supply the want of better things. — THOMAS KILLIGREW.

I find by experience that writing is like building ; wherein the undertaker, to supply some defect or serve some convenience which at first he saw not, is usually forced to exceed his first model and proposal, and many times to double the charge and expense of it. — JOHN SCOTT.

Wrong.

Wrong as two left shoes. — ARTHUR BAER.

You thought wrong, like Hob's hog (who fancied that the butcher who came to kill him had brought his breakfast). — A. B. EVANS'S "PROVERBS," 1848.

YYacht.

A yacht like a great moth with folded wings. — WILLIAM MCFEE.

Yawn.

Yawned like a menagerie lion. — GELETT BURGESS.

Yellow.

Yellow . . . like a bilious brunette.
— DICKENS.

Yellow as the Missouri river. —
WILLIAM SLAVENS McNUTT.

Young.

Young as the slip of the new moon.
— GEORGE MEREDITH.

Young as our streams after rain. —
EDWARD THOMAS.

Youth.

At almost every step in life we meet with young men from whom we anticipate wonderful things, but of whom, after careful inquiry, we never hear another word; like certain chintzes, calicoes, and gingham, they show finely in their first newness, but cannot stand the sun and rain, and assume a very sober aspect after washing day. — NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

ZZeal

Zeal without knowledge is like a fire without a grate to contain it, like a sword without a hilt to wield it by, like a high-bred horse without a bridle to guide him; zeal without knowledge speaks without thinking, acts without planning, seeks to accomplish a good end without the adoption of becoming means; it goes about seeking to establish its own righteousness, not having submitted to the righteousness of God. — JOHN BATE.

As a cancer is to a man's body, so is party zeal to his soul. — WILLIAM SCOTT DOWNEY'S "PROVERBS," 1854.

Zeal without judgment is like gunpowder in the hands of a child. — BEN JONSON.

Zeal without knowledge is like expedition to a man in the dark. — JOHN NEWTON.

Zigzag.

Zigzag like a snipe. — ANON.

Zigzagged like a lady's vandyked petticoat. — R. S. SURTEES.
